

fire is churned with a stick." It is thus clear that the Aryan Aryans did not merely worship the natural phenomena, but the Energy underlying them all, which was denominated by various names, such as, Suryya, Indra, etc. To them either Indra only, or Agni, Suryya, or all of them, together with the other Powers of Nature, did not complete the conception of God. No one was any of them regarded by them as the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, Omniscient and Omnipotent. They represented merely the various Energies of the Powerful Providence manifested to humanity through these natural phenomena.

The Rig-veda throws a considerable light upon the social and political condition of the then Hindus. The following observations, made by that eminent and erudite scholar Professor H. H. Wilson, will give a sufficient idea to the reader.

"It has been a favourite notion of scholars, that the Hindus, at the period of the hymns, were a nomadic opinion seems to rest upon citations for food and for sacrifices found in the hymns, and is positive statements. That the Hindus were nomads, is evident from the repeated allusions to fixed abodes, to fixed villages, and towns; and we can scarcely suppose them to have been in this respect behind their Aryan enemies, the overthrow of whose numerous cities is so often spoken of. A pastoral people they have been to some extent; but they were, also, perhaps, in a still greater degree, an agricultural people, as is evidenced by their supplications for abundance of the fruits of the earth, and by the mention of agricultural products, particularly barley. They were a manufacturing people, and their occupations of weaving, the labours of the carpenter, and the fabrication of golden and of iron mail, are alluded to; and, what is more remarkable, they were a maritime and mercantile people.

"Not only are the Sakas familiar with the ocean and its phenomena, but we have merchants described as pressing earnestly on board ship, for the sake of gain; and we have a naval expedition against a foreign island, or continent (dvīpa), frustrated by a shipwreck. They must, also, have made some advance in astronomical computation, as the adoption of an intercalary month, for the purpose of adjusting the solar and lunar years to each other, is made mention of. Civilization must have therefore made considerable progress; and the Hindus must have spread to the seacoast, possibly long the Sindhu or Indus, into Cutch and Guzerat. Before they could have engaged in navigation and commerce. That they had extended themselves from a more northern site, or that they were a northern race is rendered probable from the peculiar expression used more than one occasion, in soliciting long life—where the worshipper asks for a hundred winters (himas)—a boon not likely to have been desired by the natives of a warm climate. They appear, also, to have been a fair-complexioned people, at least comparatively foreign invaders of India, as it is said that he divided the fields among his white-complexioned friends after destroying the indigenous barbarian race—such there can be little doubt we are to understand the expression Dasyu, which so often recurs, and is often defined to signify one who not only sacrifice made by the "Opulent Rathávatí." The presence of women in public was recognised in the Vedic Age.

There was no early marriage in the Vedic Age, and maidens, when of proper age and education, used to take husbands after their hearts. It is to the accomplishments and character of a husband that they always looked, and the son of a Rishi was, always, considered a desirable match for the daughter of a Rájá. Monogamy was practised in the Vedic Period and women had a recognized position of their own. Husbands and wives, as a married pair, used to perform sacrifices conjointly. The wife was a necessary factor, in a household, in carrying on sacrifices, preserving sacred fire and performing other duties of life. Women used to receive education and such was the extent of this education that some of them were the authoresses of Hymns. One of them is Viswavará ; she was the authoress of the 125th Song of the Fifth Chapter of the Rig-véda which consists of twenty-eight most beautiful stanzas.

Ushas, the authoress of the 125th Song in the Rig-véda, by Viswavará, the authoress of the 125th Song in the Rig-véda. The hymn contains the conception of God. The great Commentaries have said that they are the exercises the function of. She lived the life of an ascetic which is in favour of study and meditation. She was the member of a caste, as authoress of the hymn of the military caste : 'If you Indra and Agni, ever delighted in a Bráhmaṇ or a Rájá, then come hither ;' but even this can scarcely be regarded as a hymn. A hymn that occurs in a subsequent part of the Véda has, however, been translated by Mr. Colebrook in which the four castes are specified by name, an usual fable of their origin from Brahmá alluded to.

Even from a careful perusal of this hymn and the observation of the practices of the Vedic people as recorded in the hymns we find that they were divided into four classes after their respective callings. The promulgator of the system had, evidently, in view the organization of the various classes of people with reference to their trades and professions. But we have no such proof, in the whole range of the Vedic literature, as prohibits one class from taking food with another. Besides we have no proof against inter-marriages—but, on the other hand, we have overwhelming evidence of Rishis marrying the daughters of the kings. The classification, of the people, however, did not at all depend on their birth but upon their character and attainments. We have allusions of Aśhatriyās attaining to the dignity of a Brāhmaṇa on account of their spiritual attainments and many of them were authors of several Upanishads. The system, as it appears, was evidently instituted to divide the functions of the respective classes so that the great work, of conquering the country and establishing a good and just government which the Aryans took up, might go on without any interruption.

The condition of women in India, during the Vedic Age, was immensely superior to what we find now. They were not required to remain behind a curtain, a loathsome practice, which is evidently an outcome of the Mahomedan Rule, for it finds only in Bengal, North-Western Provinces and the Punjāb where the Mahomedan rule was most dominant, whereas their sisters of Madras and Bombay enjoy, even now, the sweet air of freedom. Vedic Hymns clearly prove that women, in that Age, used to come out before the public. The daughter and her mother were present at the public the language of the Sūktās, of the first Ashṭaka at least, is by no means explicit. Whenever collectively alluded to, mankind are said to be distinguished into five sorts, or classes, or, literally, five men, or beings (pancha kshitayah). The Commentator explains this term to denote the four castes, Brāhmaṇ, Kshatriya, Vais'ya and Sūdra, and the barbarian, or Nishada; but Sáyana, of course, expresses the received impressions of his own age. We do not meet with the denomination Kshatriya or Sūdra in any Text of the First Book, nor with that of Vais'ya; for Vis', which does occur, is there a synonym of man in general. Brāhmaṇ is met with, but in what sense is questionable. In the neuter form Brahma, it usually implies prayer or praise, or sacrificial food, or, in one place, preservation; in its masculine form Brahmá, it occurs as the praiser or reciter of the hymn, or, as the particular priest, so denominated, who presides over the ceremonial of a sacrifice; and in neither case does it necessarily imply a Brāhmaṇa by caste; for that the officiating priest-

perform religious rites, but attempts to disturb them, and harass their performers: the latter are the A'ryyas, the A'ryya, or respectable, or Hindu. . . . Arian race. Dasyu, in later language, signifies a thief, a robber, and A'ryya a wealthy or respectable man. But the two terms are constantly used in the Text of the Véda as contrasted with each other, and as expressions of religious and political antagonists, requiring, therefore, no violence of conjecture to identify the Dasyus with the indigenous tribes of India refusing to adopt the ceremonial of the A'ryyas, a more civilized, but intrusive, race, and availing themselves of every opportunity to assail them, to carry off their cattle, disturb their rites and impede their progress; to little purpose, it should seem, as the A'ryyas commanded the aid of Indra, before whose thunderbolt the numerous cities, or hamlets of the Dasyus were swept away.

"We have no particular intimation of the political condition of the Hindus, except the specification of a number of names of princes, many of which are peculiar to the Véda, and differ from those of the Purânás: a few are identical, but the nomenclature, evidently, belongs to a period long before the construction of the dynasties of which we find now. our reader an idea of some of the ideal Vedic women and of the extent of their education.

It is not easy to determine accurately the Age of Vedic Composition. Many European Scholars have exhausted, with no useful result, their ingenuity on this question. Professor Max-Müller maintains that Samskrit-speaking Aryans lived in India about at least 3,000 B.C. This he proves from the mention of Sindhu, a vegetable fibre, in the list of the vegetable-clothing made for the library of Assur-bam-pal in Babylonia. This vegetable fibre, which is cotton, is not mentioned in the Vedic Hymns, or the Bráhmaṇās, but in the Sūtrās.

According to him, however, there are three literary periods of the Vedic Age, viz., that of the Hymns, that of the Bráhmaṇās, and that of the Sūtrās. He then attempts to fix dates for these Periods. The only historical date, on which we can rely is that of the rise of Buddhism. This, according to the information contained in the Buddhist Cannon, is about 500 B.C. Buddhism is really the Protestantism of India, and is, decidedly, a movement against the rise of the Bráhmaṇās. The word Upanishad is, also, mentioned in the Cannon of the Southern Buddhists. This fact goes to prove that Buddhism pre-supposes the Period of the Bráhmaṇās. Thus the learned Professor attempts to build up the Vedic Age beginning with the rise of Buddhism. His conclusion is, in his own words, thus summed up:—"If, then, we place the rise of Buddhism between 500 and 600 B.C., and assign, provisionally, 200 years to the Sūtra-Period, another 200 years to the Bráhmaṇa-Period, we should arrive at about 1,000 B.C., as the date when the collection of the ten books of the ancient hymns must have taken place." But he gives no reason which justifies him to give 200 years to each Period. If this duration of several Periods be a child of imagination, we may, as well, extend it to 500 or 1,000 years.

The views, of other Western Scholars, tally more or less with that of Professor MaxMüller. We can, very well understand the difficulties under which they labour in ascertaining the date of the composition of the Vedic Hymns.

Attempts have also been made to ascertain the date of Vedic Hymns from Astronomical Calculations. Professor Tilak, of Bombay, has written a learned treatise on the Antiquity of the Védās in which he has made use of astronomical observations for ascertaining the Vedic Age. According to him, the marking of the changes, in the position of heavenly bodies, "is the best measurement of time for determining the periods of antiquity, only if we have reliable records about the position of heavenly bodies in early days ; fortunately, such records of the time, when the Hellenic, the Iranian, and the Indian, Aryans lived together, have been preserved for us in the Rig-véda, and, with the help of Greek and Parsi traditions, we can now decipher these records."

By various internal evidence and other researches he has proved that "the oldest Vedic Calendar, like the oldest Hymn, was sacrificial ; and that the sacrifice or the year commenced with Aditi at the vernal equinox in or near Punarvasu. The phase of the Moon, the seasons and the Ayanās further guided the ancient A'ryas in measuring time for sacrificial purposes. The asterism of Abhijit marked the approach of Vishuvau or the central day, while Punarvasu, which soon after came to be called Jamākau, indicated the beginning of the year. Sometime after this and before the vernal equinox had receded to Orío the lunar months, and tithis or days appear to have come in use; and, in fact, the whole Calendar seems to have been re-arranged, the year being made to commence from the winter solistice in the Chitrâ Full-Moon. But this did not alter the sacrificial system, which, so far as the procedure is concerned, still continues to be what it was in the oldest day."

The oldest Period, therefore, according to him, in the Aryan Civilization, "may be called the Aditi, or the pre-Orion-Period, and we may, roughly, assign 6,000-4,000 B.C., as its limits. It was a period when the finished hymns do not seem to have been known, and half-prose and half-poetical Nivids, or sacrificial formulæ, were probably in use."

The next is the Orion-Period, "which, roughly speaking, extended from 4,000 to 5,000 B.C., from the time when the vernal equinox was in the asterism of A'drá to the time when it receded to the asterism of Krittikás. This is the most important period in the history of the Aryan Civilization. A good many Suktas, in the Rig-véda, were sung at the time, and several legends were either formed anew or developed from the older ones. This was pre-eminently the Period of Hymns."

"The Third, or the Krittikâ-Period commences with the vernal equinox in the asterism of the Krittikás and extends up to the period recorded in the Védānga Jyotisha, that is, from 2500 B.C., to 1400 B.C. It was the Period of Taittiriya Sāmhita and several of the Brāhmaṇas. The hymns of the Rig-véda had, already, become antique and unintelligible by this time, and the Brahmavādins indulged in speculations, often too free, about the real meaning of those hymns and legends.

compiled into systematic books and attempts made to ascertain the meanings of the oldest hymns and formulæ."

"The Birth, and the Last, Period, of the old Sanskrit Literature extends from 1400 B.C., to 500 B.C., or the birth and rise of Buddhism. It was the Period of the birth and philosophical systems."

Thus we see that the terminus of the Vedic Age is placed about 500 B.C., the birth and rise of Buddhism. From the above results it is evident that the Vedic Hymns were composed in the Period extending from 4000 to 2500 B.C. From internal evidence, in the Rig-véda, it is seen that the ancient Hindu Civilization reached its zenith during this Period. It must have taken a considerable time, not less than one thousand, or two thousand, years, for a civilization to attain to such a maturity as is seen in the Rig-véda. Besides, a literature cannot grow so very antique as to require attempts of the learned writers to explain it within a short period of two hundred years. The Bráhmaṇás and the Upanishadás are, undoubtedly, attempts to decipher the rituals and the theosophy of the Védás.

Although, therefore, the Vedic Age is more a matter of speculation, yet the birth, of the Hymns of the Rig-véda must have been very early, decidedly earlier than 10,000 B.C. And it is not improbable, as proved by Professor Tilak, that they must have been composed about 4,000 B.C. Two hundred years is too short a period for a literature to pass through such stages.

The Samhitá, of the First Véda, contains Mantrás or prayers, which for the most part are encomiastic, as the name of the Rig-véda implies. This collection is divided into eight parts (Ashtaka), each of which is subdivided into as many lectures (Adhyāya). Another mode of division, also, runs through the volume, distinguishing ten books (Maṇḍala) which are, again, sub-divided into more than a hundred chapters (Anuvāka) and comprise a thousand hymns or invocations (Sūkta.) A further sub-division, of more than two thousand sections (Varga), common to both methods: and the whole contains above ten thousand verses, or rather stanzas, of various measures.

On examining this voluminous compilation, a systematic arrangement is readily perceived. Successive chapters, even entire books, comprise hymns of a single author; invocations, too, addressed to the same Deities, hymns relating to like subjects, and prayers intended for similar occasions, are, frequently, classed together.

The Rishi, or saint of a Mantra, is defined both in the Index of the Rīg-vēda and by the Commentators, as, "he by whom it is spoken;" as, the Dēvatā, or Deity, is "that which is therein mentioned." In the Index to the Vājasaneyi Yajur-vēda, the Rishi is interpreted as "the Seer, or the Rememberer," of the Text and the Dēvatā is said to be "contained in the prayer."

The names, of the respective Authors of each passage, are preserved in the Anukramanī, or Explanatory Table of Contents, which has been handed down with the Vēda itself, and of which the authority is unquestioned. According to this Index, Vis'wāmītra is the Author of all the Hymns contained in the Third Book of the Rīg-vēda; as Bharadvāja is, with rare exceptions, the Composer of those collected in the Sixth Book; Vasishtha in the Seventh; Gritsamada in the Second; Vāmadēva in the Fourth; and Buddha and other descendants of the Fifth. But in the remaining Books of this Véda, the Authors are more various; among these, besides Agastya, Kas'yapa son of Marichi, Aṅgiras, Jamadagni son of Bhrigu, Parásara father of Vyása, Gotama and his son Nodhas, Vṛihaspati, Nárada and other celebrated Indian Saints, the most conspicuous of whom are Kaṇwa and his numerous descendants, Medhátithi, etc.; Madhuchhandas and others among the posterity of Vishwámitra; Sunahsepha son of Ajigarta Kutsa, Hiranyastup, Savya and other descendants of Aṅgiras, besides many other saints among the posterity of the personages above-mentioned.

Several persons of royal birth are mentioned among the Authors of the Hymns which constitute this Véda.

The Deities, invoked, appear, on a cursory inspection of the Véda, to be as various as the Authors of prayers addressed to them; but according to most ancient annotations on the Indian Scriptures, those numerous names, of persons and things, are all resolvable into different titles of three Deities, and, ultimately, of One God.

The places of these three Deities are the earth, the intermediate region and heaven—they are the Fire, Air and the Sun. They are pronounced to be the Deities of the mysterious names severally; and (Prajápati) the lord of creatures is the Deity of them collectively. The syllable OM intends every Deity; it belongs to (Paraméshthi) Him, who dwells in the supreme abode; it appertains to (Brahma) the vast one; to (Déva) God; to (Adhyátmá) the superintending soul. Other Deities, belonging to those several regions, are portions of the three Divinities; for they are, variously, named and described, on account of their different operations: but, in fact, there is only One Deity, the Great Soul. He is called the Sun, for He is the Soul of all beings; (and) that is declared by the Sage, "the Sun is the Soul of (Jagat) what moves and of that which is fixed." Other Deities are portions of Him ; and that is expressly declared by the Text,—“the wise call Fire, Indra, Mitra, and Varuṇa.”

The subject and uses of the prayers contained in the śāda differ more than the Deities by which they are addressed. Every line is replete with allusions to mythology and to the Indian notion of the Divine Nature and of Celestial Spirits. For the innumerable ceremonies to be performed by a householder, and, still more, for those endless rites enjoined for hermits and ascetics, a choice of prayer is offered in every stage of the celebration. It may be sufficient here to observe that Indra or the Firmament, Fire, the Sun, the Moon, Water, Air, the Spirits, the Atmosphère, and the Earth, are the objects, most frequently, addressed ; and the various and repeated sacrifices with Fire and the drinking of the milky-juice of the Moon-Plant, furnish an abundant occasion for numerous prayers adapted to the many stages of those religious rites.

Gáyatrí.
The first Sukta or hymn, is addressed to Agni. The Rishi or the author, is Madhuchhandas, the son of Viswámitra. The metre is Gáyatrí.

V^h WORSHIP by hymns Agni,¹ the high-priest of the sacrifice,² the deity,³ the sacrificial priest who presents oblations (to the deities) and is the possessor of great riches.⁴

2. May Agni, lauded by the ancient⁵ and modern Rishis, conduct the deities hither, (i.e., in this sacrifice).

3 Through Agni, (the worshipper) comes by riches which multiplies daily, which is the source of fame⁶
(and) which secures heroes.⁷

1 Agni or Fire was an object of worship with the ancient Aryáns.

2 Agni is called the Purohita. As a priest performs religious rites as a king for accomplishing all his desired-for objects, so Agni performs duties for the sacrifice.

3 Devam here means endued with feelings of charity and other accomplishments.

4 The word in the Text is ratnadhátama, i.e., holder of jewels.
Figuratively it means here "the multiplier of jewels" in the shape of sacrificial fruits.

5 The ancient Rishis were Bhrigu, Angiras, etc.

6 Yas'asam, i.e., endued with fame for charity, etc.

7 Veeravattamam, i.e., having heroic servants and sons.

Rig-Véda.

O Agni, the sacrifice, a.
, is unimpeded¹ and reaches as in heaven.

5. May Agni, the presenter of oblations, the attainer of success in works,² ever truthful, highly illustrious for many noble deeds, divine, come hither with the celestials.

6. Whatever good, O Agni, thou mayst confer upon the giver of oblations that, indeed, O Angiras, belongs to thee.⁴

7. Bowing unto thee mentally, O Agni, we proach thee daily, both morning and evening.

8. Thee, the radiant, the protector of sacrific

9. Like unto a father to his son, O Agni, be easily accessible unto us; be ever present with us for our well-being.

SUKTA II.

THE Rishi is Madhuchhandas; the metre Gáyatrí. This hymn consists of nine Riks or stanzas. Of these three are addressed to Váyu; three, to Indra and Váyu conjointly; and three, to Mitra and Varuna.

VA'YU, worthy of being seen, (libations of) Soma³ have been dressed, come, drink of them; (and) hear our invocation.

2. Váyu, the eulogists who have prepared the Soma-Juice, who know the sacrifice,⁴ praise thee with encomiastic verses.

3. Váyu, thy speech⁵ describing the qualities of Soma, comes to the giver (of the libation) and to many others (who invite thee) to drink of the Soma-Juice.

⁴ Aharvidah. Sáyana translates it as kratvabhijña the sacrificial rituals. Wilson has translated it as "ing the roots cut off, Soma-Juice is poured season."

4. Indra and Vâyu, these libations are prepared (for you), come hither with food (for us); indeed, the drops of (Soma-Juice) await you both.

5. Indra and Vâyu, living in oblations containing boiled rice,¹ you are aware of these libations; come near quickly.

6. Indra and Vâyu, come near the prepared libation of the sacrificer who presses or extracts out the Soma Juice for these men;² the ceremony will be speedily completed.

7. I invoke Mitra of pure strength and Varuṇa—the destroyer of enemies, (the joint) performers of the act of water-shedding.³

8. Mitra and Varuṇa, augmenters of water,⁴ dispensers of water, you exist in this great sacrifice for bestowing reward (of sacrifice).

9. May Indra and Varuṇa, endued with mental powers, born for doing good to many and the refuge of multitudes, multiply our strength and sacrifice.

re: Narâ, dual of nara, a man. Sâyana explains the word as "gifted dutmanly vigour," and it applies to Vâyu and Indra.

veiled word in the Text is Ghrítâchi. Sâyana explains it as water. Âṅgirâs, a Mitra and Varuṇa are said to cause rain indirectly by evaporation. Īśa—Rāmânâth Saraswatî explains it as ghritâhuti, oblation of clarified butter.

⁴ Sâyana's explanation is particularly applicable here.

Sâyana has explained the word Ritu as water and port sacrifice. Rāmânâth Saraswatî has explained it as Ritu.
Langlois.

SUKTA III.

THE Rishi and metre are the same; of twelve stanzas; three are addressed to the As'wins; three to Indra; three, to the Vis'wadevās; and three' to Saraswatī.

AS'WINS,¹ cherishers of pious deeds, having outstretched hands² (for accepting the oblation), long-armed,³ desire for sacrificial viands.

2. As'wins, of many acts, guides (of devotion), endowed with intellect, accept our eulogistic words with unaverted minds.⁴

3. As'wins, destroyers of diseases,⁵ shorn of falsehood, leaders in the van of heroes,⁶ come to the mixed libations of Soma, extracted and placed on lopped Kus'a-grass.⁷

1 As'wins are the two sons of the Sun, begotten during his metamorphosis as a horse endowed with perpetual youth and beauty. They are known as the celestial physicians and are the heroes of the many Védic and Paurānic legends.

2 Dravatpāni.—Having arms outstretched for receiving oblations offered in a sacrifice.

3 Purubhuta.—It may be translated as both long-armed and "great eaters."

4 Shaviraya—Moving or unobstructed. Dhiya.—Loving mind, i.e., accept our praises with a loving mind unobstructed.

5 Dasra.—Destroyers of enemies or diseases. The latter is preferable, for As'wins are known as the celestial physicians.

6 Rudra-Varttani.—Sáyana translates Rudra as heroes from the root rud,—to weep, i.e., those who make the enemies weep. Varttani means road: hence the compound means,—“they who are in the van of warriors.” Wilson has followed Sáyana. K. M. Bannerjee renders it as “Ye of terrific paths.”

7 Vriktavarhisha.—The sacred Kus'a-grass, having the roots cut off, is spread on the altar and upon it the libation of Soma-Juice is poured out. According to Mr. Stevenson, it is also strewn over the floor of the chamber in which the worship is performed.—Wilson.

4. Indra of variegated splendour, come hither; these libations, ever pure and extracted by fingers, are seeking thee.

5. Indra, drawn by the devotion (of the sacrificer) (and) invoked by the intelligent (priest), come hither and accept the prayers of the priest as he offers the libation

6. Indra, having twany horses, come hither speedily, to accept the prayers (of the priest); in this sacrifice (of extrated Soma-Juice), accept our (proferred) food.

7. Vis'wadévâs,¹ protectors, supporters of men,² granters of (sacrificial) rewards, come to the extracted Soma-Juice of the worshipper.

8. May Vis'wadévâs, the bestowers of rain, come speedily to the libation, as the rays of the sun come diligently to the days.³

9. May Vis'wadévâs, who are exempt from deterioration, omniscient,⁴ shorn of malice, givers of wealth, partake of this sacrifice.

10. May Saraswatí,⁵ the purifier, the giver of

1 The Vis'wadévâs are sometimes vaguely applied to the divinities in general, but they also form a class. Some of their attributes are particularized, connecting them with the elements — Itihon.

"To comprehend all the gods by one common name, to call them Vis'wadévâs, the All-gods and to address prayers and sacrifices to them in their collective capacity."—Max Müller's Origin and Growth of Religion.

2 Charshani-dritah.—The root-meaning, according to Sáyana, would be,—supporters of the cultivators.

3 Usra iva svasarani. We have followed Sáyana. Ramánáth Saraswatí has rendered it as "the kine come to their own fold." This meaning does not appear to be unreasonable, for in many places the word Usra means cow.

4 Ehimayasha.—Sáyana explains it as "those who have obtained knowledge universally."

5 Saraswatí is here mentioned as "The Divinity of Speech."

food, the bestower of wealth in the shape of sacrificial fruits, seek viands in our sacrificial rite.

11. Saraswatí, the inspirer of truthful words, the instructress of the right-minded, has accepted our sacrifice.

12. Saraswatí¹ makes manifest by her deeds a huge river, and (in her own form) enlightens all her undertakings.

ANUVAKA II.

SUKTA I. (IV.)

THE Rishi and metre the same : the hymn is addressed to Indra.

DAY by day we invoke (Indra) the performer of good deeds for our protection, as a milker (does) a good milch-cow for (the purpose of) milking.

2. (Indra) drinker of the Soma-Juice, come to our (daily) rites and drink of the libation; rich as you are, your delight gives kine.²

3. May we recognise thee in the midst of the right-minded who are nearest to thee : come to us; pass us not by to reveal (thyself to others).³

4. Go, worshipper to the intelligent and uninjured Indra who confers the best riches (sons, etc.,) on thy

1 Saraswatí (from Saras, water) a river. The Hindus at that time used to worship a river of that name.

2 I.e., You are endued with riches; when you are pleased, we get kine from you.

3 The Text na no ati khyah is perfectly elliptical. But the Commentator has supplied the complete sense by rendering "neglecting us, do not reveal yourself to others."

friends¹ and ask him about the learned (priest, i.e., myself).²

5. Let our sacrificial priests, serving Indra, sing his praises ; O revilers, depart from hence and every other place.

6. Destroyer of enemies. let our enemies say that we are prosperous ; men³ (friends) (must say so) ; may we live in the felicity (derived from the favour) of Indra.

7. Offer to Indra, the pervader (of every rite of libation), the Soma-Juice that is present (at the three ceremonies), the wealth of the sacrifice, the source of joy to mankind,⁴ which brings about the accomplishment of an act,⁵ the favourite of (that Indra) who confers happiness (on the worshipper).

8. Having drunk, S'atakratu⁶ of this (Soma-Juice) thou hadst killed Vîtras ;⁷ thou defendest (thine devoted) warrior in battle.

9. O S'atakratu,⁸ we offer to thee, powerful in

1 Sakhîbhyâ. —Sâyana explains it as Ritwik or sacrificial priest who is supposed to be the best friend of the worshipper.

2 The Text is elliptical. The sense is :—"Go to Indra and ask him about the fitness of myself who am the learned priest."

3 Kristîyâ.—Sâyana explains it as "men who are friends." The root-meaning is cultivators. Perhaps the word is used for men in general because the Aryâns were cultivators.

4 Nri—Sâyana explains it as "the worshipper and priest."

5 I.e., Religious rite.

6 S'atakratu.—A name of Indra, the performer of a hundred sacrificial rites. Sâyana explains it as vahukarmayukta, either as their performer or their object.

7 The leading Asurâs headed by Vîtra.

8 Sâyana also explains Kratu as prajñâ—knowledge, i.e., "endowed with great wisdom."

bat̐tle, sacrificial viands, O Indra, for the acquirement of wealth.

10. Sing unto that Indra, who is the protector of riches, who is endued with many great accomplishments, the perfecter of good deeds, the friend of the worshipper.

SUKTA II. (V.)

The Deity, Rishi and metre the same.

COME here, (priestly) friends, offering praises ;¹ sit down and sing, again and again, the praises of Indra.

2. When Soma is extracted and poured, sing in a body unto Indra, the subduer of many enemies, the lord of many adorable deities.

3. May he² secure for us manliness (energy), may he secure for us riches, may he confer on us women,³ may he come to us with food.

4. Sing to that Indra, before whose pair of steeds, carrying car in battle, enemies cannot stand.

5. These pure, extracted Soma-Juices, mixed with curds, are poured out for being drunk by the drinker of extracted libations.

6. Indra, performer of good sacrificial rites, for drinking extracted Soma-Juice, for acquiring seniority

1 " Stoma váhasa, literally, bearing praises. Sáyana explains the expression presenting in this rite Trivít, Pañchadas'ti, and others, i.e., collections of laudatory stanzas in the Rig-Véda so denominated."—Wilson.

2 Indra, endued with accomplishments, described in the previous Mantram.

3 Purandhyam.—Sáyana has explained it as, both "women" and "knowledge." Wilson has rendered it as, "knowledge."

amongst the celestials,¹ thou hast suddenly become endued with great energy.

7. Indra, adored by encomiastic hymns, may these pervading (quickly intoxicating) Soma-Juices enter into thee : may they be of good unto thee for the acquirement of superior knowledge.

8. The chants (of the Sāma)² have magnified thee, S'atakratu ; the hymns (of the Rich) have magnified thee : may our eulogies magnify thee.

9. May Indra, the unobstructed protector,³ accept these thousand (sacrificial) viands in which exist all manly properties

10. Indra, the object of eulogistic verses, let not (inimical) men do injury to our persons. Thou art powerful, ward off our destruction (by enemies).

SUKTA III. (VI.)

The Rishi and metre the same. The first three stanzas and the last are addressed to Indra, the rest to the Maruts or Winds.

THE circumstationed (inhabitants of the three worlds),⁴ associate with (Indra), the mighty (Sun), the indestructive

¹ Jyātsīhyam.—Seniority amongst the celestials or the highest place.

³ I.e., who never renounces the work of protection.

⁴ " The Text has only Paritasthushah, those who are standing around ; lokatraya varttinah prānināh, the living beings of the three worlds, is the explanation of the Scholiast,"—Wilson.

2. They (the charioteers) harness to his chariot two beautiful steeds,² placed in different sides, bay-colored, high-spirited and chief-bearing.³

3. Mortals, (Indra as the Sun): rises with burning rays, giving sense to the senseless (in the night) and form to the formless (in darkness).⁴

4. Thereafter, verily those who bear names invoked in holy rites, (the Maruts,)⁵ having seen the rain (about to be engendered), instigated him to resume his embryo condition (in the clouds).

5. In company with the carrying Maruts, the

1 "Of the three first objects, the Text gives only the epithets Vradhna, the mighty, to which Sâyana adds A'ditya, the Sun, Arusha, the non-injuring, to which Fire is supplied and Charan, the moving, an epithet of Wind. The last phrase is complete,—rochante rochanâ dévi. Sâyana's additions are supported by a Brâhmaṇa which explains the epithets as equivalent severally to A'ditya, Agni, and Vâyu. The identification of Indra with the three, implies, the Scholiast says, his supremacy—he is paramâis'waryyayukta."—Wilson.

The meaning of the Rich is really very obscure, and the sense can only be made out by following the explanation given by Sâyana in his Commentary.

2 The horses of Indra are called Hari, green or yellow-coloured.

3 Nrivahasa, literally, men-bearing.

4 "Indra is here, again, identified with the Sun, whose morning rays may be said to re-animate those who have been dead in sleep through the night. There is some difficulty in the construction, for Maryâh, mortals, is plural while Ajayathah is the second person singular of the first preterite. Sâyana is of opinion that the want of concord is a Vâdîk license."—Wilson.

5 Maruts are not named in the Text, but the allusions justify the specification.

traversors of strong places, thou, Indra, hast discovered the cows hidden in the cave.¹

6. The reciters of laudatory verses, desirous of seeking the celestials (the Maruts), laud the powerful (Maruts), illustrious, and conscious of the powers of bestowing riches as they glorify the good counsellor (Indra).

7. May you be seen, ye Maruts, in the company of the fearless Indra, always full of joy and equally brilliant.

8. This sacrifice adores the powerful Indra along with bands (of the Maruts), shorn of all shortcomings, proceeding towards the celestial region and desired (for granting fruits).

9. Therefore, (ye Maruts,) abiding on all sides, come hither, whether from the sky or from the radiant solar sphere;² in this sacrifice (the priest) sings your praises.

10. We invoke Indra, for giving us riches, whether he comes from this earth, the sky, or from the vast firmament.

SUKTA IV. (VII).

The Deity, Rishi and metre the same.

THE chanters (of the Sāma) laud Indra with songs; the reciters of the Rich, with prayers; (the priests of the Yajush), with Texts.³

1 The allusion is to a legend. The Asurās named Pānis stole the cows of the celestials and hid them in a cave which Indra found out with the help of a bitch named Saramā.

2 The region of the Winds is dyu-loka, the celestial region, or antariksha, the region above the sky, or the solar region.

3 The first term Gāthina merely means singers with the Virhat-Sāma. Sāyana explains ṛika as, Mantramās of the Rig-Véda; and varich as, the Texts of the Yajush.

2. Indra, bedecked with all ornaments,¹ the wielder of the thunderbolt, comes with his steeds harnessed at his words,² and mixes with all.

3. Indra, to see a long distance, elevated the Sun in the sky³ and lighted the mountain with its rays.⁴

4. Invincible Indra, with thy invincible protection protect us in battles and in thousand battles abounding in spoils of horses and elephants.

5. We invoke Indra for great affluence, for limited wealth ; (our) ally and wielder of the thunderbolt against (our) enemies.

6. Giver of rain, granter of all desires, set open this cloud. Thou art never uncompliant with our (requests).⁵

7. All the encomiastic verses which are addressed to different deities (givers of different fruits) are due to Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt ; I do not know his fitting praise.

8. As a bull defends a herd of kine, so the shedder of desired-for objects, the powerful lord who never says no to any request, fills men with strength.

² This shows that the horses are well-trained.

³ The world being covered with darkness by Vritra, Indra, in order to dispell it, elevated the Sun in heaven.

⁵ The words in the Text are Asmabhyampratishkrita. Sāyana explains it as, "Thou hast never said (no) to what we have requested thee for."

9. Indra, who alone rules over men, over riches, and over the five (classes) of the dwellers on earth.¹

10. For you, we invoke, Indra placed over all men ; may he be exclusively our own.

ANUVAKA III.

SUKTA I (VIII.)

The Deity, Rishi and metre as before.

INDRA, bring for our protection riches,—profuse, enjoyable, the source of victory, (and) the humbler of our enemies.

2. Through the constant strokes of fists² (soldiers engaged), by which (wealth) we shall repel enemies ; or protected by thee with a horse.³

3. Indra, protected by thee we hold weapons made of thunderbolt ; by which in battle we conquer enemies elated with pride.

4. With thee for our help, Indra, and (helped by) heroes holding strong weapons, we can defeat enemies arrayed in hosts.

1 " The Text has, over the five men or classes of men, pañcā kṣitīnām, the latter term is explained etymologically, those who are fit for habitations (nivāsarhanām) ; the phrase is of not unfrequent recurrence and is usually said to imply the four castes, Brāhmanas, Kṣatriyas, Vaishyas and Sudras, and Nishādas, barbarians or those who have no caste, intending possibly the aboriginal races of India, all in a very low stage of civilization, like the Gonds, Koles and Bhils, of the present day."—Wilson.

2 Mushtihatyayá.—Literally striking with a fist.

3 The Scholiast, in this and the preceding expressions, means infantry and cavalry.

5. Mighty (in strength) is Indra, supreme (in accomplishments), may greatness¹ ever abide in the holder of the thunderbolt; this army is vast like the firmament.

6. Persons engaged in battle, those seeking children, and intelligent men seeking knowledge, (obtain them by lauding Indra.)

7. The belly (of Indra) which quaffs Soma-Juice in abundance, swells like the ocean, (and is ever) moist like the ample fluids of the palate.²

8. The words of Indra to his worshipper, are true, of manifold (sweet) expressions, many cow-conferring, greatly adorable, and like a branch of tree loaded with ripe fruits.

9. Indra, thy lordly powers are ever protectors of every such worshipper as I am and immediate givers of fruits.

10. Indeed, encomiastic verses,³ (sung in his praise in the Sāma) and recited (in the Rich), are to be desired and repeated to Indra that he may drink the Soma-Juice.

1 This indicates Indra's superiority in physical strength and in mental and intellectual accomplishments.

2 "The Scholiast expounds the Text urviraṇo na kākudha as rendered above, but kakuda may refer to kakud, the pinnacle of a mountain, and the phrase might then be translated, like the abundant waters or (torrents) from the mountain tops."—Wilson.

3 "The first is the translation of stoma, which the Commentary defines Sāma-Sādhyām Stotram, praise to be accomplished by the Sāma-Vēda: the second is the rendering of uktha, which the same authority describes as, the Rik-Sādhyām S'āstram, the unsung praise to be accomplished by the Rich. S'āstram is explained by S'rīdhara Swāmi in the Scholia on the Bhāgvat-Purānam, to signify a sacred hymn not sung."—Wilson.

SUK' A II. (IX.)

The Deity, Rîshi and metre the same.

COME, Indra, in this sacrificial rite and be gratified with all these viands and libations; growing in strength be victorious (over thy enemies).

2. The libation being prepared, present (O priests) this exhilarating and efficacious (draught) to the gratified Indra, the accomplisher of all deeds.

3. Handsome-nosed¹ (Indra), adorable unto all,² be gratified with these joy-producing laudatory verses; come with the deities in these sacrifices.

4. Indra, I have composed laudatory verses; they have reached thee, the showerer of desired-for objects, the protector (of thy worshippers); thou hast accepted them.

5. Send us, Indra, best and multiform riches; thou hast enough and more than enough riches.

6. Indra, lord of profuse riches, engage us, diligent by nature and renowned for the acquirement of wealth, in this rite.

7. Give us, Indra, incalculable inexhaustible wealth, containing many kine, profuse food, full of virtues in abundance and granting sufficient longevity.

8. Indra, confer on us great renown, wealth

1 Su-s'ipra.—"S'ipra" means either the lower jaw or nose. Wilson has translated it as, "with the handsome chin." But we think "handsome-nosed" is a better rendering.

2 The Text is vahva charshane.—Literally, "Oh thou! who art all men." Sâyana has explained it as, sarva manuskyayukta; joined with all men, or sarva yajamânais pujya, adorable unto all sacrificers, better unto all men.

distributed in a thousand objects of charity, and food filling up many carts.¹

9. Chanting laudatory verses, we invoke Indra, the lord of riches, fond of Rich (verses), the repairer² to the place of sacrifice, for protecting our wealth.

10. In every sacrifice the sacrificer glorifies the great prowess of Indra, powerful and ever dwelling (in an eternal mansion).

SUKTA III. (X.)

The Deity and the Rishi are the same; the metre is Anushtubh.

THE chanters (of the Sáma), hymn thee, S'atakratu; the reciters of the Richas, praise thee, worthy of adoration; the *Bráhmaṇás*³ elevate thee like a bamboo pole.

2. When (the worshipper), becoming ready to perform a great (sacrificial) rite, ascends from one summit

1 Rathinis ishas.—Literally "car having viands." The Commentator has explained it fully; as, "those articles of food which are conveyed in cars, carts, or waggons from the place of production."

2 Gartáram.—The Commentator explains it as "going to the chamber where sacrifice is performed."

3 The first term Gāyatrínah, literally "those who employ the Gāyatrí metre," is said by Sáyana to denote the Udgátrí, the chanter of the hymns of the Sáma; Arkina, the reciters of the Rich. The third term Bráhmaṇah is explained, the Bráhmd of a sacrifice, or the priest so denominated, and the other Bráhmaṇás. The concluding phrase vaṭś'am iṃa udyemire, "they have raised thee like bamboo," is rather obscure. The Scholiast says, "they have elevated Indra, as tumblers raise a bamboo pole, on the summit of which they balance themselves," not an uncommon feat in India; or as vaṭś'a means also a family, it may be rendered as, "ambitious persons raise their family to consequence."

to another summit,¹ Indra knows his object, and, showering desired-for objects, becomes moved to come with the troops (of Maruts.)

3 Indra, the dri¹cker of Soma-Juice, yoke thy long-maned, powerful and plump² horses, and come near to hear our praises.

4. Come, Vasu,³ (to the rite⁴, praise our hymns, accept them, (express thy delight) by sound, and multiply the ⁴ood and rite (undertaken by us).

5. The hymn, the cause of increase, is to be repeated to Indra,—the repeller of many foes, that S'akra may make great sound⁵ to our sons and friends.

6. We go to him, for (the favour of) his friendship, and for the acquisition of wealth and becoming strength; for the powerful Indra; conferring riches, can protect (us).

7. Indra, the food (given by thee) is everywhere profuse, easily attainable and assuredly perfect; holder of the thunderbolt, set open the habitation of cows⁵ and provide (ample) riches.

1 The Text is yat śaṁśaṁ saṁsum aruḥat, which rendered into plain English would read as, "mounting from summit to summit." Sāyana completes the sense, saying,—"who goes to the mountain to collect the Soma-Plant, or fuel, or other articles required for the ceremony."

2 Kakshyepa.—Literally "filling out their girths; plump or well-conditioned."

3 Vasu, here used as a synonym of Indra, is explained as the original donor or cause of habitations.

4 Rāranat.—Literally making great sound: Sāyana explains it as, "being pleased with us speaks highly of our sons and friends."

5 The Text is Gavām Vrajam.—Sāyana has explained Vrajam as, Nisṛṣa Sthānam, "dwelling-place." Wilson has rendered it as, "cow-pastures," meaning that "Indra, as the sender of rain, should fertilize

8. Heaven and earth are unable to sustain thee, when killing thine enemies; thou mayst command (send) the waters of the sky: send us abundant kine.

9. O thou, having ears which hear all, listen speedily to my invocation; hold in thy heart my praises; keep, near to thee this, my hymn, as it were (the words of a) friend.

210. We know thee, the showerer of desired-for objects in profusion, the hearer of our call in battles; we invoke the thousandfold wealth-giving protection of thee, the showerer (of abundant bounties)

11. Come, Indra, speedily to us; son of Kus'ika,⁷ delighted, drinking [the fermented Sotna-juice; prolong the life highly spoken of by all the Deities; make me, who am a Rishi, profusely endowed (with possessions).

12. O thou the object of praises, may these eulogistic verses, engaged in all rites, reach thee from all sides. May they augment, by following thee who art long-lived; and being agreeable to thee, may they give us joy.

the fields, and, by providing abundant [pasturage, enable the cattle to yield store of milk." The rendering is, indeed, very happy, but we have followed the Text literally.

7 In all the Paurāṇik genealogies, the son of Kus'ika is the sage Vis'wāmītra, and in order to explain its application to Indra, Sāyana quotes the legend given in the Index which states that Kus'ika, the son of Is'irathi, being desirous of a son equal to Indra, adopted a life of continence, in requital of which Indra was born as the son of Gāthi, the Gādhi of the Purāṇās.—Wilson.

SUKTA. IV. (XI).

THE Deity is Indra ; the Rishi is Jetri the son of Madhuchhandas ; the metre is Anushtubh.

ALL our eulogistic verses magnify Indra, spreading like the ocean, the most valiant of car-warriors, the lord of food, the protector of the virtuous.

2. Supported by (the favour of) thy friendship, Indra, cherisher of strength, we have no fear (of our enemies) but glorify thee, the conqueror, the unconquered.

3. Indra's gifts of wealth are known from time immemorial ; his protection will not be wanting to him (the worshipper) who presents to the reciters of the hymns, wealth of food and cattle.

4. Indra,—the ever youthful, the intelligent, of great strength, the sustainer of all deeds, the wielder of the thunderbolt, the subject of profuse laudation, was born as the destroyer of the cities (of the Asurâs).

5. Thou, O wielder of the thunderbolt, didst break open the cave of Vala,¹ where he kept the kine (of the celestials concealed) ; the deities oppressed (by Vala) no longer feared him, having obtained thee as their protector.

6. (Drawn) by the gifts of wealth, I, again, come, O hero, to thee, describing (everywhere the virtues of) trickling Soma-Juice ;² the performers of the rite approach thee, worthy of being lauded, for they have known thy (liberality).

¹ Vala was an Asura, who stole the cows of the celestials and hid them in a cave. Indra surrounded the cave with his army and recovered the cattle.

² The Text is Sindhum ahvadan. It can be rendered as both "describing the virtues of the trickling or pouring Soma-juice," or "recounting his liberality in the Soma-Sacrifice." Wilson has adopted the latter. But the former appears to be more literal.

7. Indra, thou didst kill by stratagem, the wily S'ushna;¹ the intelligent know thy (greatness); multiply their food.

8. The reciters of Richas, laud Indra,—the ruler of the universe, by virtue of his power,² whose gifts of wealth are thousandfold or even more.

ĀUVANKA IV.

SUKTA I. (XII.)

THE Deity is Agni; the Rishi Medhātithi, the son of Kanwa; the metre Gáyatri.

WE select Agni, the messenger of the celestials, their invoker,³ the possessor of all riches, the perfect performer⁴ (of sacrificial rites.)

2. (The sacrificers), always, invoke, with their in-

¹ S'ushna is described as an Asura slain by Indra; but this is evidently a metaphorical murder. Sushna means dryer up; Bhutānām, soshanam-hetum, "the cause of the drying or withering of beings, heat or drought; which Indra, as the rain, would put an end to.—Wilson.

² The text is Ojasá; it may apply to the reciters, i.e., with all their might or to Indra. Wilson has taken the former view. But the latter rendering appears to be better.

³ Agni is described in the Ītīttriya Brahmana as the messenger of the celestials.

⁴ The word in the Text is Sukratu.—Sáyana explains it both as Shobhanakarmānam, "good performer of the rite," and Shobhanaprajnam, "endued with beneficial wisdom." Wilson has translated it as, "the protector of this rite."

9. Be propitious, Pávaka,¹ to him, who, presenting oblations for the gratification of the celestials, approaches Agni.

10. Agni, the bright, the purifier, bring, here, the celestials to this our sacrifice, to our oblations.

11. Lauded with our newest hymn, confer on us riches, food and heroic sons.

2. Agni, shining with pure radiance, and charged with all the invocations of the celestials, be pleased by this our hymn.

SUKTA II. (XIII.)²

The Rishi and the metre are the same, but the hymn is addressed to a number of deified objects generally named Apri. The first five stanzas describe the various forms of Agni; the sixth the doors of the sacrificial chamber; the seventh morning and night; the eighth two deified priests; the ninth the goddess Ilá, Saraswati and Bhárati; the tenth Twashtri; the eleventh Vanaspati; and the twelfth Svadhá. They are all connected with Agni.

AGNI, Susamiddha,³ the invoker, the purifier, bring, here, the celestials, to the offerers of our oblation and do thou sacrifice.

1 Literally "purifier;" a name of Agni.

2 This Sukta is called Apri Sukta. It used to be applied in the sacrifice of animals. There are ten Apri Suktas in all the ten Mandalas of the Rig-Véda. The enumeration is as follows:—

1st Mandala—13th, 142nd and 188th Suktas.

2nd „ 3rd Sukta.

9th „ 5th „

10th „ 70th and 110th Suktas.

3 Su, well; Sam, completely; and iddha, kindled:—"the thoroughly kindled."

2. Intelligent Tanunapat,¹ carry to-day our well-flavoured sacrifice to the celestials for their food.

3. Here, in this sacrifice, I invoke the beloved Narâsansa,² the sweet-tongued, the offerer of oblations.

4. O Āgni, Ilita,³ bring, hither, the celestials, in an easy-going chariot; for thou art the invoker elected by men.

5. Learned priests spread the sacred grass Varhis,⁴ bundled together and covered with clarified butter and on which is seen ambrosia-like clarified butter.⁵

6. Let the bright doors,⁶ the multiplier of sacrifice, not visited by multitudes of people, be set open, for surely to-day is the sacrifice to be made.

7. I invoke the lovely night and dawn,⁷ to sit upon the sacred grass, at this our sacrifice.

8. I invoke the two beautiful-tongued⁸ divine and intelligent invokers,⁹ that they may celebrate this our sacrifice.

¹ Tanunapat.—"The devourer of clarified butter," or, according to another Etymology "the consumer of its own substance (tānu), a fuel." Napāt occurs in Nirghanta, as the synonym of tanaya son or offspring; but in this compound the second member is considered to be either ad who eats, or pā who preserves, the latter with na prefixed, napāt, "who does not preserve, who destroys."—Wilson.

² Lauded by men.

³ The worshipped;—from the root ila, "to adore."

⁴ Varhis is, also, an appellative of Agni.

⁵ The word amrita may either imply the clarified butter sprinkled on the grass, or the immortal Agni.

⁷ They signify the two forms of Fire presiding over those seasons.

⁸ It may mean, also, Priyavachanan, literally "sweet-speeched, or eloquent," as Wilson has rendered it.

⁹ The two Agnis.

9. May the three delight-giving and undecaying Goddesses—Ilâ, Saraswatî and Mahî,¹ sit down upon the sacred grass.

10. The foremost Twashtri,² having various forms, I invoke; may he be solely ours.

11. Present, Divine Vanaspati,³ our oblations to the Celestials; may the giver come by true knowledge

12. Perform the sacrifice, conveyed through *Swâhâ*⁴ to Indra, in the house of the sacrificer; therefore I invoke the Celestials here.

SUKTA III (XIV).

THE Rishi and metre the same; but the hymn is addressed to Agni and other Divinities named and to the Vis'wadêvas

AGNI, come, with all the Deities, in this sacrifice, to our service and to our praises, to drink the Soma-Juice and perform the sacrifice (for us).

2. Intelligent Agni, *Kanwas*⁵ invoke thee and highly speak of thy works. Come, O Agni, with the Celestials.

1 These are personifications of Agni; they are, also, called the Three personified Flames of Fire. Mahî is said to be a synonym of Bhârati. As Goddesses, Ilâ represents the Earth; Saraswatî, the consort of Brahmâ is the presiding Deity of Eloquence and Mahî, Speech, the consort of Bharata. But these mythological personifications belong to the Post-Vedic Period.

2 Twashtri, in the popular system, represents the Divine Architect. He is, also, one of the twelve A'dityas: here he is Fire

3 Literally, "the Lord of Woods," or "a large tree," but, here, Agni.

4 An exclamation used in pouring the oblation to Fire. Here, it is identified with Agni.

5 Literally, "descendants of Kanva;" but the Scholiast explains it as "intelligent Ritwijâs."

3. (Offer sacrificial offerings)¹ to Indra, Vâyu, Vṛihaspati, Mitra, Agni, Pushan and Bhaga, the A'dityas and troops of Maruts.

4. For you, are specially prepared all these Soma-Juices, satisfying, exhilarating, sweet, falling in drops and placed in ladles.

5. Having lopped the sacred grass, the intelligent priests, desirous of protection, laud thee with oblations and ornaments.

6. Let the steeds, which convey thee, rendered plump with being fed with clarified butter² and harnessed at will, bring the Celestials to drink the Soma-Juice.

7. Agni, unite these (Deities), worshipful and augmenters of sacrifices, with their wives; O beautiful-tongued, make them partake of the sweet Soma-Juice.

¹ The ellipsis is supplied by the Commentator. Mitra, Pushan and Bhaga are forms of the Sun or A'dityas. They are the Aditi. In the 27th Sukta of the Second Mandala of the Rig-Véda, Six A'dityas are mentioned, viz., Mitra, Aryamá, Bhaga, Varuna, Daksha, and Ang's'a. In the 114th Sukta of the 9th Mandala, the number is Seven, but their names are not mentioned. In the 72nd Sukta of the 10th Mandala, Eight sons of Aditi are mentioned. In Taittiríya Bráhmaṇa Eight A'dityas are mentioned, viz., Dhátá, Aryamá, Mitra, Varuna, Ang's'a, Bhaga, Indra and Vivaswán. In the Satapatha Bráhmaṇa twelve A'dityas are mentioned. They are the Suns in the Twelve Months of the Year.

"Aditi, an ancient goddess, is in reality the earliest name invented to express the Infinite; not the Infinite as the result of a long process of abstract reasoning, but the visible Infinite, visible by the naked eye, etc."—MaxMüller's, Rig-Véda.

Pandit Satyavrata Sámas'ramf thus describes the A'dityas:—Aruna rises in the morning just after dawn; Bhaga appears thereafter when the rays of the Sun become a little stronger; thereafter the Sun is called Púsha till his rays do not become the fiercest; in the fore noon the Sun is called Aryamá, and in the noon, he is called Vishnu."

² This is how Sáyana explains the expression. Wilson renders it as "glossy-backed."

8. Let those Celestials, who are worthy of being offered oblations and lauded, drink, with thy tongue, of the sweet Soma-Juice just before the termination of the sacrifice.¹

9. Let the intelligent invoker (of the Celestials) bring hither, from the resplendent solar region, all the Divinities awaking with the dawn.

10. Agni, with all the Celestials—with Indra, Vāyu and the effulgent forms of Mitra, drink the sweet Soma-Juice.

11. Agni, appointed by man as the invoker (of the Celestials), preside over his sacrifice; complete this sacrifice of ours.

12. Yoke, Divine Agni, this quick-coursing and strong mares, *Rohitaḥ*² to thy chariot, and, by them, bring hither the Celestials.

SUKTA IV (XV).

THE Rishi and metre the same, the Deity is Ritu; but in each stanza some other familiar Deity is associated with him.

INDRA, drink with Ritu, the Soma-Juice; may these satisfying drops, ever abiding in thy stomach, enter into thee.

1 The Text is Vashatkṛiti: The word Vashat is uttered when a sacrifice is about to be completed. Sáyana explains it as Vashatkṛkále "at the time of Vashatkár," or "a sacrifice in which the word Vashat is uttered."

2 The Text is Arushi haritaḥ Rohitaḥ:—Sáyana means by the word Rohitas, the horses of Agni, and uses the other two words as adjectives, meaning by Arushi, "quick-coursing;" and by Haritas "capable of carrying." MaxMüller interprets Arushi as the red horses of Agni and uses the other two words as adjectives.

3 Personification of season.

2. Maruts, drink with Ritu, from the sacrificial vessel Patrî; consecrate the rite, for you are bountiful.

3. Neshtri,¹ with thy wife, commend our sacrifice to the Celestials; drink with Ritu; for thou art the giver of jewels.

4. Agni, bring hither the Celestials, arrange them in three places,² bedeck them with ornaments; drink with Ritu.

5. Drink the Soma-Juice, Indra, from the valuable vessel of *Brâhmaṇa*³ after Ritu, since thy friendship with him is uninterrupted.

6. Mitra and Varuṇa, performers of promised deeds, be present with Ritu at our sacrifice, efficacious and undisturbed (by enemies).

7. (The priests), desirous of riches, having stones in their hands (for bringing the Soma-Plant), laud the Divine (Agni) Dravinodâs,⁴ both in the primary and subsidiary sacrifices.⁵

8. May Dravinodâs give us riches we have heard of; we ask them, for the Celestials.

1 Neshtri is another name of Tvashtri, from his having assumed, it is said, upon some occasion, the function of Neshtri or priest so denominated at a sacrifice.—Wilson.

2 Either at the three daily ceremonies, at dawn, mid-day and sunset, or in the three fires lighted at sacrifices.—Wilson.

3 The Text is obscure. Brâhmanâd-râdhasah is literally from Brahmanical wealth; but the latter is explained a costly vessel. The Brâhmanachchansi is one of the sixteen priests employed in sacrifices; his function may be to hold some ladle or vase in which the offering is presented.—Wilson.

4 Dravinodâs is an epithet of Agni, meaning "the giver of wealth or strength."

5 In the Adhvarya and in the Yajñas, the first is said to be the primary or essential ceremony, prakṛiti-rupa, such as the Agnisthoma; the second, the modified ceremonies, Vikṛiti-rupêśhu, such as the Ukthya—Wilson.

9. Dravinodâs wishes to drink with the Ritus from the cup of Neshtri; hasten (priests to the sacrificial chamber); present the oblation and depart.

10. Since, Dravinodâs, we worship thee for the fourth time along with the Ritus, do thou give us wealth.

11. As'wins, performers of pious deeds, bright with sacrificial fires, accepters, with the Ritus, of sacrifice, drink the sweet juice.

12. Agni, the giver of rewards, identical with household fire, thou art the performer of sacrifice with Ritu; worship the Celestials, on behalf of the sacrificer seeking them.

SUKTA V (XVI).

THE Rishi and metre the same; the Deity is Indra.

INDRA, let thy horses bring here the, showerer of riches to drink the Soma-Juice; may (the priests) radiant as the Sun (make thee manifest).

2. Let his horses Hari convey Indra in an easy-going chariot here where these grains (of parched barley), steeped in clarified butter, are strewn (upon the altar).

3. We invoke Indra at the morning rite; we invoke him at the time of the celebration of the sacrifice; we invoke him to drink the Soma-Juice (at the time of completion).

4. Come Indra, with thy long-maned steeds, near our pressed Soma-Juice; we invoke, when Soma-Juice is extracted and poured out.

5. Do thou come to this our praise, to this our sacrifice, for which the libation is prepared; drink like a thirsty Goura-deer.

6. These dripping Soma-Juices are effused upon the sacred grass; drink them, Indra, for gaining strength.

7. Indra, may this most excellent hymn touch thy heart and afford thee delight; thereafter drink the extracted Soma-Juice.

8. Indra, the destroyer of enemies, goes, forsooth, to every sacrifice where the libation is poured out, to drink the Soma-Juice for (his) exhilaration.

9. S'atakṛatu, do thou fully satisfy our desires with (the gift of) kine and horses; being filled with perfect meditation we laud thee.

SUKTA VI. (XVII).

THE metre and Rishi the same; the Deities Indra and Varuṇa conjointly.

I SEEK the protection of the sovereign rulers¹ Indra and Varuṇa; when thus prayed for, they make us happy.

2. For you are ever ready, guardians of mankind, to grant protection on the appeal of a minister such as I am.

3. Satisfy us with riches, Indra and Varuṇa, according to our desires; we desire you ever near us.

4. (The libations) of our holy rites have been mixed; (the laudations) of our right-minded priests have been mixed; may we, therefore, become the foremost among the givers of food.²

¹ Samrājāh, of the two emperors; but Rājā is, in general, equivocally used, meaning shining, bright, as well as royal, so that Sāyana explains the term "possessed of extensive dominion," or "shining very brilliantly."—Wilson.

² The Stanza is obscurely worded. We have in the Text Yuvaku sachinām, Yuvaku sumatinām; the former (sachinām) is explained, a mixture of butter milk, water and meat, suited for acts of religious worship; the latter, the combination of choice expressions and praises which are the suitable phraseology of the right-minded or the pious (sumatinām).

5. Indra is a giver among the givers of thousands ; Varuṇa is to be lauded among those who are deserving of laudation.

6. Through their protection we enjoy (riches) and husband them, and may there be an abundance of wealth.

7. I invoke you both Indra and Varuṇa for manifold riches : make us perfectly victorious.

8. Indra and Varuṇa, speedily bestow happiness on us for our minds are willing to serve you properly.

9. May the excellent hymn, which I offer to Indra and Varuṇa, reach you both ; that conjoint praise which you (accepting) dignify.

ANUVAKA V.

SUKTA I. (XVIII.)

THE metre and Rishî the same. The first five stanzas are addressed to Brâhmanaspati, associated, in the fourth, with Indra and Soma ; and, in the fifth, with them and Dakshinâ : the three next are addressed to Sadasaspati ; and the ninth to the same or to Narâs'ansa.

BRAHMANASPATI,¹ make the offerer of libation (i.e., myself) illustrious among the Celestials like Kakshivat, the son of Us'ij.²

Ramânâth Saraswatî translates the word Yuvaku as "your," and renders the stanza thus,—“may we gain your favour in the shape of protection and wealth.”

1 The Deity Brahmanaspati is the same as Vrihaspati. This will be evident when the reader goes to the 23rd Sukta of the Second Mandala. Sâyana gives no account of the station of this Deity. Dr. Roth defines him as the Deity of sacred prayer, or, perhaps, of the Text of the Vêda. The etymology justifies this definition. Sâyana, however, understands by the word Brahma eulogy or prayer.

2 This story is to be found in several of the Purânâs, especially the Matysa and Vâyu, as well as in the Mahâbhârata. Kakshivat was

2. May he, who is possessed of riches, the destroyer of diseases, the acquirer of riches, the augments of nourishment, the prompt giver of rewards, favour us.

3. Protect us, Brahmanaspati, so that calumnious censure of the malevolent may not touch us.

4. That heroic mortal, whom Indra, Brahmanaspati and Soma protect, never perishes.

5. Do thou, Brahmanaspati and do you, Soma, Indra and Dakṣiṇā¹ protect that man from sin.

6. I solicit intelligence from Sadasaspati,² the wonderful, the friend of Indra, the beautiful and the giver of riches.

7. Without whose help, the sacrifice, even of the wise, is not perfected; he pervades the association of our thoughts.³

8. He rewards the presenter of the oblation; he brings the sacrifice to a consummate close; (through him) our invocation reaches the Celestials.

9. I have seen Narās'amsa,⁴ the most resolute, the most celebrated and radiant as the sky.

the son of Dīrghatamas by Usij, a female servant of the Queen of the Kalinga Rāiā, whom her husband had desired to submit to the embraces of the Sage, in order that he might beget a son. The Queen substituted her bondmaid Usij; the Sage, cognizant of the deception, sanctified Usij and begot by her a son named Kakshivat, who through his affiliation by Kalinga was a Kshatriya, but as the son of Dīrghatamas was a Brāhmaṇa; he was also a Rishi.—Wilson.

1 Literally it means a present made to a Brāhmaṇa at the termination of a religious rite. But here it is personified as a female divinity.

2 Literally, the pāti (protector) of sadas (assembly); it is here a name of Agni.

3 The Text is dhinām Yogam invati which may mean "he pervades the association of our minds," or "the object of our pious acts."

4 It is an appellation of Agni, meaning "he who is to be praised by men." According to the Kāthakas, it means the personified Yajna or sacrifice at which men (nara) praise (S'unsanti) the Celestials.

SUKTA II. (XIX.)

THE metre and Rishi the same ; Agni and the Maruts are the Deities.

AGNI, thou art invoked, to this perfect sacrifice, to drink the Soma-Juice ;¹ come, Agni, with the Maruts.

2. There is no greater Deity or man, who can oust thee of thy rite, O Agni, who art supremely powerful come with the Maruts.

3. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who are all² (i.e., seven in number) radiant,³ and devoid of malignity, and who know (how to cause the descent) of great waters.⁴

4. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who are fierce, and pour down rain,⁵ and are unequalled in strength.

5. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who are beautiful, of terrific forms, who are possessors of profuse wealth, and are devourers of the malevolent.

6. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who are Divinities residing in the radiant heaven above the Sun.⁶

7. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who scatter the clouds, and agitate the sea full of water.

1 The Text is gopīthāya :—Sāyana explains it as, Somapāndya, i.e., to drink Soma-Juice. MaxMüller translates it as, "For a draught of milk." We prefer Sāyana's explanation, for Vedic Deities are, always, mentioned as drinking Soma-Juice.

2 Visve :—Literally, all : here it refers to the seven troops of the Maruts.

3 Devāsah :—The Scholiast explains it as, dyotamāna, radiant. Wilson translates it as, "Divine."

4 MaxMüller translates the expression as, "Who know of the great sky;" but we follow Sāyana's rendering ; for many Texts attribute to the Maruts the power of creating rain.

5 Arka means water or rain : but MaxMüller translates the expression arkam ānrichuḥ as, "Who sing their song."

6 Nākasya adhi. Sāyana explains it as, "Above the Sun," but MaxMüller translates Nāka as, "Firmament."

8. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, who spread (through the sky) along with the rays (of the Sun), and, with their strength, agitate the sea.

9. Come, Agni, with the Maruts, I pour out the sweet Soma-Juice for thy drinking (as of old).¹

SUKTA III. (XX.)

THE metre and Rishi the same : the Deities are Ribhus.

THIS hymn, the bestower of many beautiful jewels, has been addressed, by the sages, with their own mouths, to the Deities having birth.¹

2. They, who created, by their mind (i.e., will-power), for Indra the steeds that are harnessed at his words, have spread over this (our) sacrifice with the ceremonial utensils.³

Ribhus were, formerly, men, but, by ascetic penances, they attained to the dignity of the Celestials. The Ribhus were the three sons of Sudhanwan, the son of Angiras, severally named Ribhu, Vibhu and Vāja : but they were called Ribhus, from the name of the elder. Through their assiduous performance of good works, they acquired divinity, exercised superhuman powers and became entitled to receive praise and adoration.

2 The Text is s'āmibhir-yajnam-ās'ata : It has been rendered variously by different scholars. Sāyana has interpreted the expression as "graha chamasādi nishpādanaḥ ruṇāḥ karmabhir, yajnam ashma-dīyām, ās'ata vyaptavanta," i.e., they have pervaded (or accepted) our sacrifice, performed with those acts which are executed by the means of tongs, ladles and other utensils employed in making oblations). Wilson translates it as, "Have partaken of the sacrifice performed with holy acts." Mr. Stevenson, "They pervade our sacrifice by purificatory rites." Rosen, "Ceremoniis sacrificium." Langlois, "Ils ont entouré le sacrifice de ceremonies." The expression suggests that perhaps the Ribhus were the inventors of those sacrificial implements.

3. They constructed for the Nâsatyas a car going everywhere and pleasant to sit on, and a cow yielding milk.¹

4. The Ribhus, endued with the power of making their prayers unfailing, fond of peace, and successful² (in all pious deeds), made³ their (aged) parents young.

5. Ribhus, the intoxicating Soma-Juices are offered to you, along with Indra, attended by the Maruts, and along with the radiant A'dityas.⁴

6. The Ribhus have divided, into four, the new ladle, which was completely constructed by the divine Twashtri.⁵

7. May they, moved by our excellent praises, give to (the priest, who, on) our (behalf), offers libations of

1 The word is taksham: the meaning of the verb implies mechanical formation. The Ribhus may have been the first to attempt the bodily representation of these appendages of Indra and As'wins.—Wilson.

2 The Text is Vishthi: Sâyana explains it as, Vyâpti-Yukldh, i.e., meeting with no opposition in all acts, on account of the never-failing potency of their prayers.

3 Akrata, from kri to make. It does not mean here 'mechanical making.'

4 According to As'walâyana, as quoted by Sâyana, the libations offered at the third daily, or evening, sacrifice, are presented to Indra, along with the A'dityas, together with Ribhu, Vibhu, Vâja, with Vrihaspati and the Vis'wadevas.—Wilson.

5 Twashtri, is described in the Purânas as an artizan of the celestials. In the Vêdâs, he is mentioned as a Divinity who works as a carpenter for the Deities. The Scholiast, also, describes the Ribhus as the disciples of Twashtri. The act, of their making one ladle four, has very likely some more references to some innovation in the objects of libation, than to the mere multiplication of the wooden vessel. The Nitimañjari says, that Agni, coming to the sacrifice, performed by the Ribhus, became as one of them. And, to give him a share in the sacrifice, they divided the ladle into four.

Soma-Juice, three sorts of precious articles, one by one, and perfect seven times seven sacrifices.¹

8. Offerers of sacrifices, they hold² (immortality; although born as mortals); by their good deeds, they obtain, among the Celestials, a share of sacrifices.

SUKTA IV. (XXI.)

Risati and metre the same; the hymn is addressed to Indra and Agni.

I INVOKE in this sacrifice, Indra and Agni, to whom we wish to present our laudatory verses; let them, who are both profuse drinkers of the Soma-Juice, drink Soma.

2. Laud, men, Indra and Agni in 'sacrifices; decorate them with various ornaments and hymn them with laudatory verses.

3. We invoke Indra and Agni for singing the praises of our friend (the instituter of the rite): we invoke those drinkers of Soma, to drink the libation.

4. We invoke the two fierce Deities, near the rite where the libation is prepared: Indra and Agni come here.

1 Tirā Sāptāni: The Scholiast considers that trih may be applied to precious things, as meaning best, middling, worst, or to sāptāni, seven sacrifices, as classed under three heads. Thus, one class consists of the Agnýādheyam, seven ceremonies in which clarified butter is offered on fire; one class consists of the Pāka-Yajñas in which dressed viands are offered to the Viśvadevās and others; and one comprehends Agnisthoma class, in which libations of Soma-Juice are the characteristic offering.—Wilson.

If, however, the Text is literally followed, the translation would be,— "Give, one by one, thrice seven sorts of precious articles."

2 The Text is Adharayanta, literally, 'held' or 'enjoyed.' The Scholiast explains it fully: they were mortals, but they obtained immortality, by performing many good deeds. The Ribhus acquired the prestige of drinking Soma in the company of the Deities.

5. May those two powerful Indra and Agni, the guardians of the assembly, make the Rákshasās innocuous, and may the devourers (of men) be destitute of progeny.

6. By this unfailing sacrifice be you rendered vigilant, Indra and Agni, in the station which affords knowledge (of the fruits of deeds), and grant us happiness.

SUKTA V. (XXII.)

THE Rishi and metre the same; the hymn contains twenty-one stanzas which are addressed to various Deities; or four, to the As'wins and four, to Sāvitrī; the next two, to Agni; the eleventh, to the goddesses collectively; the twelfth to the wives of Indra, Varuṇa and Agni; the two next, to heaven and earth; the fifteenth, to earth alone; the last six, to Vishṇu.

(O PRIEST,) awaken the As'wins, associated for the morning (libation); let them, both, come here to drink of the Soma-Juice.

2. We invoke the two Divine As'wins, having the most excellent car, the best of charioteers, and residing in the celestial region.

3. As'wins, stir up¹ the sacrifice, with your whip, that is wet with the foam (of your horses) and lashing loudly.

4. As'wins, the residence, of the offerer of libation, where you are going to in your car, is not far from you:

¹ Mimikshatam, mix intimately the juice of the Soma. It is not clear how this is to be done with the whip, allusion to which only intimates, it is said, that the As'wins should come quickly. Tayā, by that, may, also, mean, with that—come with that your whip; or Kasā, commonly a whip; may mean speech; in which case Madhumatī and Sunritivati, explained wet and loud, will signify sweet and veracious—come with such speech, As'wins, and taste the libation.—Wilson.

5. I invoke the golden-handed Sâvitri,¹ to protect me: he will let us know of the station of the sacrificers.

6. Hymn Sâvitri, who is the drier up of water,² for our protection: we wish to celebrate his sacrifice.

7. We invoke Sâvitri, the enlightener of men and the distributor of various home-insuring wealth.

8. Sit down, friends, Sâvitri is soon to be lauded by us: shines there the giver of riches.

9. Agni, bring, here, the loving wives of the Celestials and Twastri, to drink the Soma-Juice.

10. Agni, bring the wives of the Celestials here, for our protection. O youthful (Agni), bring Hotrá, Bháratī, Varútri and the adorable Dhishaná.³

11. May the goddesses, whose wings are unclipt;⁴ the protectresses of mankind, be propitiated with us, by giving us protection and great felicity.

12. I invoke Indráni, Varuṇāni and Agneyi, for our welfare, and to drink the Soma-Juice.

13. May the great heaven and earth sprinkle this sacrifice (with their dew) and fill us with nutriment.

14. The intelligent taste, through their pious deeds, the waters of these two, resembling clarified butter

1 Sâvitri is a synonym of the Sun. There is a Vaidik legend about his being golden-handed. At a sacrifice of the celestials, Sûrya undertook the office of Ritwîj, but placed himself in the station of Brahmâ. The Adhyâryu priests, seeing him in that position, gave him the oblation, termed Prasitra, which cut off that hand of Sûrya which had improperly accepted it. Thereupon, he was given a golden hand by them. It is, really, a figurative expression, descriptive of solar effulgence.

2 Here the word Nāpat is taken in its literal sense, i.e., who does not cherish but dries up water by his heat.

3 Hotrá is called the wife of Agni; Bháratī, one of the A'dityas and Dhishana is Vag-Dévi or the Goddess of Speech.

4 The wives of the Celestials, being in the form of birds, no one had cut their wings.

and (abiding) in the permanent region of the Gandharvas.¹

15. O earth, be thou extensive, free from thorns, and our abiding place; give us profuse happiness.

16. May the Deities protect us (from that portion) of the earth whence Vishnu, (aided) by the seven metres, stepped.²

17. Vishnu traversed this (world): three times he planted his foot,³ and the universe was enveloped by his foot covered with dust.

18. Vishnu, the preserver, the uninjurable, stepped three steps, upholding righteousness.

19. Behold the deeds of Vishnu, by virtue of which the sacrificer performs all rites: he is the worthy friend of Indra.

20. The wise, always, behold the great station of Vishnu as the eye sees, ranging everywhere in the sky.

1 Antârîkshâ, or firmament between heaven and earth, is the region of the Gandharvas, Yakshas and Apsarâs.

2 Sâyana explains Septadhamabhi as, "Seven metres." Mûit explains it as, "Through the seven regions." According to the Taittirîyas, as cited by the Scholiast, "The Celestials, headed by Vishnu, subdued the invincible earth, using the seven metres of the Vêdâs as their instruments.

3 Commentators disagree about the meaning of the sentence tredhâ nidadhe padam, i.e., thrice he planted his step. According to Sâkapuni it was on earth, in the firmament, in heaven; according to Aurnavâbha, on Samârohana or the eastern mountain, on Vishnu-pada, the meridian sky, and Gayas'iras, the western mountain; thus identifying Vishnu with the Sun; and his three paces, with the rise, culmination and setting of the luminary. Allusion is made to the three paces of Vishnu in the Vâjasaneyi Samhitâ of the Yajur Veda, and the Scholiast there explains them to imply the presence of Vishnu in the three regions of earth, air and heaven, in the forms, respectively, of Agni, Vâyu and Sûrya, Fire, Wind and the Sun.

21. The intelligent, ever vigilant and always singing his praises, illumine the great station of Vishnu.

SUKTA VI. (XXIII.)

THE Rishi is Medhâtithi, the son of Kanwa; the metre of the first eighteen stanzas is Gâyatri; that in the nineteenth stanza, Ushnik; and in the rest, Anushtubh. The hymn contains twenty-four stanzas, of which the first is addressed to Váyu; then three, to Mitra and Varuna; three, to Indra and the Maruts; three, to the Vis'wadévás; three to Pushán; seven and a half to the Waters, and the last verse and a half, to Agni.

THESE Soma-Juices, strong and full of blessings, have been poured out: come, Váyu, and drink them off as presented:

2. We invoke both the Deities,—Indra and Váyu, residing in the firmament, to drink off this Soma-Juice.

3. The intelligent invoke, for their protection, Indra and Váyu, who are fleet like the mind, have a thousand eyes¹ and are protectors of sacrifices.

4. We invoke Mitra and Varuna, who are present at the sacrificial ground and of pure strength, to drink the Soma-Juice.

5. I invoke Mitra and Varuna, who, with true speech, multiply pious deeds and protect the light of the sacrifice.

6. May Varuna protect us fully; may Mitra defend us with all defences; may they make us immensely rich.

¹ The expression Sahasráksha, which is generally applied to Indra, and never to Váyu, is applied here to both for grammatical construction.

7. We invoke Indra, together with the Maruts, to drink the Soma-Juice: may he, with his companions, be satisfied.

8. Divine Maruts, of whom Indra is the king and Pushân,¹ the benefactor,—all hear my invocations.

9. Liberal Maruts, associated with powerful Indra, destroy Vṛitra; let not the evil one reign supreme over us.

10. We invoke all the Divine Maruts, who are fierce and have the (many-coloured) earth for their mother,² to drink the Soma-Juice.

11. Leaders, when you receive an auspicious offering, then the proud shout of the Maruts comes like that of the conquerors.

12. May the Maruts, born from the effulgent lightning,³ protect us and render us happy.

13. Resplendent and quick-coursing Pushân, bring from heaven the (Soma-)Juice together with the variegated sacred grass as (a man brings back) a lost animal.

14. The resplendent Pushân has found the effulgent Soma-Juice concealed, placed in a cave,⁴ strewn amongst the sacred grass.

15. Indeed, he brought to me in succession the six⁵ (seasons) connected with the drops (of the Soma-

³ Haskarad-Vidyutah: the Commentator explains it as “Variously shining.”

⁴ According to the Scholiast, guha sadrise durgame dyuoloke, i.e., in heaven, difficult of access like a cave.

⁵ The Text has only shat, six: the Commentator explains it as “Six Seasons,” adding Vasantadin Ritun—the Seasons, Spring and the rest.”

juice) as (a husbandman) repeatedly ploughs (the earth) for barley.

16. Friendly Waters, that are mothers to us who are desirous of sacrificing, flow by the paths (of sacrifice) qualifying the milk with sweetness.

17. May those Waters, which are near the Sun or are associated with the Sun, gladden our sacrifice.

18. I invoke the Divine Waters, which our kine drink : oblations should be offered to the Divine Flowing (Waters).

19. Ambrosia is in the Waters ; medicinal herbs are in the Waters : Saintly Priests, be prompt in their praise.

20. Soma has said to me, (that) all medicines, Agni—the benefactor of the Universe, and all sorts of healing herbs are in the Waters.

21. Water, make perfect the medicine that prevents all diseases for my body, that I may long behold the Sun.

22. Water, wash away whatever sin is in me, what wrong I have done, what imprecation I have pronounced or what untruth I have spoken.

23. I have, this day, entered into the Waters : we have been associated with their essence. Agni, abiding in the Waters, come and fill me with vigour.

24. Agni, bestow on me vigour, progeny and life, so that the Celestials may know the (sacrifice) of this my (employer) and Indra, with the Rishis, may know it

SUKTA I. (XXIV.)

THE Rishis is S'unaḥs'épa,¹ the son of Ajígartta ; the metre is Trishtubh, except in stanzas three, four and five in which it is Gāyatrī : The first verse is addressed to Prajápati ; the second, to Agni ; the three next, to Savitri ; or the last of the three, to Bhaga ; the rest, to Varuna.

OF what Divinity, of what class amongst the immortals, shall we invoke the sweet name ?² Who will give us.

1 The story of S'unaḥs'épa has been for some time known to Sanskrit students by the version of it presented in the Rámáyana. He is there called the son of the Rishi Richaka and is sold for a hundred coins by his father to Ambarisha, king of Ayodhyā, as a victim for a human sacrifice ; on the road he comes to the Lake Pushkara, where he sees Vis'wamitra and implores his succour, and learns from him a prayer, by the repetition of which at the stake, Indra is induced to come and set him free. It is obvious that this story has been derived from the Vēda, for Vis'wamitra teaches him two Gāthās. Manu, also, alludes to the story (10, 105) where, it is said, Ajígartta incurred no guilt by giving up his son to be sacrificed, as it was to preserve himself and family from perishing with hunger. Kullukabhatta names the son S'unaḥs'épa, and refers for his authority to the Bahurika Bráhmaṇa. The story is told, in full detail, in the Aitaréya Bráhmaṇa, but the Rájá is named Haris'chandra ; he has no sons and worships Varuna, in order to obtain a son, promising to sacrifice to him his first-born ; he has a son, in consequence, named Rohita, but when Varuna claims his victim, the king delays the sacrifice, under various pretexts, from time to time, until Rohita attains adolescence, when his father communicates to him the fate for which he was destined ; Rohita refuses submission and spends several years in the forests, away from home : he, at last, meets there with Ajígartta, a Rishi in great distress, and persuades him to part with his second son, S'unaḥs'épa, to be substituted for Rohita as an offering to Varuna : the bargain is concluded, and S'unaḥs'épa is about to be sacrificed, when, by the advice of Vis'wamitra, one of the officiating priests, he appeals to the gods, and is, ultimately, liberated.—Wilson.

2 "Of whom" (Káśyd) may, also, be rendered "of Brahmá" or "Prajápati," one of whose names, in the Vēda, is ká.—Wilson.

to the great Aditi that I may, again, behold my father and mother.

2. Let us invoke the sweet name of Agni, the foremost amongst the Divinities, that he may give us to the great Aditi and that I may, again, behold my father and mother.

3. Ever protecting Sâvitri, we solicit thy protection, who art the lord of riches.

4. That wealth which has been kept in thy hands, which is commendable and free from envy or reproach.

5. O Sâvitri, who art the possessor of wealth, through thy protection we are busy with attaining the summit of affluence.

6. Varuṇa, these birds, that are flying, have not thy physical strength, or thy prowess, or thy anger; neither these waters nor the wind, which are flowing unceasingly, surpass thy speed.

7. The royal Varuṇa of pure strength, (residing) in the baseless firmament, sustains on high a heap of light, the rays (whereof) come downwards while their base is above; may they keep the vital airs concentrated in us.

8. The royal Varuṇa has, indeed, made wide the path of the Sun,¹ (by which) to travel on his daily course;—a path to course on in pathless (firmament): may he chastise the enemy who afflicts our heart.

9. Thine, O king, are a hundred and thousand medicaments: may thy favour be extensive and deep; keep, at a distance from us, Niṣṛiti,² with his face turned back, and free us from whatever sin we may have committed.

10. These Constellations,¹ placed on high and visible by night, where do they go to in the day? The holy acts of Varuṇa are undisturbed: (by his command) the Moon shines by night.

11. Lauding thee with a hymn, I beg thee for that² (life) which the sacrificer solicits with oblations. Varuṇa, undisdainful, confer a thought upon us; lauded of many, do not take away my longevity.

12. This, they repeat to me, by night and by day: the understanding of my heart, also manifests it: may he, whom the fettered S'unḥas'épa has invoked,—may that royal Varuṇa, liberate us.

13. S'unḥasépa, caught and bound to the three-footed tree,³ has invoked the son of Aditi; may the royal Varuṇa, wise and irresistible, set him free; may he let loose his bonds.

14. Varuṇa, we pacify thy wrath with bow, sacrifices and oblations: O Asura,⁴ O Prachétah, O king, ¹ The Constellations, Rikshaḥ, may be either, it is said, the seven Rishis Ursa Major, or the Constellations generally.

Riksha, in the sense of bright, has become the name of the bear, so called either from his bright eyes or from his brilliant tawny fur....The same name, in the sense of the bright ones, had been applied; by the Vedic poets, to the stars in general, and more particularly to that Constellation which in northern parts of India was the most prominent.—Max Muller's Science of Language, Vol. II., P. 395.

³ It means here, the sacrificial post.

⁴ Sáyana explains it as "avertter of misfortune." The early Aryans used to designate the Deities they worshipped as Asurás or Dévás. Afterwards when they were divided into two bands, one class (Irans) called their Deities Ahurs; and the other (Aryans), Dévás. The latter used to vilify the Deities of the former by calling them Asurás.

be present in our sacrifice and mitigate the sins we have committed.

15. Varuṇa, loosen the upper band¹ by the higher part, loosen the middle band by the middle, loosen the lower band by the lower part. O Son of Aditi, without violating thy worship, we shall become freed from sin.

SUKTA II. (XXV.)

THE hymn is addressed by S'unḥas'épa to Varuṇa: the metre is Gáyatrí.

AS people commit mistakes, so do we, Divine Varuṇa, daily disfigure thy worship with errors.

2. Being 'disregardful and bent upon destroying,² do not make us the objects of death; being thyself wrought up with rage, do not make us the objects of thy rage.

3. For our happiness, we propitiate thy mind, Varuṇa, with our praises, as a charioteer, his weary horse.

4. My meditations, shorn of anger, revert to the desire of highly precious life,³ as birds hover round their nest.

5. When, for our happiness, shall we bring here Varuṇa—the powerful, leader of men, and the beholder of many?

¹ These bands, according to Sáyana, are the legatures fastening the head, feet and the waist.

² Sáyana explains the word Haṭnavé as páṇahananas'ilasya, i.e., "Who by nature destroys sins." But as Varuṇa is described here as "being enraged and bent upon destroying," it is better to adopt the literal word meaning.

³ The Text is Vasya ishtaye. Sáyana explains it as Vasumatāḥ, precious, and supplies jeevanasya, life, after it.

6. Being pleased with the sacrificer, offering clarified butter, (Mitra and Varuṇa) are partaking of the common oblation, and do not disregard it.

7. He, who knows the course of birds, flying in the sky;—he, abiding in the ocean, knows the course of ships.¹

8. He, accepting the rite, knows the twelve months; yielding (their respective) productions; who, also, knows what is supplementarily produced.²

9. He, who knows the path of the vast, the beautiful and the excellent wind; and who knows those who live above.

10. Varuṇa, the accepter of holy rites, the performer of excellent deeds, has sat down, amongst the Divine Progeny,³ to exercise supreme dominion (over them).

11. Through him the wise man sees all the marvels that have been and will be worked.

¹ This is the duty of Varuṇa, as described in the Védâs; for he is the Deity of Water.

² Veddyā upajāyate, who knows what is upa additionally or subordinately produced. The expression is obscure, but in connection with the preceding, Védamāsodwādasa, who knows the twelve months, we cannot doubt the correctness of the Scholiast's conclusion, that the thirteenth, the supplementary or intercalary month of the Hindu luni-solar year, is alluded to; "that thirteenth or additional month which is produced of itself, in connection with the year." The passage is important, as indicating the concurrent use of the lunar and solar years at this period, and the method of adjusting the one to the other.—Wilson.

12. May that greatly wise¹ son of Aditi, direct us every day in a righteous path and prolong our lives.

13. Wearing golden armour,² Varuṇa clothes his well-nourished (body) whence the rays are spread around.

14. Whom enemies dare not offend; the oppressors of mankind (cannot oppress him); the iniquitous (venture not to displease) that Divine (Being).

15. Who has made profuse food for mankind, and, especially, for our belly:

16. My meditations ever turn back to him, who is seen by many, as the kine return to the pastures.

17. Since my sweet oblation has been prepared, do you, like the offerer, eat the valued (oblation); we shall, then, have a pleasant conversation.

18. I have seen him, who is worthy of being seen by all. I have seen his car upon the earth: he has accepted my laudation.

19. Hear this my invocation, Varuṇa; make us happy to-day; desirous of protection I laud thee.

20. O intelligent Varuṇa, thou shinest over heaven and earth, and all the world; do thou hear and reply (to my prayer, seeking) prosperity.

21. Loosen our upper bands, the central and the lower, so that we may live.

1 The word in the Text is Sukratu. Sâyana explains it as Shovona-prajña, i.e., "greatly wise." It may, also, mean "The performer of good deeds."

2 Sâyana explains dr̥pim hiranyam as Suvarnamāyam Kavacham, or mail "made of gold." It has been translated by some as golden raiment.

SUKTA-III. (XXVI.)

THE Author is supposed to be S'unhásopa; the hymn is addressed to Agni: the metre is Gáyatri.

O THOU, worthy of being honoured with a sacrifice, O lord of food, cover thy investing radiance;¹ complete this our sacrifice.

2. Ever youthful, adorable Agni, (becoming) our ministrant priest, (lauded) with brilliant strains, (invested) with radiance, (do thou sit here).

3. O adorable (Agni), thou art [donor] (i.e., thou dost give us all desirable objects); as a father, to a son; as a kinsman, to a kinsman; as a friend, to a friend.

4. May Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryyamaṇ,² destroyers of enemies, sit down upon our sacred grass, as they did at the sacrifice of Manu³.

5. O sacrificer, born before us,⁴ be pleased with this our sacrifice and with our friendship, and listen to this thy laudation.

6. Whatever daily and plentiful oblation we offer to any other Deity, is assuredly offered to thee.

7. May (Agni), the lord of men, the sacrificing priest, the gracious, the adorable, be loved of us; may we, possessed of holy fires, be loved of thee.

8. As the effulgent (priests), possessed of holy fires, have taken charge of our oblation, so we, with holy fires, pray to thee.

² A monthly form of the Sun, said to preside over the Twilight.

³ The Scholiast explains it as "the sacrifice of Manu, the Prajápati."

⁴ Purvya Hotri, i.e., "The Hotri, born before us." Sáyana refers to Agni.

9. O immortal Agni, let us, both—mortals (and yourself), praise mutually.

10. Agni, son of strength,¹ (accept, this our sacrifice and laudation, with all fires, and grant us food.

SUKTA IV. (XXVII.)

THE Rishi, the Deity and metre are the same as before, except in the last stanza, where the metre is Trishtubh and the Vis'wadevâs are addressed.

I (PROCEED) to address thee, the lord paramount of sacrifices, with encomiastic verses, (for thou dost disperse our enemies) like a horse (who brushes off flies with) his tail.²

2. May he, the son of strength, who moves everywhere quickly, be propitiated with us and shower down (wished-for objects).

3. Do thou Agni, who goest everywhere, ever protect us, whether near or at a distance from men wishing to do us mischief.

4. Agni, announce, to the Celestials, this our offering and these altogether new Gâyatri verses.

5. Reach us to the most excellent food, (that is in heaven), to the middling food (that is in the mid-air); grant us the wealth, that is near (i.e., on the earth).

6. Thou, Chitrabhânu,³ art the distributor of wealth, as the waves of a river are parted by interjacent

¹ This epithet is applicable to Agni, for the strength required for rubbing the sticks together so as to generate fire.

² The literal meaning is,—“We praise thee like a horse with a tail.” The Commentator supplies the rest.

³ A name of Agni: literally, he who has wonderful or various lustre.

(islets) ; thou pourest immediate (rewards upon the giver (of oblations).

7. The mortal, whom thou, Agni, protectest in battle, whom thou despatchest to battle, will, always, get food.

8. O subduer of foes, no one will be able to defeat this thy worshipper, for he has well-known strength,

9. May he, adored of all, take us with horses through the battle ; may he, (propitiated) by the intelligent priests, be the bestower (of profuse riches).

10. O thou, who art awakened¹ by praises, enter into the oblation, for the completion of the sacrifice that benefits all mankind. (The worshipper) offers this agreeable laudation to the terrific (Agni).

11. May the vast, illimitable, smoke-bannered, effulgent Agni, be pleased with our rites and bestow on us food.

12. May Agni, the lord of men, the invoker and messenger of the Celestials, the effulgent, hear us with our hymns as a rich man (listens to encomiastic verses).

13. Salutation unto the great Deities ; salutation unto the lesser, salutation unto the young, salutation unto the old ; we adore the Deities, as we are able ; may I not omit the laudation of the elder Divinities.

SUKTA V. (XXVIII.)

THE Rishi is S'onhasépa; the metre of the first six stanzas is Anushtubh; of the three last, Gâyatri. The first four stanzas are addressed to Indra; the two next, to the domestic mortar; the next two, to the mortar and pestle; and the ninth is of a miscellaneous appropriation either to Haris'chandra, a Prajapati; to the Adhis'avana or the effused libation; to the Soma-Juice; or to the skin (charîma) on which it is poured.

INDRA, in the sacrifice in which the broad-based stone¹ is raised to extract the Soma-Juice, consider as thy own and drink the effusions of the mortar.

2. Indra, (in the rite) in which the two platters,² for containing the juice, as (broad) as a woman's hips are used, consider as thy own and drink the effusion of the mortar.

3. Indra, (in the rite) in which the housewife practises egress from, and ingress into, (the sacrificial chamber),³ consider as thy own and drink the effusions of the mortar.

4. Where they find the churning-staff (with a chord),⁴ like reins to control (a horse), Indra, consider as thy own and drink the effusions of the mortar.

1 The stone-pestle, used for extracting Juice from Soma-Plants.

2 The word is adhishavanyâ, two shallow plates for receiving and pouring out Soma-Juice.

3 The Scholiast explains the terms of the Text, Apachyava and Upachyava, going in and out of the hall (s'âlâ); but it should, perhaps, rather be moving up and down, with reference to the action of the pestle.—Wilson.

4 In churning the stick is moved by a rope passed round the handle of it, and round a post planted in the ground as a pivot.

5. Although, O Mortar,¹ thou art present in every house, (yet) give forth (in this rite) a lusty sound, like the drum of a victorious army.

6. Lord of the forest,² as the wind blows before thee, so do thou, O Mortar, dress this Soma-Juice to be drunk by Indra.

7. Implements of sacrifice, bestowers of food, loud-sounding, sport again and again, like horses of Indra champing the grain.

8. Do you two forest lords, of agreeable form, prepare with beautiful instruments of libations, our sweet (Soma-)Juices for Indra.

9. Bring the remains of the Soma-Juice from the expressing instruments and place them on a cart, sprinkle it upon the sacred (Kus'a-grass) and place (the remainder upon the cow-hide.)³

1 The mortar is usually a heavy wooden vessel, found in every farmer's cottage: according to Sâyana, it is the Divinities presiding over the mortar and pestle, not the implements themselves, that are addressed.—Wilson.

2 A large tree, but here meaning the mortar.

3 Sâyana says that this verse is addressed to Harishchandra, either the ministering priest, or a Divinity so named. His function is not clearly mentioned. As it appears from the Text he is to place the remains of the libation, from the instrument, upon a cart (Sakatasya-upari) as supplied by the Commentator. It should be cast upon the Pavitra, which, as explained in the comment on the Yajur-Vêda, means two or three blades of Kus'a-grass serving as a fitter. It should then be placed on a cow-hide. According to Mr. Stevenson, the Soma-Juice, after being expressed, is filtered through a strainer made of goat's hair and is received in a sort of ewer,

SUKTA VI. (XXIX.)

THE Rishi is Sunhas'épa : the Deity is Indra : the metre Pankti.

TRUTHFUL Indra, the drinker of Soma-Juice, even if we be unworthy, do thou, Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

2. O powerful lord of food, O thou, having a handsome prominent nose, ever enduring is thy favour ; therefore, Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

3. Put to sleep (the two female messengers of Yama) ; looking at each other, let them sleep, never waking :¹ Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

4. May our enemies sleep, and our friends, O hero, be awake. Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

5. Indra, kill this ass (our enemy), lauding thee with such discordant speech.² Do thou Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

6. Let the (adverse) wind, of crooked course, descend at a distance from the forest. Indra, of pro-

¹ The Text is very elliptical and obscure : it is literally, "Put to sleep the two reciprocally looking ; let them sleep, not being awakened. That two females are intended is inferable from the epithets being in the dual number and feminine gender ; and the Scholiast calls them, upon what authority is not stated, two female messengers of Yama : Yama-dutyan Mithudrisâ, he explains as "looking, after the manner of twins, at each other.—Wilson.

² Nivantan-papayâmuva praising with this speech that is of the nature of abuse. Nindâ rupayâ Vâchâ is the addition of the Scholiast, who adds, therefore he is called an ass, as braying or uttering harsh sounds intolerable to hear.—Wilson.

Use riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

7. Kill all those who revile us ; kill every one who injures us. Indra, of profuse riches, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

SUKTA VII. (XXX.)

THE Rishi is Sun̥has'ĕpa; of the twenty-two stanzas the hymn contains, sixteen are addressed to Indra; three, to the Aswins; and three, to Ushás or personified Dawn; the metre is Gāyatrī except in verse fifteen where it is Trishtubh.

LET us, who are desirous of food, please this your Indra, who is highly powerful, and of a hundred sacrifices, with drops (of Soma-Juice), as a well (is filled with water).

2. May he come near a hundred pure, and a thousand distilled, (libations); as (water), to low places.

3. All these (libations) being collected together, for the satisfaction of powerful Indra, are contained in his belly; as water, in the ocean.

4. This libation is (prepared) for thee; thou approachest it as a pigeon, his pregnant (mate); and, on that account, do thou accept our words (i.e., prayers).

5. O lord of riches, O hero, worthy of being lauded, such is thy laudatory hymn; may thy lordly power be gratifying and genuine.

6. S'atakṛatu, be anxious to protect us in this battle: we will talk together in other matters.

7. At the commencement of every work, in every battle, we invoke, as friends, the most powerful Indra for our defence.

8. If he hears our invocation, let him come to us with thousand of defences and food.

9. I invoke the male being (Indra), who visits many adorers from his ancient dwelling place,¹—thee, Indra, whom, my father formerly invoked.

10. O thou, who art adored of all, invoked by many, a friend and protector of dwellings, we implore thee, (to be favourable) to thy worshippers.

11. O drinker of the Soma-Juice, O holder of the thunderbolt, O friend, (confer upon) us—thy friends and drinkers of the Soma-Juice—(numberless cows), with projecting jaws.²

12. O drinker of the Soma-Juice, (O) wielder of the thunderbolt, O friend, so be it; do thou so do, that we may seek thy favour, for our well-being.

13. Indra, being propitiated with us, we may have (profuse food) and cows, robust and rich in milk, with which we may be happy.

14. O high-spirited (Indra), let some other Deity as thou art, self-pleased, (and) solicited by us, grant thy praisers (all desired-for objects), as (they whirl) the axle of the wheels (of a car).³

¹ The Revd. K. M. Banerjea has translated the passage thus,—“From the site of our ancient home.” This rendering does not appear inappropriate, for immediately after the Rishi says,—“Whom my father invoked formerly.”

³ The verse is, throughout, very elliptical and obscure, and is intelligible only through the liberal additions of the Scholiast. The simile is, literally, “like the axle of two cars,”—aksham na chakrayoh, which the Commentator renders, rathasya chakrayoh, “of the two wheels of a car.”

15. S'atakratu, thou conferest upon them, such riches as thy praisers desire, as the axle (révolves) with the movements (of the waggon).¹

16. Indra has ever acquired riches (from his enemies), with his champing, neighing and snorting (horses); he, liberal and performer of many deeds, has given us, as a gift, a golden chariot.²

17. As'wins, come here, with viands borne on many horses; O destroyer of enemies, (let our house) be filled with cattle and with gold.

18. O destroyer of enemies, your chariot, harnessed for both alike, is imperishable; it courses, As'wins, through the firmament.

19. You have placed one wheel on the top of the imperishable (rock), while the other revolves in the sky.³

20. Ushâ, fond of laudation, immortal, what mortal is capable of offering enjoyment worthy of thee?⁴ O mighty one, whom dost thou attain?

and adds prakshipanti, "they cast or turn over." The phrase seems to have puzzled the Translators;.....Stevenson has, "that blessings may come round to them with the same certainty that the wheel revolves round the axle;" Dr. Roer, "as a wheel is brought to a chariot;"..... The meaning intended, is, probably, the hope that blessings should follow praise [as the pivot on which they revolve, as the revolutions of the wheels of a car turn upon the axle.—Wilson.

1 It is like the axle by the acts: The Scholiast defines 'the acts,' the movements of the car or waggon.

2 By Indra, pleased; a golden chariot was given to S'unḥas'épa.

3 The myth has not been explained by the Commentator. Wilson says:—"It may be connected with the Pourânîk notion of the single wheel of the chariot of the Sun."

4 Literally,—"What mortal enjoyeth thee?" We have adopted Sâyaṇa's interpretation.

"What mortal can be equal for thy enjoyment?"—The Revd. K. M. Banerjêa:

21. Diffusive, variegated, effulgent Ushâ, we know not (thy form), whether from near or distance.

22. O daughter of heaven, come, with these viands, and perpetuate wealth in us.¹

ANUVAKA VII.

SUKTA I. (XXXI.)

THE Deity is Agni; the Rishi is Hiranyastûpa, the son of Ângiras. The eighth, sixteenth, and the eighteenth stanzas are in the Trishtuḅh metre; the rest, in ġagatī.

THOU, Agni, was the first Ângiras Rishi; ² a Deity, thou wast the auspicious friend of the Deities. In thy rite the intelligent, the rite-knowing, the bright-weaponed Maruts were created.

2. Thou intelligent Agni, the first and chiefest Ângiras, gracest the rite of the Celestials. (Thou art,) for the behoof of all the world, manifold,³ intelligent,

"Who and where was there a mortal to be loved to thee."—Max Müller.

¹ Ushâ was one of the Deities adored by the Aryans. Her name and worship is, therefore, mentioned by the various branches of the Aryans. Eos and Aurora are but the different names of Ushâ.

"The heroine of the stories must be the Dawn, aptly represented as a charming maiden, and her names in the Rig-Vêda, are Arj'unî, Brisaya, Dahanâ, Ushas, Saramâ, and Saranyu, and all these names re-appear among the Greeks, as Argynoris, Briseis, Daphne, Eos, Helen, and Erinys."—Râjendra Lâlâ Mittra's Indo-Aryans, Vol. II., article, Primitive Aryans.

² According to Sâyana, he was the first, as being the progenitor of all the Ângiras, as the coals or cinders of the sacrificial fire.

³ Vibhu means, "of many kinds," referring to the different fires of a sacrifice.

the offspring of two mothers,¹ and presents everywhere, in various ways, for mankind.

3. Thou, Agni, art first in the Wind;² be manifest to the sacrificer, working with a desire to the celebration of an agreeable rite; heaven and earth tremble (at thy power); appointed as a priest, thou dost sustain the burthen in the rite; O Lord of dwellinghouses, thou hast worshipped the venerable Celestials.

4. Thou, Agni, hast announced heaven to Manu,³ thou hast done more good to Pururavâs, who has done good to thee.⁴ When thou art liberated by the attrition of thy parents, they take thee first to the east, then to the west, of the altar.⁵

5. Thou, Agni, art the showerer (of desired-for objects), the multiplier of the prosperity (of thy worshipper); thou art lauded when the ladle is lifted up; thou, the only giver of food, dost first bestow light upon him, who fully understands the invocation and makes the oblation,⁶ and then upon all men,

1 Dvîmâtâ, either of two mothers, i.e., the two sticks, or the maker of two, i.e., heaven and earth.—Wilson.

2 Literally, it means, "first in, or on, or over, the Wind," prathamô, wâtariṣvane. It means "Thou dost precede the Wind." According to the Scholiast, it alludes to the Text agnirvâyurâditya, fire, air, sun, in which Agni precedes Vâyu.

3 It is said that Agni communicated to Manu, that heaven is to be acquired by pious deeds.

4 We have given the literal rendering. Wilson's rendering "Thou hast more than requited Pururavâs doing homage to thee," is more explanatory. The agency of Pururavâs in the generation of fire by attrition, and its employment in the form of three sacrificial fires, as told in the Vishnu Purânam may be here alluded to.

5 The fire first is applied to kindle the Ahavanîya fire, and then to the Gârhapatya.

6 He who knows the âhuti, with the Vasat kriti, or utterance of the word Vashat at the moment of pouring the butter on the fire.

6. Agni, endued with most excellent knowledge, thou leadest the man, who follows improper ways, to deeds that are fitted to reclaim him; thou, who, in the strife of heroes, (grateful to them) as widely-scattered wealth, destroyest, in the combat, the mighty by the feeble.

7. Thou sustainest, Agni, that mortal (who worships thee) for daily food in the most excellent and immortal station: thou conferest on the sage, who seeks both kinds of birth,¹ happiness and food:

8. O Agni, thou art lauded by us for giving wealth; give us a son, illustrious and celebrator of sacrifices; by the new son we shall multiply sacrifices. Preserve us perfectly, heaven and earth, along with the Celestials.

9. Immaculate Agni, wide awake among the Celestials, (living) near (thy) parents² and conferring upon us embodied (son), awake³ us. Be favourably disposed towards the offerer of the oblation; for thou, auspicious Agni, has sown all riches.

10. Thou, Agni, art favourably disposed towards us; thou art our father,⁴ thou art the giver of the duration of life; we are thy kinsmen. Urrable Agni, hundreds and thousands of riches are thine, who art the defender of pious deeds and attended by good men.

1 The sense of the expression is not at all clear. The Commentator says, "For the acquirement of bipeds and quadrupeds."

2 Agni's parents are heaven and earth.

3 The Text is literally rendered. The meaning, however, is, as the Commentator says, "favour us."

4 The word in the Text is pità, i.e., father. Sáyana explains it as Pálakāṇ, protector.

11. The Celestials, formerly, made thee, Agni, the human general of human Nahusha;¹ they made Ilâ² the instructress of Manu, when the son of my father was born.

12. Agni, worthy of being lauded, protect us, who are opulent with thy protection, as also the persons (of our sons); thou art the defender of the cattle of the son of my son,³ who is busily engaged in thy adoration.

13. Agni, thou art the protector of the sacrificer; being near at hand, for the protection of the sacrifice, thou shinest as four-eyed.⁴ Thou dost accept, with the mind, the hymn of thine adorer, who offers oblation to thee (who art) harmless and a benefactor.

14. Thou, Agni, desirest that (thy worshipper), lauding (thee) profusely, may get desirable and most excellent wealth; thou art called the well-intentioned father (i.e., protector) of the worshipper, who ever needs protection; thou, who art greatly wise, instructest the

1 It is mentioned in the Vishnu Purānam that, Nahusha, the grandson of Pururavás, was precipitated from the celestial region for his arrogance, but it is nowhere mentioned that Agni was his general.

2 Frequent passages, in the Védás, ascribe to Ilá the first institution of the rules of performing sacrifices; thus in the Text she is termed S'ásanî, which the Scholiast explains Dharmopadésa karttrî, "The giver of instruction in duty." The Taittirîyas are quoted for the Text,—"Ilâ, the daughter of Manu, was the illustrator of sacrifice;" and the Vája-saneyis for the passage,—"She, Ilâ, said to Manu, 'Appoint me to officiate in sacrifices, principal and supplementary, for, by me, shalt thou obtain all thy desires.'" M. Burnouf questions,—If Ilâ ever occurs in the sense of daughter of Manu in the Védás, and restricts its meaning to 'earth' or to 'speech.'—Wilson.

3 This hymn must have been written by the Rishi in his old age.

4 Illuminating the four cardinal points.

infant (worshipper) and (determinest) the points of the horizon.¹

15. Thou, Agni, dost protect, on all sides, the man who gives presents (to the priests), like a well-stitched armour.² The man,—who keeps sweet viands in his house, and, with them, entertains (his guests),—performs the sacrifice of life³ and becomes an example of heaven.

16. Agni, forgive us this our negligence, this path in which we have gone astray. Thou art attainable unto those who offer libations of the Soma, art their father (protector), art of a favourable disposition and the accomplisher (of rites); thou makest thyself visible to mortals.⁴

17. Pure Agni, who goest about (to receive oblations), come, proceeding to the hall of sacrifice, as did Manu, Ângiras, Yayâti and others of old, bring here

1 It refers to a legend in which the Celestials, desirous of celebrating a sacrifice, could not determine the cardinal points until Agni removed the difficulty by ascertaining the South.

2 Varma [syûtam, sewn armour. The Kāvācha was, perhaps, a quilted jacket, such as is still, sometimes, worn; the Scholiast says, "formed with needles without leaving a fissure."—Wilson.

3 The expression is, rather, ambiguous—jīva-yājāṃ yajate, "sacrifices a life-sacrifice." It seems rather, to denote an offering (food and hospitality) to a living being, the Nri-Yajña, worship of man, of Manu. The expression, however, is not incompatible with the practice of killing a cow for the food of a guest, thence denominated, as M. Langlois remarks, goghna "a cow-slayer." The Scholiast sanctions either sense, explaining the phrase either jīvayajana sahitaṃ yajñam, "a sacrifice with sacrifice of life," or jīvanishpādyam, "that by which life is to be supported;" he, also, explains jīvayājāṃ by jīvāḥ, living, priests, who are worshipped by gifts.—Wilson.

4 Rishikrit, becoming present through desire for the offered oblation.

the Divinities, make them sit on the sacred grass and offer them grateful (oblation).

18. Agni, do thou thrive through this our hymn, which we compose according to our ability and knowledge; do thou grant us, by it, riches, and endow us with right undertaking, securing (sufficient) food.

SUKTA II. (XXXII.)

The Rishi and metre are the same; the hymn is addressed to Indra.¹

DESCRIBE the brave deeds of Indra, which the wielder of the thunderbolt had, formerly, performed; he killed the clouds; he cast the waters down (to the earth); he cut (a way) for the torrents of the mountain.²

2. He killed (clove) the cloud, seeking refuge on the mountain: Twashtri sharpened his far-whirling bolt; the currents of water speedily proceeded to the ocean as cows (hasten) to their calves.

3. Acting like a bull, he quaffed the Soma-juice, he drank of the libation at the threefold² sacrifice. Maghavân took his arrow and the thunderbolt, and, therewith, struck the first-born of the clouds.

1 In this and subsequent Sûktas, we have an ample elucidation of the original purport of the legend of Indra's slaying Vritra, which the Pourânîc writers converted into a combat between Indra, the king of the Celestials and Vritra, the king of the Asuras. In the Vêdâs, this legend is, merely, an allegorical narrative of the production of rain. Vritra, also named Ahi, is nothing but the accumulation of condensed vapour. Indra, with his thunderbolt or atmospheric influence, divides the accumulated clouds, which produced rain, descending upon the earth and moistening the fields. There are many hymns addressed to the slayer of Vritra before the Aryans migrated from their early home.

2 The three sacrifices termed Jyotish, Gah and A'yu.

4. Since thou hast killed the first-born of the clouds, thou hast destroyed the delusions of the deluders and, then, creating the Sun, the Dawn, the Firmament, thou hast got no enemy (to oppose thee).¹

5. With his highly destructive thunderbolt, Indra killed the mutilated Vṛitra, covering all with darkness; like the trunks of trees felled by the axe, Ahi lies prostrate on the earth.

6. The haughty Vṛitra, as if he had no combatant to match him, invited Indra to encounter, the great hero, the destroyer of many, the vanquisher of enemies; he has not escaped the contact of the fate of (Indra's) enemies. The enemy of Indra has crushed the (banks of the rivers).²

7. Vṛitra, having no foot or hand, desired to combat with Indra, who struck him with the thunder-bolt upon his shoulder (resembling the summit) of a mountain. As one shorn of virility, desirous of acquiring equality with one possessed of it (does not succeed, so did Vṛitra); then Vṛitra, mutilated of many members, slept.

8. Delightful waters flow over him lying prostrate on earth as a river (overflows) its broken (banks). Ahi has laid himself low under the feet of the waters which Vṛitra had obstructed by his glorious power.

9. Vṛitra's mother was bending over her son when Indra struck her nether part with his arrow, so the mother was above and the son underneath. Then Dānu,¹ (Vritra's mother) slept (with her son) like a cow with its calf.

¹ By scattering the clouds and dispersing the darkness, Indra may be said to be the parent of the Sun and daylight; leaving no enemy that is, nothing to obscure the atmosphere.—Wilson.

10. The waters flow over the nameless body of Vritra tossed into the midst of never-stopping, never-resting currents. Indra's enemy has slept a long darkness.²

11. The waters, the wives of Dāsa (Vritra) stood obstructed, guarded by Ahi like the cows by Panin; the passage of water stood obstructed (by Vritra); by killing Vritra he set it open.

12. When the single resplendent Vritra returned the blow (inflicted), Indra, by thy thunder-bolt, thou becamest like a horse's tail.³ Thou hast rescued the kine; thou hast acquired, Heroe, the Soma-Juice⁴; thou hast let loose the seven rivers to flow.⁵

1 Dānu may be derived either from dā to cut or from Danu, the wife of Kashyapa and mother of the Dānavas.

2 In the text is tamas, literally darkness; the commentator explains it as long sleep like death.

3 As a horse drives away the flies by its tail.

4 Alluding, it is said, to a legend of Indra's having drunk a libation prepared by Trisiras, also killed by Indra and to avenge which Vritra was created by Twashtri—Wilson.

5 According to one Paurāṇik legend, the Ganges divided on its descent into seven streams, termed the Nalini, Pavāni, and Hlādinī, going to the east; the Chakshu, Sitā and Sindhu to the west, and the Bhagiratha or the Ganges proper, to the south. In one place in the Mahābhārata, the seven rivers are termed Vasvāṅkasārā, Nalini, Pavani, Gangā, Sitā, Sindhu, Jambunadi; in another Gangā, Yamunā, Plakshagā, Rathasthā, Saryu, Gomati and Gandaki. In a text quoted and commented on by Yāksha we have ten rivers, named, Gangā, Yamunā, Saraswati, Satudri, Parushni, Aikni, *Marudvridh*⁸, Vitastā, Arjikiyā and Sushomā; of these, the Pārushni is identified with the Iravati, the Arjiki with the Vipṛsā and the Sushomā with the Sindhu—

13. Neither the lightning, nor the thunder, nor the rain which he showered, nor the thunder-bolt harmed Indra when he and Ahi fought ; and Maghavat triumphed also over other attacks.

14. When fear¹ entered, Indra, into thy heart when about to kill Ahi, what other killer of him didst thou expect, that, afraid, thou didst traverse ninety and nine streams like a (swift) hawk ?

15. Then Indra, the holder of the thunder-bolt, became the king of the moveable and the immoveable, of (hornless) quiet animals and horned cattle ; he lives as the king of men ; he comprehended all things (within him) as the circumference comprehends the spokes of a wheel.

Nir 3, 26. The original enumeration of seven appears to be that which has given rise to the specifications of the Purânâs.—Wilson.

7 This fear was the uncertainty whether he should destroy Vritra or not. In the Purânâs however he is described as fearing his enemy's power.

THIRD ADHYA'YA.
SUKTA III. (XXXIII.)

THE Rishi is Hiranyastupa; Indra is the Deity and the metre is Trishtubh.

COME, let us go to Indra,¹ (to recover our stolen cattle), for he, shorn of malice, increases our most excellent understanding; thereupon he will confer on us perfect knowledge of their wealth of kine.

2. Like a hawk to its nest, I fly to that Indra who is invoked by worshippers in battle, adoring, with exemplary hymns, him who is invincible and the giver of wealth.

3. The commander of the entire army has bound his quiver (on his back); the lord² drives the cattle to him whom he pleases. Indra, endued with most excellent understanding, giving us profuse wealth, take not advantage of us like a dealer.³

4. Indeed, Indra, thou hadst killed alone the wealthy robber⁴ with thy hard thunder-bolt, (although the powerful Maruts) existed near thee. Coming with

1 The Commentator says: "The celestials are supposed to say this to one another when their cows have been stolen.

2 The word in the text is Arya, which means master, lord.

3 Lit. do not be to us a Pani, a trafficker, from pana, price. Indra is requested not to make a hard bargain with his worshippers.

4 Vritra, the Dasyu, literally a robber but apparently used in contrast to Arja as if intending the uncivilized tribes of India. He is called wealthy because, according to the Vajasaneyis, he comprehends within him all gods, all knowledge, all oblations—Wilson.

the desire of meeting with manifold destructiveness from thy bow, the Sanakas, the neglecters of sacrifice, died.

5. Indra, those neglecters of sacrifice, contending with the sacrificers, fled with averted faces. O lord of horses, O thou, who dost never retreat from the battle-field, O terrific (Indra), thou didst blow the violators of religious rites off the celestial region, earth and sky.

6. They desired to fight with the army of faultless (Indra); men of praiseworthy characters³ encouraged him. Like the emasculated fighting with men, they, scattered before him, and conscious (of their worthlessness, fled by precipitous paths.

7. Thou hast slain them in battle, Indra, weeping or laughing at the farthest end of the sky; thou hast consumed the robber (having dragged him) from the celestial region and hast protected the hymns (of the worshipper) pouring libations of Soma-Juice and lauding thee.

8. Bedecked with gold and jewels they covered the surface of the earth. They could not conquer Indra: he dispersed them with the rising sun.³

1 The followers of Vritra are called by this name, the meaning of which, as explained by the Scholiast Snán-Káyanti they who eulogize benefactors. They are called ayajwands, non-sacrificers, for the followers of Vritra were hostile to all Vedic rituals.

2 These men were, according to the Scholiast, Angirasas engaged in offering libations to Indra for nine months, in order to give him courage.

3 The followers of Vritra are described as the shades of the night which are dispersed by the rising of the Sun.

9. Indra, as thou enjoyest both the celestial region and earth, investing the universe with thy greatness, thou hast blown away the robbers with the hymns which are repeated on behalf of those who do not understand their meaning.¹

10. When the waters descended not upon the ends of the earth and overspread not that giver of affluence with its productions then Indra, the showerer, grasped his bolt and with its brightness milked out the waters from the darkness (cloud).

11. The waters flowed to provide the food of the navigable (rivers). Then Indra, with highly powerful and fatal weapon, killed, within few days, (Vritra) whose thoughts were always with him.²

12. Indra pierced (i.e., set free the waters) obstructed by (Vritra) while sleeping in the caverns of the earth and killed the horned dryer up (of the world)³

1 This passage is rather obscure, owing to the vague purport of the preposition abhi; amanyamánán abhi manyamánair brahmabhih, with prayers to be understood over those not understanding; that is, according to the Scholiast, those Yajamánás or institutors of sacrifices, who merely repeat the mantras without understanding their meaning, are nevertheless to be protected by, or are to reap the benefit of those mantras; and with mantras or prayers of this description Indra is to be animated, or empowered to blow away or scatter the followers of Vritra, clouds and darkness. Rosen renders the expression, carminibus respicientibus eos qui tuorum hymnorum sensum non perspiciunt; M. Langlois has (excite) contre ces mecreans par nos chants respectueux—Wilson.

2 Sáyana has made the expression an adjective of Vritra. But Ramánáth Saraswati has made it an adjective of Indra explaining "With all the skill of his understanding Indra slew Vritra."

3 Sriningam Sushnam, the first, literally, having horns, the Scholiast explains, furnished with weapons like the horns of bulls and Thou, Maghavan, with equal swiftmess and strength didst slay, with thy thunder-bolt, the enemy defying thee to battle.

13. The active weapon of Indra fell upon his enemies; with his sharp and excellent (weapon) he destroyed their cities; he then reached Vritra with his thunder-bolt and killing him exhilarated his mind.

14. Thou, Indra, hast protected Kutsa whose praises thou dost solicit: thou hast defended the excellent Dasádyu engaged in battle; the dust of thy horse's hoofs ascended the celestial region; the son of Switra, rose up (from waters) to be foremost among men. 11 buffaloes, Sushnam, literally drying, drying up, is applied to Vritra or or the cloud, as withholding the moisture necessary for fertility—Wilson.

11 Kutsa is said to be a Rishi, founder of a Gotra, a religious family or school, and is elsewhere spoken of as the particular friend of Indra or even as his son; he is the reputed author of several hymns: we have a Purukutsa in the Puránās, but he was a Raja, the son of Mándhatri. Dasádyu is also called a Rishi; but he appears to have been a warrior; no mention of him is found in the Puránās. The same may be said of Swaitreya or Switrya, the son of a female termed Switra. Switrya is described in the next stanza as having hidden himself in a pool of water through fear of his enemies—Wilson.

SUKTA IV. (XXXIV.)

THE Rishi the same; the hymn is addressed to Aswins; the metre is Trishtubh, except in the ninth and twelfth stanzas in which it is Jagati.

INTELLIGENT Aswins, be present with us thrice¹ to-day. Vast is your vehicle as well as your munificence; your union is regulated like that of the shining (day) and dewy (night); be kindly subject to intelligent (priests.)

2. There are three adamantinè wheels in your chariot, conveying sweet articles of food; all (celestials) have known (it) when (starting) with Venâ the beloved of Soma;² there are three columns placed (above it) for support;³ and in it do you travel thrice by night and thrice by day.

3. Thrice in a day do you rectify the faults (of your worshippers); sprinkle thrice to-day the oblation with sweetness; and grant us Aswins, strength-giving food, thrice, evening and morning.

4. Visit, Aswins, thrice our house, and the person who is engaged in doing good unto us; come thrice to the person who deserves your protection and instruct us in three-fold knowledge; grant us gratifying fruits thrice and thrice shower food on us as (Indra pours down) rain.

5. Aswins, thrice confer upon us riches; thrice approach the divine rite; thrice preserve our intellects;

1 This refers to the three diurnal sacrifices at dawn, mid-day or sunset or to the deities passing equally through the heavens, the firmament and the earth.

2 This refers to the marriage of Venâ with Soma when the Aswins filled their cart, with all sorts of good things. This legend is not to be found in the Purânâs.

3 This means the posts created on the cart which the riders may lay hold of.

thrice grant us prosperity and food. The daughter of the Sun has got upon your three-wheeled car.

6. Thrice give us, Aswins, the celestial medicaments and those of earth and those of the firmament ; confer on my son the prosperity of Sanyu ;¹ protectors of wholesome medicinal herbs, give us pleasure about the three humours (of the body.)²

7. Aswins, who are to be thrice adored, repose daily in the triple (couch of) sacred grass upon the earth ; O car-warrior Nâsatyas,³ go from afar to the three-fold⁴ (place of sacrifice) as the vital airs to living bodies.

8. Come, Aswins, with the seven mother-streams ;⁵ the three rivers are ready ;⁶ the three-fold oblation is prepared ; rising above the three worlds, you defend the sun in the sky, who is established for both day and night.⁷

9. Where, Nâsatyas, are the three wheels of your triangular car ? Where the three fastings and props (of the awning). When will the powerful ass be harnessed to your chariot that you may come to the sacrifice ?

10. Come, Nâsatyas, to the sacrifice ; the oblation is offered ; drink the juice with mouths, that relish the sweet savour. Before dawn, Savitri has sent your wonderful car, shining with clarified butter (to bring you) to the rite.

11. Come Nâsatyas, with thirty-three¹ deities here to drink of the sweet (Soma-Juice); prolong our lives, remove our faults, restrain our enemies and live always with us.

12. Borne in your car traversing the three worlds, bring us, Aswins, wealth attended with male progeny; I call upon you, both listening to me, for protection; be to us for vigour in battle.

SUKTA V. (XXXV.)

THE Rishi the same; the first and ninth verses are in the Jagati metre, the rest in the Trishtubh. The deity of the whole hymn is Savitri, but in the first stanza, Agni, Mitra, Varuna and Night are mentioned as subordinate deities.

I INVOKE Agni first, for protection: I invoke Mitra and Varuna for protection; I invoke Night who is the root of rest to the world; I invoke the divine Savitri for protection.

2. Traversing, again and again, the dark firmament, arousing mortal and immortal, the divine Savitri travels in his golden chariot seeing the world.

3. The divine Savitri travels by an upward and downward path;² worthy of adoration, he travels with two white steeds; he comes here from a distance, destroying all sins.

4. The adorable Savitri, of many rays, having power to (remove) darkness from the world, has got upon his chariot, standing near, decorated with many kinds of golden ornaments and furnished with golden yokes.

² Ascending from sun-rise to the meridian, and then declining.

5 His white-footed horses, S'yáva, harnessed to his chariot with a golden yoke, have shown light to mankind. Men and all the worlds are present before the divine Savitri.

6. There are three regions; two are near the sun and one leads to the dwelling of Yama.¹ The immortal (luminaries) depend upon Savitri as a car upon the pin of the axle; let him who knows (the greatness of Savitri) say it.

7. The deep-quivering, life-giving and well-directed solar ray has lighted up the three regions. Where now is the Sun? who knows to what sphere his rays have extended?²

8. He has lighted up the eight cardinal points, the three regions of living beings, the seven rivers; may the golden-eyed Savitri come here, conferring, upon the offerer of the oblation, desirable objects.

9. The golden-handed Savitri, the beholder of various objects, travels between the two regions of heaven and earth, removes diseases, approaches the sun³ and covers the sky alternately with darkness and light.

1 Heaven and earth are the regions which lie in the immediate path of the Sun: the firmament is the road that leads to the realm of Yama, the ruler of the dead.

2 Suparna, the well-winged, is, in the Nirghanta, a synonym of rasmi, a ray; one of its epithets, asura, is here explained life-giving, asu, vital breath, and ra, who gives.—Wilson.

3 The Commentator explains it by saying that although Savitri and Surya are the same as regards their divinity, yet they are two different forms, and therefore one may go to the other.

10. May the golden-handed, life giving, well-guiding, exhilarating and affluent Savitri come here ; for the deity, adored every evening, remains driving away Rákshasás and Yatudhánas.

11. Thy paths, Savitri, are prepared of old, free from dust and well made in the firmament ; (coming) by these paths, easily traversable, preserve us today. Deity, speak to us.

ANUVA'KA VIII.

SUKTA I. (XXXVI.)

THE Rishi is Kanwa, the son of Gohara ; the deity is Agni. The metre of the old verses is Brihati having twelve syllables in the third Páda or quarter of the stanza ; the metre of the even verses is termed Satobrihati, having the first and third Pádas equal.

WE implore, with sacred hymns, the powerful Agni, whom other (Rishis) also laud for the behoof of you, who are many people, adoring the deities.

2. Men have recourse to Agni, the multiplier of strength ; with oblations we adore thee ; do thou, liberal giver of food, be well disposed to us here this day, and be our protector.

3. We select thee, Agni, the messenger and invoker of the deities, who art endued with all knowledge. Thy flames, who art mighty and eternal, spread around and thy rays touch the celestial region.

4. The deities Varuna, Mitra and Aryaman kindle thee, (their) ancient messenger. (The man, who offers thee oblation, conquers all wealth by thy help.

5. Thou, Agni, dost give delight, art the invoker messenger of the deities and the domestic guide of human beings. All actions, which the celestials perform, are aggregated in thee.

6. Youthful and lucky Agni, whatever oblation is presented to thee, do thou, well disposed towards us, carry it to the powerful deities, either to-day or at any other time.

7. Likewise devout people adore thee who art bright with thine own radiance. Men, desirous of defeating their enemies, kindle him (Agni) with (seven) ministrant priests.

8. The destroying (deities along with thee) have killed Vṛitra; they have made earth, the celestial region and the firmament the spacious habitation (of living creatures); may Agni, possessed of weath, when invoked, be a benefactor to Kanwa like a horse that neighs in a conflict for cattle.¹

9. Sit on the sacred grass, (for) thou art profusely possessed of accomplishments; shine forth, for thou art devoted to the deities; adorable and excellent Agni, emit the moving and graceful smoke.

10. Bearer of oblations, (thou art he) the most adorable whom the deities detained for the sake of .Manu; whom, giver of wealth, Kanwa, the host of pious guests,² has detained; whom Indra detained and whom some other worshipper has detained.

11. Kanwa, attended by venerable guests, has made Agni more brilliant than the sun: his moving rays pre-eminently shine; him do these our hymns, him do we extol.

² Medhyatithi, attended by venerable (medhya) guests (atithi).

12. Agni, giver of food, complete our treasures, for (the friendship) of the deities is obtainable through thee. Thou art the well-known lord of food, thou art great, make us happy.

13. Stand up erect for our protection like the divine Savitri; being erect¹ give us food, for which we invoke thee through priests, the performers of various sacrifices.

14. Erect, preserve us, by knowledge, from sin; consume all the Râkshasâs; raise us aloft that we may range (in the world); convey our wealth (of oblations) to the deities that we may live.

15. Youthful and most resplendent Agni, protect us from Râkshasâs, and from the malevolent (man) who makes no gifts; protect us from injurious (animals), and from those who seek to kill us.

16. O thou of burning rays, do thou completely destroy those who make no gifts as (potter's ware) with a club; let not one, who is inimical to us, nor the man who attacks us with sharp weapons, prevail against us.

17. Agni is solicited for power-giving (riches); he has granted prosperity to Kanwâ, he has protected our friends, as well as the (sage who was) the host of the holy, and (every other) worshipper (who sought him) for riches.

18. We invoke, from afar, along with Agni, Turvasa Yadu, and Ugrâdeva; let Agni, the arrester of the robber, bring here Navavâstwa, Brihadratha and Turviti.

19. Manu detained thee, Agni, (to give) light to the various races of mankind. Born for the sacrifice and gratified with oblation, thou, whom men salute, hast blazed for Kanwa.

20. The flames of Agni are luminous, powerful; fearful and never to be trusted. Consume entirely the Rākshasās, Yatudhānas and all our other adversaries.

SUKTA II. (XXXVII.)

THE Rishi is Kanwa; the deities are the Maruts; the metre is Gāyatri.

O YE, Kanwas,¹ hymn, for us, the strength of Maruts; sportive, without horses,² but shining in their cars.

2. Who, borne by spotted deer, were born self-radiant, with weapons, war-cries³ and decorations.

3. I hear the cracking of the whips in their hands wonderfully inspiring (courage) in the fight.

4. Address, the god-given⁴ prayer, to those who are your strength, the destroyer of enemies, the powerful, possessed of brilliant reputation.

² The word is anarvānam: the Commentator explains it as bhrātrivya rahitam without a brother's son; the meaning is perfectly unintelligible. But the word Bhrātrivya may mean "an enemy" and hence the expression may mean "without enemy." Rosen and Langlois accept this meaning. Wilson explains arvan as horse and says "being without horses would not be inapplicable to the Maruts, whose chariot is drawn by deer."

⁴ Devattam-brahma, the praise or prayer which recommends the oblation, obtained from the favour or instruction of the gods—Wilson

5. Laud the imperishable, sportive and resistless power of the Maruts, who were born amongst kine¹ and whose strength has been nourished by the milk.

6. Who is the oldest among you, O ye leading agitators of the celestial region and the nether world, who shake like the top (of a tree) all around?

7. Fearing your terrific and violent approach the householder has planted a firm (pillar); for even the many-ridged mountain is moved by you.

8. At whose impetuous approach, the earth trembles like an enfeebled king through fear (of his enemies).

9. Fixed is their birthplace (the sky), yet the birds (are able) to issue from (the sphere of) their parent; for your strength is everywhere (divided) between the two (regions).

10. They are the generators of speech: they spread out the waters in their courses: they make the lowing (cattle) to enter (the water) up to their knees (to drink).

11. They drive before them in their course, the well-known, long, vast, uninjurable, rain-retaining cloud.

12. Maruts, since you have the strength, send men to their respective works, drive the clouds.²

13. Whenever the Maruts pass, they fill the way with roar; every one hears their (clamour).

14. Come speedily, with your quick-coursing

² Max Müller renders it thus:—"You have caused men to fall, you have caused mountains to fall." The Text is janan acuchyavitan girracuchyavitan.

(vehicles); the offerings of the Kaṇwas are prepared; be pleased with them.

15. The libation is prepared for your gratification; we are your (servants), that we may live the full term of our life.

SUKTA III. (XXXVIII.)

The Rishi, Deities and metre are the same.

MARUTS, who are fond of laudation, and for whom the sacred grass is trimmed, when will you take us by both hands as does a father his son?

2. Where are you now? When will you come? Pass from the celestial region, not from the terrene sphere. Where are the sacrificers crying like cattle?

3. Where, Maruts, are your new riches? Where your beautiful (articles)? Where all your auspicious (gifts).¹

4. O sons of Pris'ni,² even if you become mortal, your panegyrist would become immortal.

5. Never may your worshipper become indifferent to adore you, as a deer (is never indifferent) to pasture, so that he may not tread the path of Yama.³

1 The expressions,—sumná, suvitā, and soubhagā, indicate, severally, children and kine, jewels and gold, and horses, elephants and the like.

2 The Text has Pris'ni-Mátarah; but Pris'ni is here explained by the Scholiast by Dhenu, a milchcow.

3 Max Müller translates the 4th and 5th Stanzas as follow:— "If you, sons of Pris'ni, were mortals and your worshipper an immortal, then never should your praiser be unwelcome, like a deer in pasture grass, nor should he go on the path of Yama;" and gives his reasons

6. Let not the most powerful and indestructible Nirṛiti¹ destroy us ; let him fall with our thirst.

7. Truly the resplendent and powerful (Maruts), cherished by Rudra,² send down the rain without wind upon the desert.

8. Like a cow, having big udders bellowing (for its calf), the lightning roars, and hence the rain is set free by the Maruts.

9. They spread darkness over the day by a water-bearing cloud³ and thence inundate the earth.

10. When the Maruts roar, every earthly habitation (shakes), and men tremble as well.

11. Maruts, with strong hands, come along the rivers, having variegated banks, with unobstructed course.⁴

for so doing. "I feel justified in so doing by other passages where the same or a similar idea is expressed, viz., that if the god were the poet and the poet the god, then the poet would be more liberal to the god than the god is to him."

1 A Deity of the Rākshas's race.

2 Rudriyāsah ; Rudrasya-imé, those who are of or belonging to Rudra ; explained Rudrena-phlitāh, cherished or protected by Rudra.

3 The Text is Parjanya which Sāyana has explained as cloud. " Parjanya is a God who presides over the lightning, the thunder, the rain, and the procreation of plants and living creatures."

In his Rig Vêda, Vol. I., p. 75, Max Müller remarks thus on the word :—"It is interesting to watch the personifying process, which is very palpable in this word, and by which Parjanya becomes at last a friend and companion of Indra."—Dr. Buhler.

4 Max Müller gives quite a different explanation of this Stanza :—"Marut, on your strong-hoofed steeds, go on easy roads after those bright ones (the clouds)—which are still locked up." The Vêdârtha-Yatna, renders it thus :—"Go, ye Marut, along the banks of variegated rivers on strong-footed horses of unbroken speed." We do not, however, see the reasons for Max Müller's differing with the Scholiast.

12. May the felloes of your wheels be firm; may your cars and their horses be steady and your fingers well-skilled (to hold the reins).¹

13. (O ye priests) describe, in our presence, with words describing the true form of deities, Brahmanaspati,² Agni and the beautiful Mitra.

14. Make hymns by your mouths, spread it like a cloud spreading³ rain; chant the laudatory hymn composed in Gāyatrī metre.

15. Glorify the host of Maruts, brilliant, worthy of laudation, entitled to adoration: may they be exalted by this our worship.

SUKTA IV. (XXXIX.)

THE Rishi and Deities are the same; the metre is Vrikati in the odd verses, and Satovrikati in the even.

O YE Maruts, when, shaking all stable objects, you direct your great vigour like a light downwards from afar, by whose sacrifice, by whose praise, (are you attracted)? to what (place of sacrifice), to whom, do you repair?

2. May your weapons be strong for driving away enemies and firm in resisting them; may your strength be worthy of praise and not (that) of a treacherous mortal.

² The lord of the Mantra or prayer.

³ The Text is tatanas; the Védārta-Yatna explains it as, stanadya, rumble.

3. O ye leaders, when you break down what is stable, when you scatter what is ponderous, then you pass through the forest of earth and the defiles of the mountains.

4. Destroyers of foes, there is no enemy of yours either in the celestial region or on this terrestrial globe; O sons of Rudra, may your strength collectively humble (your enemies).

5. They make the mountains tremble, they set apart the lords of the forest. Go, divine Maruts, wherever you like, with all your progeny, like those intoxicated.

6. You have harnessed the spotted deer to your chariot; the red deer yoked between them, (helps to) drag the car:¹ the earth² has heard about your coming and men are alarmed.

7. Rudrâs, we take recourse to your help, for the-

1 The spotted deer, Prishatî, are always specified as the steeds of the Maruts. We then have in the Text, prashtir-vahati rohita; prashtih is said to be a sort of yoke, in the middle of three horses or other animals, harnessed in a car; but the word stands alone, without any grammatical concord, and it does not appear what is to be done with the yoke. Rohita, the Scholiast says, is another kind of deer, the red deer, who, vahati, bears or drags the car, ratham nâyati. The sense may be something like that which is given in the translation but the construction of the original is obscure, apparently rude and ungrammatical.—Wilson.

Max Müller does not accept this sense. He says,—“Prastih is explained by Sâyana's authority as a sort of yoke in the middle of three horses. If Sâyana's authority is to be invoked at all, one might appeal from Sâyana in this place, to Sâyana VIII., 7, 28, where Prastih is explained by him either by ‘quick’ or ‘harnessed in front.’”

2 The Text is prithivi; but Sâyana explains it as antariksha, ‘firmament.’ But why? The context supports the translation of the word by ‘earth.’

sake of our progeny ; come speedily to the timid Kaṇwa, as you formerly came, for our protection.

8. Should any enemy,¹ instigated by you or by man, attack us, withhold from him food and strength and your help.

9. Maruts, possessed of superior intellect and perfectly worthy of a sacrifice, uphold Kaṇwa, come to us, with perfect protectiveness, as the lightning brings the rain.

10. Givers of most excellent (articles), you possess perfect vigour ; shakers (of the earth), you possess perfect strength ; Maruts, despatch your anger, like an arrow to the wrathful enemy of the Rishis.

SUKTA V. (XL.)

THE Deity is Brahmanaspati ; the Rishi is Kaṇwa ; the metre the same.

RISE up Brahmanaspati,² seeking the Deities we solicit thee. Bounteous Maruts, come near ; Indra, be a partaker of the libation.³

2. Protector of strength,⁴ man celebrates thee for the wealth⁵ abandoned by the foe ; Maruts, may he,

² The Text is Prās'rurubāh. Sāyana explains it as either "be partaker of the libation," or "the destroyer of Vritra."

³ The word is putra : Sāyana explains it as pataka, 'protector,' Wilson translates the word etymologically as 'son.'

who lauds you, obtain wealth, yielding beautiful horse and great vigour.

3. May Brahmanaspati, approach us; may the goddess of speech approach us; may the Deities drive away every enemy and conduct us to sacrifice, which is beneficial to man and (abounds) with respectfully presented offerings.

4. He who presents to the ministrant priest acceptable wealth, enjoys inexhaustible food. For him we worship in a sacrifice Ilâ,¹ attended by brave warriors, inflicting much injury and incapable of being injured by any one.

5. Indeed Brahmanaspati recites the sacred prayer in which the Divinities Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, and Aryaman reside.²

6. O ye, Deities, let us recite that felicitous and faultless prayer at sacrifices: if you, leaders, wish for this prayer, then will all that is to be spoken reach unto you.

7. Who (except) Brahmanaspati may come near the man, who is devoted to the Deities, who clips the sacred grass : the sacrificer has gone with the priests (to the sacrificial chamber) for he possesses a house (abounding) internally with precious things.¹

¹ Sâyana explains Ilâ as Manoh putri, 'the daughter of Manu and the institutor of sacrifices. Allusion to Ilâ is not out of place here because Brahmanaspati is the presiding Divinity of prayer or Sacrifice.

8. Let Brahmanaspati concentrate his strength ; associated with the regal Divinities,² he kills (the enemy) : in the time of danger, he maintains his station : armed with the thunderbolt,³ there is none to encourage or discourage him in a great, or a small, battle.

SUKTA VI. (XLI.)

THE Rishi is Kanwa : the first three and the last three stanzas are addressed to Varuna, Mitra and Aryaman : the middle three to the A'dityas : the metre is Gâyatri.

THE man whom the wise Varuna, Mitra and Aryaman protect, speedily subdues (his enemies).

2. He whom they heap (with riches), as if (collected) by his own hands ; the man whom they defend from the malignant ; every such man, safe from injury, prospers.

3. The kings (Varuna, etc.,) first destroy their (enemy's) forts, and then the enemies of those (who worship them) and put aside their evil deeds.

4. A'dityas, to you going to the sacrifice, the path is easy and free from thorns : no bad food is here prepared for you.

1 Sâyana gives two interpretations of the expression, antaravat 'abounding internally with precious things,' or 'containing sons and grandsons, etc.'

2 Sâyana explains Rajabhih as Varunadivih.

3 This attribute would identify him with Indra, in which character he appears throughout this hymn.

5. A'dityās, leaders, may the sacrifice, which you come to by a straight path, lead to your gratification.

6. That mortal, (whom you favour), exempt from harm, gets all valuable wealth and offspring like himself.

7. How, my friends, shall we recite laudatory hymns (worthy) of the great glory of Mitra, Varuṇa and Aryaman?

8. I do not speak against him to you, who injures or reviles the man devoted to the Deities; I rather propitiate you with proffered riches.

9. For he (the worshipper) loves not, but fears to speak ill (of any one), as a gamester fears (his adversary) holding the four¹ (dice), until they are thrown.

SUKTA VII. (XLII.)

Rishi and metre as before: the Deity is Púshan.²

PUSHAN, convey us over the road, remove the wicked (obstructor of the way). Son of the Cloud, Deity, go before us.

¹ The Text has only, chātúraschid dadamánád vibhíyad-ā-nidhátok, he may fear from one holding four until the fall. The meaning is supplied by the Scholiast, with the assistance of Yáska, Chatura akshán āhārayatah kitavát, from a gambler holding four dice; Sáyana says, four cowri shells,—kapardakáh; that is, where two men are playing together, the one who has not the throw of the dice or the shells is in anxious apprehension lest it should be against him.—Wilson.

² Púshan is usually a synonyme of the Sun; that is, he is one of the twelve A'dityas. He is described by the Scholiast as the presiding Deity of the earth,—prithivyabhimáni dévabh; he is also the cherisher of the world; from púsh, to nourish. According to the tenour of the hymn, he is the Deity presiding especially over roads or journeyings. His being called the son of the Cloud, is not incompatible with his character

2. If a wicked (adversary), Púshan, a robber; or one who delights in evil, points out to us (the way we ought not to go), do thou drive him from the road.

3. Drive him far away, apart from the road, the hinderer of our journey, a thief, a deceiver.

4. Trample with your feet upon the mischievous (body) of that evil-minded pilferer of both (what is present and what is absent), whoever he be.

5. Sagacious and handsome Púshan, we solicit of thee that protection wherewith thou hast encouraged the patriarchs.

6. Therefore do thou, who art possessed of all prosperity, and well equipped with golden weapons, bestow upon us riches that may be liberally distributed.

7. Lead us past our opponents; conduct us by an easy path; know, Púshan, how to protect us on this (journey).²

of earth personified as a male, 'as, according to other Texts of the Vêda, the earth was born of the water,—adbhayaḥ prithivī; and again, earth was the essence of the water; tad yad apām sâra dsīt tat samahanyatâ sâ prithivī abhavat,—that which was the essence of the waters, that was aggregated, and it became earth. Púshâ occurs also as a feminine noun, in which case it appears to be synonymous with Prithivī, the earth, as in the Text: Pushâdhwana pátu, which is explained, iyam pushâ, may this Pushâ protect the roads; where the gender is denoted by the feminine pronoun iyam: and in another Text, iyam vai pushayan hīdam sarvam pushyati,—this is verily Pushâ, for she cherishes this whole world. Throughout the hymn, however, Pushan is masculine.—Wilson.

1 In this and the two next verses, we have an example of what is not unfrequent, the repetition of a phrase as a sort of burden or refrain: the expression is, 'Pushan iha kratum vidah,—Pushan, know here, the act or business; that is, on this occasion or journey, know how to fulfil your function of giving us protection. Rosen renders it, Pushan hic sacrificum animadvertet; kratu meaning an act of sacrifice, as well as act or action in général.—Wilson.

8. Lead us where there is abundant fodder; let there be no extreme heat by the way; Púshan, know how to protect us on this (journey).

9. Be favourable to us, fill us (with abundance), give us (all good things), sharpen us (with vigour), fill our bellies; Púshan, know how to protect us on this (journey).

10. We do not censure Púshan, but praise him with hymns; we solicit the good-looking (Púshan) for riches.

SUKTA VIII. (XLIII.)

THE Rishi is the same; the Deity is Rudra;¹ the third stanza is addressed to Mitra and Varuna also, and the last three verses to Soma; the metre of the last verse is Anushtub, of the rest, Gāyatrī.

WHEN may we repeat a most grateful hymn to the wise, the most bountiful and mighty Rudra, who is (cherished) in our hearts?

2. By which earth may (be induced to) grant the gifts of Rudra² to our cattle, our people, our cows, and our progeny.

1 According to the Scholiast, Rudra means, he who makes to weep, who causes all to weep at the end of time; thus identifying him with the destroying principle, or S'iva; but there is nothing in the hymn to bear out such an identification; on the contrary, he appears as a beneficent Deity, presiding especially over medicinal plants.—Wilson.

2 Aditi is here said to mean the earth, who, it is wished, may so act (karat), that Rudriya may be obtained. The meaning of Rudriya, according to the Scholiast, is, Rudra sambandhi bhéshajam,—medicament in relation to or presided over by Rudra, conformably to the Text, yá té Rudra s'ivā tanuh, s'ivā vis'wā ha, bhésháji s'ivā, Rudrasya bhéshajiti,—whatever are thy auspicious forms, O Rudra, they are all auspicious; auspicious are medicaments, the medicaments of Rudra.—Wilson.

3. By which Mitra, and Varuṇa, and Rudra, and all the gods, being gratified, may show us (favour).

4. We ask the felicity of S'anyu,¹ from Rudra, the encourager of hymns, the protector of sacrifices, possessed of medicaments that confer delight.²

5. Who is so brilliant as S'anyu, who gratifies like gold, the best of the gods, the provider of habitations?

6. Who bestows easily-obtained happiness on our steeds, our rams, our ewes, our men, our women, and our cows?

7. Soma, grant us prosperity more than (sufficient for) a hundred men, and much strength-engendering food.

8. Let not the adversaries of Soma, let not our enemies, harm us: cherish us, Indra, with (abundant) food.

9. Soma, who art immortal, and abidest in an excellent dwelling, have regard for thy subjects, when at their head in the hall of sacrifice thou observest them (engaged in) decorating thee.³

¹ S'anyu is said to be the son of Vrihaspati; nothing more is related of him.—Wilson.

² Ālāshabhesajam, he who has medicaments conferring delight; from ja, one born, and lāsha, happiness; an unusual word except in a compound form, as abhilāsha, which is of current use; or it may mean, sprung from water (jala), all vegetables depending upon water for their growth.—Wilson.

³ Apparently there is some confusion of objects in this place, Soma, the Moon, being confounded with Soma, libation.—Wilson.

ANUVA'KA IX.

SUKTA I. (XLIV.)

PRASKANWA, the son of Kanwa, is the Rishi; Agni is the Deity, but the two first verses are addressed also to the As'wins and to Ushas (the dawn); the metre is Brikati in the odd verses, Satobrikati in the even.

AGNI, who art immortal, and cognizant of all begotten things, bring from the dawn to the donor (of the oblation), wealth of many sorts with an excellent habitation; bring hither to-day the gods awaking with the morning.

2. For thou, Agni, art the accepted messenger of the gods, the bearer of oblations, the vehicle of sacrifices:¹ associated with Ushas and the As'wins, bestow upon us abundant and invigorating food.

3. We select to-day Agni, the messenger, the giver of dwellings, the beloved of many, the smoke-bannered, the light-shedding, the protector of the worship of the worshipper, at the break of day.

4. I praise Agni at the break of day, the best and youngest (of the gods), the guest (of man), the universally-invoked, who is friendly to the man that offers (oblations), who knows all that are born, that he may go (to bring) the other divinities.

5. Agni, immortal sustainer of the universe, bearer of oblations, deserving of adoration, I will praise thee, who art exempt from death, the preserver, the sacrificer.

¹ Rathiradhwarānam. Rosen renders rathih, auriga, but Sáyana, explains it, ratha-sṭhaniya, in the place of a chariot; confirmed by other Texts; as, esha hi déva-rathah, he '(Agni) is verily the chariot of the gods, and, ratha ha vá esha bhutebhyo dévèbhyo havyam vahati, truly he is the chariot that bears the oblation to the spirits and the gods.—Wilson.

6. Juvenile, Agni, whose flames delight, who art universally invoked, and art praised (by us) on behalf of the worshipper, understand (our wishes), and, granting Praskanwa to live a lengthened life, do honour to the divine man.¹

7. All people kindle thee, Agni, the sacrificer, the omniscient; do thou, Agni, who art invoked by many, quickly bring hither the sapient Deities.

8. Object of holy rites,² (bring hither) on the dawn following the night, Savitri, Ushas, the As'wins, Bhaga,³ and Agni; the Kanwas pouring out libations, kindle the wafter of the burnt offering.

9. Thou, Agni, art the protector of sacrifices of the the people, and the messenger (of the gods); bring hither to-day the gods awaking at dawn, and contemplating the Sun, to drink the Soma-Juice.

10. Resplendent Agni visible to all, thou hast blazed after many preceding dawns, thou art the protector (of the people) in villages, thou art the associate of man placed on the east (of the altar).⁴

11. We place thee, Agni, as Manu placed thee, who art the implement of sacrifice, the invoker, the ministering priest, very wise, the destroyer (of foes), immortal, the messenger (of the gods).

12. When, cherisher of friends, thou art present as the Purohita at a sacrifice, and dischargest the mission to the gods, then thy flames roar like the resounding billows of the ocean.

⁴ Purohita, which may also mean, the domestic priest.—Wilson.

13. Agni, with sharp ears, hear me : let Mitra, and Aryaman, and other) early-stirring Deities, with all the accompanying oblation-bearing Gods, sit down at the sacrifice upon the sacred grass.

14. Let the munificent Maruts, who have tongues of fire, and are encouragers of sacrifice, hear our praise ; let the rite-fulfilling Varuna, with the As'wins, and with Ushas, drink the Soma-Juice.

SUKTA II. (XLV.)

THE Deity and Rishi are the same, except in the last stanza and the half of the preceding, which include any Deified Being ; the metre is Anushtubh.

AGNI, do thou, in this our rite, worship the Vasus, the Rudras, the A'dityas, or any other (living) being sprung from Manu, sacrificing well and sprinkling water.¹

2. Verily the discriminating Gods are givers of rewards to the offerer (of oblations) : lord of red coursers, propitiated by our praises, bring hither the three and thirty Divinities.²

1 Jānām ; Manu jātām, a man born of Manu. *Jan*², according to the Scholiast, here signifies a Divine Being in connection with the Divinities enumerated, another man, devata-rupam, of a divine nature or form:—Wilson.

2 We have had these alluded to on a former occasion (p. 75, n.) ; but, according to the Aitareya Brahmana, 2, 18, there are two classes of thirty-three Divinities each, the one consisting of those formerly specified, who are termed also Somāpas, or drinkers of the Soma-Juice, and the other of eleven Prayājas (the same with the A'pris, p. 231), eleven Anuyājas, and eleven Ūpayājas, who are to be propitiated by oblations of clarified butter, not by libations of Soma. They are evidently little else than personifications of sacrifices.—Wilson.

3. Agni; accomplisher of solemn acts, cognisant of all who are born, hear the invocation of Praskaṇwa; as thou hast heard those of Priyamédha, of Atri, Virúpa, of Aṅgiras.¹

4. The performers of great ceremonies; the offerers of acceptable sacrifices, have invoked for (their protection), Agni, shining amidst the solemnities; with pure resplendence.

5. Invoked by oblations; giver of rewards; listen to these praises with which the sons of Kaṇwa invoke thee for protection.

6. Agni, granter of abundant sustenance; who art beloved of many, the sons of men invoke thee, radiant-haired, to bear the oblation (to the Gods).

7. The wise men have placed thee, Agni, in (their) sacrifices as the invoker, the ministrant priest, the donor of vast wealth, the quick-hearing, the far-renowned.

8. The wise (priests), with effused libations of Soma-Juice, have summoned thee, vast and brilliant Agni, to partake of the (sacrificial food), as they hold the oblation on the part of the individual who presents it.

9. Strength-generated,² giver of rewards, provider of dwellings, place here to-day upon the sacred grass the morning-moving Deities, or (other) Deified Being, to drink the Soma-Juice.³

1 The Commentator, on the authority of the Nirukta, 3, 17, calls these all Rishis. Atri and Aṅgiras are always enumerated among the Prajāpatis; Priyamedhas may be the same as Priyavrata, the son of Swáyambhūa Manu; and we have a Virupa among the early descendants of Vaivas'wata Manu, who, as the father of Ilā, is the Manu of the Veda.—Vishnu Purāna—Wilson.

2 Produced by friction, which requires strength to perform effectually—Wilson.

3 In this and the next stanza, we have again an allusion to some divine or deified person, daivyaṃ janam, or to some other deity.

10. Worship with conjoint invocations, Agni, the present Deified Being; bounteous Divinities, this is the Soma-Juice; drink it, for it was yesterday expressed.¹

SUKTA III. (XLVI.)

THE Rishi as before, the Deities are the Aswins; the metre is Gāyatri; DEAR USHAS, not seen till now, removes darkness from the sky; As'wins, I laud you profusely.

2. The two Deities are of comely looks, have the Ocean for their mother,² distribute wealth by the mind and grant habitations by the pious rites (i.e., when any sacrifice is celebrated).

3. When your chariot is drawn by horses to the heavens lauded (in various places) your praises are sung by us.

4. O guides, the Sun,—the evaporator of waters, the nourisher, the protector and beholder of sacrifice, nourishes (the Deities) with our oblation.

5. Násatyas, accepting our laudations, partake of the exhilarating Soma-Juice that animates your understanding.

without particularizing him; it may be intended for Ka or Prajápati, who, with Agni, here actually addressed, would make up the thirty-three Divinities, with the Vasus, Rúdras, and A'dityas.

1 Tiro-áknyam is said to be the appellation of the Soma-Juice so prepared; from Tiras, oblique or indirect, and Aknyam, diurnal; that juice which is expressed on the preceding day and offered on the succeeding.

2 Sindhu-matarau. The Sun and the Moon, as the Scholiast states, are said to be born of the Sea. The As'wins are said to be the Sun and the Moon. And hence they are described here as the Scaborn.

6. As'wins, give us that invigorating food which may satisfy us, having removed the darkness (of want.)¹
7. Come, as a boat, to carry us over an ocean of laudations : harness, As'wins, your car.
8. Your vessel, vaster than the sky, stops on the seashore ; your chariot (waits on the land) ; the drops (of Sôma-Juice) have been mixed up for your worship.
9. Kanwas, (ask of the As'wins),—(How) do the rays (of the Sun proceed) from the sky ? (How) does the Dawn (rise) in the region of the waters ? Where do you desire to manifest your own persons.²
10. (The Sun's) ray created light in the Dawn ; the Sun (after rising) became like gold ; the Fire (entering the Sun) shone with darkened flames.
11. A good path was made for the Sun to go beyond the boundary (of night) ; the radiance of the luminary³ became profusely visible.
12. The singer of laudatory verses, again and again embellishes the work of protection of the As'wins, drinking Soma-Juice for exhilaration.

1 The word in the Text is Tamastirah ; literally, disperse the darkness. Sâyana, however, means by it " the darkness of Poverty."

2 The whole of this stanza is very elliptical and obscure and largely indebted to the Scholiast ; [literally it would run, Rays from the sky, Kanwas, cause of dwelling in the place of the rivers ; where do you wish to place own [form ? Sâyana fills up by supposing that the Kanwas are directed to inquire of the As'wins the particulars specified in the translation. Without some such addition, however conjectural it may be, it were impossible to extract any meaning out of the passage.—Wilson.

3 The word in the Text in one place is Rîṭasya, and in another divaṭh. Sâyana explains both the words as Sûrya, the Sun. Vêdârthayatna explains it : " Lo, the good road of the true religion for crossing over (misery) has manifested itself."

13. Causers of felicity, co-dwellers with your sacrificer, as with Manu, come here to drink of the Soma-Juice, and (accept) our praise.

14. Mây Ushas follow the lustre of your approach,¹ circumambient As'wins, and may you be pleased with the oblations offered by night.

15. As'wins, do ye both drink (the oblation) and confer happiness on us through your perfect protection.

¹ The early Aryans used to adore the mixed light and darkness as As'wins, appearing in the sky before dawn. Mr. R. C. Dutt has given an exhaustive note in the Note appended to the First Rik of the Third Súkta. According to Yáska, the mixed light and darkness appearing in the sky, after midnight and before dawn, is represented by the As'wins. Max Müller means by the two As'wins the two periods of conjunction (See Origin and Growth of Religion (1882) p. 219. Goldstucker holds that the Aswins were deified men like the Ribhus. He writes in a Note on Muir's Sanskrit Texts:—"The transition from darkness to light, when the intermingling of both produces that inseparable duality expressed by the twin nature of these deities."

FOURTE ADHYA'YA.

SUKTA IV. (XLVII.)

THE Rishi is Praskanwa; the Deities are the As'wins: the metre of the odd verses is Brihati; and of the even, Satobrihati.

AS'WINS, multipliers of sacrifice, this most sweet Soma-Juice is prepared for you, drink it of yesterday's expressing and grant riches to the offerer of oblation.

2. As'wins, come in your three-columned, triangular car, beautifully embellished with gold:¹ the Kanwas repeat your praise at the sacrifice; graciously hear their invocation.

3. A'swins, multipliers of sacrifice, drink this most sweet Soma-Juice. O ye bearers of wealth, carrying wealth in (your) chariot; approach to-day the offerer of oblation.

4. Omniscient As'wins, stationed on the sacred grass heaped in three chambers, sprinkle the sacrifice with sweet juice; the illustrious Kanwas, with effused libations, invoke you.

5. Such desired aids as you protected Kanwa with, do you, cherishers of pious deeds, preserve us; multipliers of sacrifice, drink the Soma-Juice.

6. Handsome As'wins, as you brought, in your chariot, bearers of wealth, abundance to Sudâsa,¹ so bring to us riches coveted by many, whether from the firmament or the sky beyond.

7. Nâsatyas, whether you are near or afar, come to us in your well-made car, with the rays of the Sun.

8. Let your seven (horses), the grace of the sacrifice, bring you to be present at our sacrifice; guides (of men), conferring food upon the pious and liberal sacrificer, sit down on the sacred grass.

9. Come, Nâsatyas, in your sun-clad² chariot, in which you have ever carried riches to the offerer of oblation, to drink of the sweet Soma-Juice.

10. We invoke, with chanted and recited verses, the very affluent As'wins towards us for our protection. Have you not ever drunk the Soma-Juice in the favourite house of the Kaṇwas?

SUKTA V. (XLVIII.)

THE Rishi is the same, but the hymn is addressed to Ushas, the personified Dawn, or Aurora; the metre is the same as in the previous hymn.

USHA', daughter of the Divinity³ of heaven, dawn upon us with riches. Vibhâvari (diffuser of light). dawn upon us with abundant food; O goddess, being bountiful, dawn upon us with wealth of cattle.

² Literally, sun-skinned—Sûryatwachâ; that is, either surrounded, or invested, by the Sun, or like him in brightness.—Wilson.

³ The Text has Divas duhitâ: Sâyana explains it dyudêvatayas—divinity of heaven. Wilson renders it as "daughter of heaven."

2. Possessed of horses, possessed of kine, givers of every sort of wealth,¹ (the Divinities of morning) are possessed of much that is necessary for the habitations (of men). Ushas, speak to me kind and beneficial words : give us the riches of the wealthy.

3. The Divine Ushas [dwelt² (of yore) : may she dawn to-day, the despatcheress of cars which are harnessed at her coming, as those who seek riches (send ships) to sea.³

4. Ushas, at thy approach, wise men turn their minds to benefactions. The wise Kaṇwa proclaims the name of those (liberal) men.

5. Ushas, nourishing (all), comes every day like a matron, the directress (of all domestic works), bringing all living creatures⁴ to decrepitude ; she makes every biped engage in action and make the birds fly away (from their nests).

1 The three epithets are in the feminine plural, without a substantive : aśvavatih, gomatih, vis'wasuvidah ; the Scholiast supplies, therefore, ushodévatāh, the divinities of dawn, as if there were many.—Wilson.

2 i.e., Used to make dawn formerly, as she is doing to-day.

3 The Text is Samudre na sravasyavah, like those desirous of wealth for sea ; the Commentary supplies "Send ships." In the beginning of the stanza we have uvāsha ushas, which the Scholiast explains purāni vāsam akarot, she has made a dwelling formerly, i.e., prabhātani kṛitavāti, she produced the dawn.—Wilson.

4 The Text has farayanti vrijanaṁ. Sāyana explains the first word as ! Farāṁ prāpayanti i.e., bringing into decrepitude ; and the second word, as gamanas'ilaṁ jaṅgaṁ, i.e., living or moving creatures. Wilson translates the expression as, "Conducting all transient (creatures) to decay." Benfey and Bollenson, understands the word farayanti as meaning "arouse." Muir renders the passage as, "she hastens on arousing footed creatures." We have literally followed the Scholiast.

6. She sends the diligent (to works); she despatches the solicitors (to their patrons)¹; and shedder of dews² knows not delay; bestower of food at thy rising, the soaring birds do not wait (in their nests).

7. This auspicious Ushas has harnessed (her vehicles) from afar, above the rising of the Sun; and she comes gloriously upon man with a hundred chariots.³

8. All living beings adore her, that she may be visible; bringer of good, she lights up the world; the affluent daughter of heaven drives away the malevolent and disperses the absorbers⁴ (of moisture.)

9. Shine around, Ushas, with cheering lustre; bring us profuse good luck every day and disperse darkness.

10. Bringer of good, the breath and life of all (creatures) rest in thee, for thou removest darkness; diffuser of light, come to us in thy spacious car; possessor of wondrous wealth, hear our invocation.

11. Ushas, accept the food of many sorts which exists among the human race; bring to the innocent rite the pious sacrificers who laud thee.

12. Ushas, bring from the firmament all the Deities, to drink the Soma-Juice; do thou give us excellent and invigorating food, together with cattle and horses.

13. May that Ushas, whose rays destroy the enemies,⁵ and are seen (full of) auspiciousness, grant

1 The Text is arthinah visrijati, i.e., "lets loose or despatches the solicitors." The Commentator says, "that the solicitors, having risen up early in the morning, go to the houses of their respective benefactors."

2 Muir translates the word Odati as "lively."

3 i.e., many rays of light.

4 Sridhah; Soshayitrin; the driers up; possibly the clouds āte meant.

5 The Text has Rus'antah, Sâyana explains it as S'atrūn hīnta-sāntah, 'destroying the enemies,' Wilson translates it as "bright."

us riches, adorable unto all, easily attainable and beautiful.

14. Adorable Ushas, whom the ancient sages invoked for protection and food, do thou, (radiant) with pure light, (pleased) by our offerings, accept our laudations.

15. Ushas, since thou hast to-day set open the two gates of heaven with light,¹ grant us a spacious and secure habitation : bestow upon us, goddess, cattle and food.

16. Ushas, associate us with profuse and multiform wealth, and with abundant cattle, with all foe-destroying fame, and, giver of sustenance, with food.

SUKTA VI. (XLIX.)

THE Rishi and Deity are the same ; the metre is Anushtubh.

USHAS, come by auspicious ways from above the bright (region of the) firmament ; let the purple kine² bring thee to the habitation of the offerer of the Soma-Juice.

2. Ushas, in the beautiful³ and spacious chariot which thou ridest, come to-day, daughter of heaven, to the pious offerer of the oblation.

3. White-complexioned Ushas, upon thy approach, bipeds and quadrupeds (are in motion), and the winged birds flock round from the boundaries of the sky.

1 The east and west points of the horizon.

2 Purple cows—the vehicles of the morning.

3 The Text has Supēs'sam. Sāyana explains it as either S'obhanarupayuktam, "beautiful"; or S'obhanahiranyayuktam, "embellished with brilliant gold."

4. Thou, Ūshas, destroying darkness, illuminest the shining universe with thy rays: the Kaṇwas, seeking wealth, laud thee, as thou art, with hymns.

The Rishī is Praskanwa, the Deity is Súra, the Sun. The first nine stanzas are in the Gáyatrī metre, the last four in the Anushúbh.

HIS coursers¹ bear on high the effulgent, all-knowing Sun, that he may be seen by all (the worlds).

2. At the approach of the all-illuminating Sun, the Constellations² depart with the night, like thieves.

3. His illuminating rays behold men in succession, like blazing fires.

4. Thou, Súra, travellest³ (in a great way, incapable of being traversed by any); thou art visible unto

1 The Text has, Ketavaḥ. Sáyana explains it as either the rays of the Sun or its horses.

2 Nakshatráni, the Stars in general, or the Lunar Asterisms, which, according to different Texts, are considered to be the abodes of the Gods, or the visible forms of pious persons after death; as, dévagriká vai nakshatráni, the Constellations are verily the dwellings of the Gods; and again, yo vá iha yajate amum lokam nakshate, either, he who performs worship here, obtains the next world, or, sukritám vá etáni jyotínsi yan nakshatrani, those Constellations are the luminaries of those who practise religious acts, that is, according to Sáyana, those who by attending to religious duties in this world attain Swarga, are beheld in the form of Constellations,—iha loke karmánushtháya ye swargam prápnuvanti te nakshatrarápena drisyante.—Wilson.

3 Sáyana says, that, according to the Smṛiti, the Sun moves 2,202 yojanas in half a twinkle of the eye.—Wilson.

all ; thou art the source of light ;¹ thou shinest throughout the entire firmament.

5. Thou risest in the presence of the Maruts ;² thou risest in the presence of mankind, and to be seen by the entire region of heaven.

6. With that light with which, thou, the purifier and defender from evil,³ lookest upon this creature-bearing world.

7. Thou traverses the vast ethereal space, creating days and nights and seeing all creatures.

8. Divine and all-manifesting Súrya, thy seven coursers⁴ bear thee, bright-haired, in thy car.

9. The Sun has yoked the seven mares⁵ drawing his chariot (safely), and comes with them self-harnessed.

1 Jyotishkrit, giving light to all things, even to the Moon and the Planets, by night ; for they, it is said, are of a watery substance, from which the rays of the Sun are reflected, in like manner as the rays of the Sun, falling upon a mirror placed in the door-way of a chamber, are reflected into the interior, and give it light. Sáyana also explains the whole passage metaphysically, identifying the Sun with the Supreme Spirit, who enables all beings to pass over the ocean of existence, who is beheld by all desirous of final emancipation, who is the author of true or spiritual light, and who renders everything luminous through the light of the mind.—Wilson.

2 The Text has, dévanām vis'ah. Sáyana explains it as, "in the presence of the Deities, the Maruts." Muir translates it as, "The[race of Gods]." The latter is a literal rendering of the Text.

3 The Text has, Varuna. Sáyana explains it as, "evil-preventing Sun."

4 The name of the Sun's horses is Harita. It may also mean the seven rays. The seven horses are the seven days of the week.

5 The Text has, naptyajāḥ. Sáyana explains it as, "with them the car does not fall." Muir translates it as, "daughters of the car."

10. Beholding the up-springing light above the darkness, we approach the Divine Sun among the Deities, the most excellent light.¹

11. Radiant with benevolent light, rising to-day and mounting into the highest heaven, do thou, O Sun, remove the sickness of my heart² and the yellowness (of my body).

12. Let us transfer the yellowness (of my body) to the parrots, to the starlings, or to the Haritála (tree).³

13. This A'ditya has risen with all (his) energy, destroying my enemy, for I cannot resist that foe.⁴

1 Sáyana also explains it as, the "Spiritual Sun." The darkness indicates the sin, and the approach to the Sun means the re-union with the Supreme Spirit.

2 Hrid-roga may also mean heart-burn or indigestion; harimánam, greenness or yellowness, is external change of the colour of the skin in jaundice or bilious affections. This verse and the two following constitute a tricha or triplet, the repetition of which, with due formalities, is considered to be curative of disease. Sûrya, thus hymned by Praskanwa, cured him, it is said, of a cutaneous malady or leprosy under which he was labouring; accordingly Saunaka terms the couplets a Mantra, dedicated to the Sun, removing sin, healing disease, an antidote to poison, and the means of obtaining present happiness and final liberation. The especial worship of the Sun in India at the time of the first incursions of the Mohammedans, attributed to that luminary's having cured Samba, the son of Krishna, of leprosy, is fully related by M. Reinaud in his interesting Mémoire sur l'Inde, and was then, no doubt, of ancient date, originating with the primitive notions of the attributes of Sûrya here adverted to. The hymn is throughout of an archaic character.—Wilson.

3 The Text has, Haridrava. Sáyana explains it as Haritáladruma (tree). But there is no such tree. Haridruvá is truly a yellow vegetable power.

4 This enemy is either sickness or disease.

ANUVA'KA X.

SUKTA I. (LI.)

THE Rishi is Savya,¹ the son of Aṅgiras: the Deity is Indra; the last two verses are in the Trishtuḥ metre, the rest in Jagati.

GLADDEN with laudations that ram,² (Indra), who is invoked by many, who is eulogised by hymns and is an ocean of wealth; whose good deeds, like the rays of light, bring about the well-being of mankind; adore the powerful and wise Indra, for the enjoyment (of riches).

2. The protecting and fostering *Ribhus*³ hastened to the presence of Indra, of graceful motion, irradiating the firmament, imbued with vigour, the humiliator of his enemies, and the performer of a hundred sacrifices; and by them, encouraging words were uttered.⁴

3. Thou hast set open the cloud⁵ for the Aṅgirasas, thou hast shown the way to Atri, who vexes his adversaries by a hundred doors;⁶ thou hast granted wealth, with food, to Vimada:⁷ thou art wielding thy

1 Aṅgiras performed penances for having a son like unto Indra, and accordingly the latter was born as his son Savya.

2 This refers to the legend that Indra came in the form of a ram to a sacrifice performed by Medhātithi. Mesha may mean "victors of enemies," says Wilson.

3 The Ribhus, as Sāyana holds, mean here the Maruts. When an encounter took place between Indra and Vritra, it was the Maruts, who, being present there, encouraged the former.

4 Their encouraging words were,—“Strike; Bhagavān, be valiant.”

5 Sāyana has given two meanings of the word gotra, “a cloud,” or “a herd of cattle.” So the expression means either that “Indra showered rain by setting open the clouds,” or “brought out the herd of cattle hidden by Pani.”

6 i.e., by various means or contrivances.

7 A Maharshi.

thunderbolt in defence of a worshipper engaged in battle.

4. Thou hast opened the receptacle of the waters ; thou hast detained, in the mountain, the treasures of Vṛitra¹ and other Dānavás ; when thou hadst killed Vṛitra the destroyer, thou madest the Sun ascend the sky to be seen (by all).

5. Thou, Indra, by thy devices, hast humbled the deceivers who presented oblations to their own mouths :² being favourably disposed towards men, thou hast destroyed the cities of Pipru, and hast well-defended Rijs'wan in robber-destroying (contests).³

6. Thou hast defended Kutsa in fatal fights with S'ushna ; (for protecting Divodása) hospitable (to his guests), thou hast destroyed S'ambara ; thou hast trodden, with thy foot, upon the great Arbuda ; thou wast born for the destruction of the oppressors.⁴

7. Forsooth, entire vigour has been placed in thee ; thy mind delights to drink the Soma-Juice ; it is known to us that the thunderbolt is deposited in thy hands ; cut off the entire energy of the enemy.

1 Vritra—the head of the Asuras, who is described here as Ahi, is explained hantrī, “the slayer.”

2 According to the *Kaus'itaki*s, the Asuras, contemning, Agni, offered oblations to themselves, and the Vájasaneyis relate that when there was rivalry between the Gods and Asuras, the latter arrogantly said, “Let us not offer sacrifice to any one.—Wilson.

3 Pipru is called an Asura ; Rijs'wan a worshipper whom they oppressed ; dasyu-hatyeshu, in battles killing the Dasyus, robbers or barbarians.—Wilson.

4 S'ushna, S'ambara, and Arbuda are designated as Asuras ; Kutsa is the name of a Rishi ; Atithigwa is said to mean hospitable, and to be also termed Divodása ; but it does not appear whether he is the same Divodása of the Puranas.—Wilson.

8. Know the A'ryas and they who are Dasyus:¹ restraining those who perform no religious rites, compel them to submit to the performer of sacrifices with Varhis (Kus'd-grass): be thou, who art powerful, the encourager of the sacrificer; I wish to laud all thy deeds in the sacrifice that gives thee satisfaction.

9. Indra abides, compelling the neglecters of holy rites to submit to those who perform them; and those who do not chant his praises, to them who are present (with them). Vamra, while praising him, growing and spreading through heaven, carried off the accumulated (materials of the sacrifice).²

10. When *Us'anas*³ sharpened thy strength with his own, thy might, by its purified fierceness, terrified both heaven and earth. O thou having a mind favourably disposed towards man, let the will-harnessed steeds, fleet like the wind, convey thee, filled (with vigour), to (partake of the sacrificial) food.

11. When Indra is lauded along with charming Us'anas, he ascends (his car), drawn by more and more obliquely-going horses; fierce, he extracts the waters from the passing (cloud) in a torrent and has destroyed the extensive cities of S'ushṇa.

12. Thou mountest thy chariot willingly, Indra, for

1 The Aryas were those who used to perform religious rites and the Dasyus were inimical to them. The latter were probably the uncivilized tribes of India who had not been, till then, subdued by the Aryas.

2 The Text is here obscure.—Vamra vijaghlāna sandihah; Vamra destroyed the collections. The Scholiast says, that a Rishi, named Vamra, took advantage of Indra's absence from a sacrifice to carry away the accumulated heap of offerings, the marrow or essence of the earth.—Wilson.

3 Ushanas was the preceptor of the Asuras.

the sake of drinking the libations. Such in which, thou findest delight, have been prepared (at the sacrifice of S'aryâta;¹ be pleased with them, as thou art gratified by the effused Soma-Juices (at the sacrifices) of others, and thou shalt obtain imperishable fame in heaven.

13. Indra, thou hast given the youthful Vṛichayâ² to the aged king Kakshîvat, lauding thee and offering libations: thou, S'atakratu, wast Menâ, the daughter of Vṛishanas'wa;³ those thy deeds are to be recited at the time of offering libations to thee.

14. Indra has been served, so that he may help the performer of good deeds in their poverty. The laudation of the Pajras,⁴ is (as stable) as the post of a doorway. Indra, the giver of riches, who desires horses, cattle, chariots and wealth, (for the sacrificers) is present.

1 S'aryâta was a Râjarshi according to the Scholiast, of the race of Bhrigu. The Aitarêya Brâhmana calls him a prince of the race of Manu. The term is a patronymic, implying son or descendant of S'aryâti, who was the fourth son of the Manu Vaivaswata: the Rishi Chyavana married his daughter and a solemn sacrifice was held on the occasion, at which Indra and As'wins were present. Chyavana appropriated to himself the share of the oblation intended for the As'wins, at which Indra was very angry, and to appease him, a fresh offering was prepared. The Scholiast quotes this story from the Kausîtaki. It is detailed in the Bhagavata and Padma Puranas.—Wilson.

2 Kakishwat performed many sacrifices. Indra, pleased truly, gave him a youthful wife of this name.

3 The Brâhmana is cited for a strange story of Indra's having himself become Menâ, the daughter of Vṛishanas'wa, and having afterwards fallen in love with her. The Mena of the Purânas was the wife of Himâvat, the king of mountains.—Wilson.

4 Pajras are said to be the same as the Aṅgirasas.

15. This adoration is offered to the showerer of rain, the self-resplendent, the possessor of true vigour, the mighty : may we, Indra, be helped, in this conflict, by many heroes, and, in a handsome house, given by thee, may we live with a learned (progeny).

SUKTA II. (LII.)

THE Rishi and Deity are the same ; the metre of the 13th and 15th verses is Trishtubh · and of the rest, Jagati.

ADORE full well that ram who makes heaven known, in whose laudation a hundred worshippers are simultaneously engaged. Implore Indra with many prayers to ascend the chariot, which hastens like a fleet courser to the sacrifice for my protection.

2. When Indra, fond of sacrificial food, had killed Vritra, the obstructor of rivers, by pouring down the waters, he stood, amidst the torrents, firm like a mountain and, possessed of a thousand means of protecting (his followers), increased in strength.

3. He,—who covers the covering enemies,¹ who is spread like water in the firmament, the root of happiness (unto all), who has increased (in strength) by (drinking) the Soma-Juice,—him I invoke, Indra, possessed of increasing wealth, along with the intelligent priests, with a mind disposed to pious adoration, for he is the bestower of abundant food.

4. That Indra,—whom in heaven, the libations, sprinkled on the sacred grass, replenish, as the kindred rivers hastening to fill the ocean,—that Indra, whom the Maruts, the driers up of moisture, who are unobstructed, and of undistorted forms, attended as auxiliaries at the death of Vritra.

5. His allies, exhilarated (by libations), preceded him, warring with (Vṛitra) holding the rain within himself, as rivers' rush down declivities. Indra, animated by the sacrificial food, pierced Vala as did Trita break through the coverings (of the well).¹

1 The Text has only, paridhîr iva tritah; and tritah may mean triple or threefold; making the phrase, "as through triple coverings," or defences; whence Rosen has, custodens veluti a tribus partibus constitutos; M Langlois is more correct, in considering Tritah as a proper name; but it may be doubted if he has authority for rendering it by Soma,—ou libation qui porte le nom de Trita; or for the additional circumstances he narrates. The legend told by the Scholiast and confirmed by other passages of the Text, as well as by the version of the story found in the Nîtimajjarî, is wholly different. Ekata, Dwita, and Trita were three men produced in water by Agni, for the purpose of removing or rubbing off the reliques of an oblation of clarified butter, the proper function of the sacred grass, to the three blades of which placed on the altar, the legend may owe its origin; but this does not appear from the narrative. The Scholiast, following the *Taittiriya*s, says that Agni threw the cinders of the burnt-offerings into water, whence successively arose Ekata, Dwita, and Trita, who, it elsewhere appears, were therefore called A'pîyas, or sons of water (Sûkta CV. v. 9). Trita having on a subsequent occasion gone to draw water from a well, fell into it, and the Asuras heaped coverings over the mouth of it, to prevent his getting out; but he broke through them with ease. It is to this exploit that Indra's breaking through the defences of the Asura, Vala, is compared. The story is somewhat differently related in the Nîtimajjarî. Three brothers, it is said, Ekata, Dwita, and Trita, were travelling in a desert, and being distressed by thirst, came to a well, from which the youngest, Trita, drew water and gave it to his brothers; in requital, they threw him into the well, in order to appropriate his property, and having covered the top with a cart-wheel, left him in the well; in this extremity, he prayed to all the gods to extricate him, and by their favour he made his escape. Paridhî, the term of the Text, means a circumference, a circular covering or lid. Mr. Colebrooke has briefly, but with his usual accuracy, cited this story in his account of the Rig-Vêda (As. Researches,

6. When, Indra, thou hadst smitten, with thy thunderbolt, the cheek of the wide-extended Vṛitra, who, having obstructed the waters, reposed in the region above the firmament, thy lustre, destructive of enemies, extended and thy strength became effulgent.

7. The hymns, Indra, that glorify thee, attain unto thee, as rivulets (flow into) a lake. Twasṭri has increased thy becoming strength; he has sharpened thy bolt with (his) overpowering might.

viii., p. 388). Dr. Roth conceives Trita to be the same as Traitana, a name that occurs in a Text of the Rig, and, converting the latter into a deification, he imagines him to be the original of Thraetona, the Zend form of Feridun, one of the heroes of the Shâh-Nâmâ, and of ancient Persian tradition.—Zeitschrift der D. Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. ii., p. 216. Professor Lassen seems disposed to adopt this identification.—Indische Alterthumskunde, Additions. The identity of Trita and Traitana, however, remains to be established, and the very stanza quoted by Dr. Roth as authority for the latter name, is explained in the Nitimañjari in a very different sense from that which he has given. It is said, that the slaves of Dīrghatamas, when he was old and blind, became insubordinate and attempted to destroy him, first by throwing him into the fire, whence he was saved by the As'wins, then into water, whence he was extricated by the same divinities; upon which Traitana, one of the slaves, wounded him on the head, breast, and arms, and then inflicted like injuries on himself, of which he perished. After these events, the sage recited in praise of the As'wins the hymn in which the verse occurs:—Na mā garannadyo mātṛitamā dāsā yadīm susamubdham abādhuḥ siro yad asya Traitano viśakṣat swayam dāsa uro ansāvapi gāhā,—"Let not the maternal waters swallow me, since the slaves assailed this decrepit old man; in like manner as the slave Traitana wounded his head, so has he struck it of himself, and likewise his breast and shoulders." If this interpretation be correct, there can be little relation between Trita and Traitana, and between the latter and Feridun. The former term has, however, found admission as a numeral, and apparently also as a proper name, into the Zend books. See M. Burnouf's "Etudes sur les Textes Zens," Journal Asiatique, April, 1845; see also the word Trita, in the Glossary of Benfey's edition of the Sāma-Vêda.—Wilson.

8. Indra of accomplished deeds, desirous of going to man with thy horses, thou hast slain Vṛitra, hast showered rain, hast taken in thy hands thy thunderbolt of iron, and hast placed the sun in the sky to be seen by us.

9. Through fear (of Vṛitra, thy worshippers) composed the suitable hymn of the Vṛihat (Sāma), self-illuminating, strengthening and forming the staircase to heaven; on which his allies (the Maruts), fighting for men, (guardians) of heaven and protectors of mankind, excited Indra (to destroy him).

10. The strong heaven was rent asunder with fear at the clamour of that Ahi, when thou, Indra, wast delighted by (drinking) the effused (Sōma-Juice), and thy thunderbolt vigorously struck off the head of Vṛitra, the obstructor of heaven and earth.

11. Had the earth, Indra, been tenfold (in its extent) and men multiplied every day, then, Maghaván, thy prowess would have been properly renowned; the exploits, achieved by thy might, are vast like the sky.

12. Indra, bent upon destroying the enemies living, in thy strength, above the wide-expanded firmament, thou hast made the earth for our preservation. Thou art the representative of the strength (of the strong.) Thou hast encompassed the firmament and the sky as far as to the heavens.

13. Thou art the measure of the extended earth;¹ thou art the protector of the (Swarga),² frequented by the celestials: verily, with thy greatness, thou fillest all the firmament; forsooth, there is none other such as thou.

² Rishwavirasya brihatah pati, lord or protector of the great (region); in which are the pleasant (rishwa) gods (vira).—Wilson.

14. Thou, Indra, of whom heaven and earth have not attained the amplitude; of whose energy the waters, flowing above the heavens, have not reached the limit; of whom, when fighting with animation, created by the Soma, against the withholder of the rains, (his adversaries have not equalled the prowess); thou alone hast made every[thing] else, (than thyself), dependent (upon thee).

15. The Maruts worshipped thee in this (battle); all the celestials in this engagement imitated thee in exultation, when thou hadst struck the face of Vṛitra with thy angular and fatal'(bolt).¹

SUKTA III. (LIH.)

THE Riski and the Deity are the same; the metre of the 10th and 11th stanzas is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

WE offer laudatory words to the mighty (Indra); we offer fitting praise to Indra in the house of the sacrificer engaged in the service. He (the Deity) has quickly acquired riches, as (a thief) hastily carries (off the property) of the sleeping. Praise, ill-expressed, is not prized among the givers of wealth.

2. Thou, Indra, art the giver of horses, of kine, of barley, the lord and protector of wealth, the instrument of habitation, the foremost in liberality, the most ancient Deity ; thou disappointest not desires (addressed to thee) ; thou art a friend to our friends ; such an Indra we praise.

3. Wise and resplendent Indra, the achiever of mighty deeds ; the riches, that are spread around, are known to be thine ; having collected them, victor (over thy enemies) bring them to us, disappoint not the expectation of the worshipper who trusts in thee.

4. Propitiated by these (resplendent) offerings, by these libations, drive away poverty with gifts of wealth consisting of cattle and horses, and be delighted ; may we, subduing our enemy, and relieved from foes by (pleased) by our libations, enjoy together abundant Indra, food.

5. Indra, may we become possessed of riches, and of food ; and with energies agreeable to many, and shining around, may we prosper through thy divine power, the source of prowess, of cattle, and of horses.

6. O protector of the pious, they, who were thy allies (the Maruts), gladdened thee, while thou wast engaged in slaying Vṛitra ; those oblations and libations gladdened thee, when thou, unimpeded by foes, didst destroy the ten thousand obstacles¹ opposed to him who praised thee and offered thee oblations.

7. Humiliator (of adversaries), thou goest from battle to battle, and destroyest, by thy might, city after city : with thy foe-prostrating associate (the thunderbolt,)²

1 Das'a sahasráni vṛitráni ; the last is interpreted by A'varakámi, covers, concealments, obstructions — Wilson

2 The Text has Namyá sakhyá : Sáyana has interpreted it, as rendered into English by Prof. Wilson, as, "foe-prostrating associate." Védārtha-Yatna and Ramánáth Saraswatí have explained it as, "with the help of thy friend the Rishi Nami."

thou, Indra, didst slay afar off the deceiver named Namuchi.¹

8. Thou hast slain Iṛaṇja and Paṇaya with thy bright gleaming spear,² in the cause of Atithigwa: unaided, thou didst demolish the hundred cities of Vaṅgrīḥ, when besieged by Rījis'wan.³

9. Thou, renowned Indra, overthrowest, by thy not-to-be-overtaken chariot-wheel, the twenty kings of men, who had come against Sus'ravas, unaided, and their sixty thousand and ninety and nine followers.⁴

10. Thou, Indra, hast preserved Sus'ravas by thy protection, Túrvaśāṇa by thy help: thou hast made Kutsa, Atithigwa, and A'yu⁵ subject to the mighty, though youthful Sus'ravas.

11. Protected by the celestials, we remain, Indra, at the close of the sacrifice, thy most fortunate friends: we laud thee, for we enjoy through thee excellent offspring, and a long and prosperous life.

1 Namuchi is described both here and in the Puránas as an Asura.

2 The Text has varttani: Sáyana has explained it as, "s'atru-prérana kus'alayá saktýá, i.e., a sakti capable of sending away the enemies." Langlois has translated "varttani" as "Vigueur Puissante;" and Wilson, as, "gleaming spear."

3 The first two are the names of Asuras; Atithigwa we have had before; Vaṅgrīḥ is called an Asura; and Rījis'wan, a Rájá; we have no further particulars, nor do they appear in the Puránas.—Wilson.

4 The legend is not Pouránik.

5 In the Puránas, A'yus is mentioned as the son of Purúravás; but here is A'yu, without the final sibilant.

SUKTA IV. (LIV.)

THE Rishi and the Deity are the same ; the metre of the 6th, 8th, 9th, and 11th stanzas is Trishtubh : of the other seven, Jagati.

DO not throw us, Maghavân, into this iniquity, into these sinful conflicts, for the limit of thy strength cannot be measured. Thou art shouting in the heavens and making the waters of the rivers roar : why shall not the earth be filled with terror ?

2. Adore the wise and powerful Indra ; adoring the listening Indra, laud him, who adorns both heaven and earth by his irresistible might, who is the sender of showers, and by his bounty gratifies our desires.

3. Offer pleasant laudations to the great and illustrious Indra, who is the victor of enemies and is firm-minded by his own strength. He, of great renown, who is obeyed by his horses, the showerer of bounties and impetuous, drives away the *Asurâs*¹ and enemies.

¹ The word Asura occurs in the Text. Sâyana has given three different meanings of the word, vis., (1) s'atrundm nirasitâ, the destroyer of Asura-enemies ; (2) asuh prâno valam rdti dadati, the mighty or powerful ; (3) asatah prânah tēna chāpah lakshyante, the giver of rain. Wilson has translated it as, "the giver of rain." In the first stage of their religious life, the Aryans used to adore their Divinities by two names, the Dēvas and the Asuras. Afterwards when they were divided into two branches, the Iranis used to name their Deities as Ahurds ; and the word Dēvas was, with them, an appellative of sinful persons. On the other hand, the Aryans used to call their Deities Devas ; and the sinful Dānavas as Asuras. Still in many places of the Rig-Vêda we find the Deities addressed as Asuras. In the middle and last parts of the Rig-Vêda, the word Asura is sometimes applied to the Divinities and sometimes to the Dānavas. It is very difficult to ascertain the real cause of such a difference. It may be that both the branches of the Aryans, after their separation, used to apply the word Asura to their Divinities. Perhaps the greater portion of the Rig-Vêda was written at this time. And afterwards as differences of opinion increased, the Iranis began to use the word Deva as a term signifying sinful creatures ; and the Aryans, the word Asura, as a synonym for the Dānavas.

4. Thou hast shaken the summit of the spacious heavens; thou hast thyself killed S'amvara by thy foe-destroying might; thou hast hurled with exulting and determined mind the sharp and bright-eyed thunder-bolt against the assembled Asurâs.

5. Thou, loud-shouting, hast poured the rain upon the wind and on the head of the maturing and absorbing (Sun). Who is above thee in the work that thou, endowed with a mind, unaltered and bent upon destroying enemies, hast done to-day?

6. Thou hast protected Naryya, Turvasa, Yadu, and Turviti, of the race of Varrya; thou hast protected their chariots and horses¹ in a battle undertaken for necessary wealth; thou hast destroyed the ninety-nine cities (of S'amvara).

7. That eminent person, the cherisher of the pious, advances his own prosperity, who, while offering oblations to Indra, sings his praise; or who, along with the offerings he presents, recites hymns (in honour of him); for him the bounteous Indra causes the clouds to rain from heaven.

8. Peerless is his power; peerless is his wisdom; may these drinkers of the Soma-Juice become equal to him by the pious act, for they, Indra, who present oblations, to thee augment thy vast strength and thy manly vigour.

9. These copious Soma-Juices, expressed with stones and contained in ladles, are prepared for thee; they are the beverage of Indra: quaff them; satiate thine appetite with them ; and then fix thy mind on the wealth that is to be given (to us).

¹ Ratham; etasam; the latter is a synonym of As'wa, in the Nirganta, but the words may also mean two Rishis.

² The Commentary supplies this appellation.

10. The darkness obstructed the current of the waters ; the cloud was within the belly of Vṛitra ; but Indra precipitated all the waters which the obstructor had concealed, in succession, down to the hollows (of the earth).

11. Bestow upon us, Indra, increasing reputation ; (bestow upon us) great, augmenting and foe-subduing strength ; protect us by making us rich ; cherish the wise ; and confer upon us wealth with excellent progeny and food.

SUKTA V. (LV.)

THE Rishi and the Deity as before ; the metre, Ṣagatî.

THE power of Indra was vaster than heaven : earth could not equal Indra in bulk ; formidable and most mighty, he has been ever the afflicter (of the enemies of) those men (who worship him) ; he whets his thunderbolt for sharpness, as a bull (his horns).

2. The firmament-abiding Indra grasps the wide-spread waters with his comprehensive faculties,¹ as the ocean (receives the rivers) : he rushes (impetuous) as a bull, to drink of the Soma-Juice ; he, the warrior, ever covets praise for his prowess.

3. Thou, Indra, hast not (set open) the cloud for (thine own) enjoyment ; thou rulest over the great lords of riches : that Divinity has been, by his own strength, greatly known to us; that fierce (Indra) has been, on account of his exploits, placed by all the Celestials before them.

4. He is hymned by adoring (sages) in the forest; he stands beautifully by announcing his own strength amongst men; when protected by Indra, a wealthy sacrificer, the offerer of oblation, recites laudatory verses, Indra, the showerer of desires, engages him who is desirous of performing a sacrifice in that rite.

5. Indra, the warrior, engages in many great conflicts for (the behoof of) man, with his all-purifying prowess; when he hurls his fatal thunderbolt, every one immediately has faith in the resplendent Indra (as being highly powerful).

6. Desiring for fame, destroying the well-built houses of the Asurás with his power, expanding like the earth and setting the (heavenly) luminaries free from concealment, he, the performer of good deeds, enables the waters to flow for the behoof of his worshippers.

7. Drinker of the Soma-Juice, may thy mind be disposed to grant our desires; hearer of praises, let thy horses be present (at our sacrifice); thy charioteers are experts in restraining (thy steeds); therefore, (thy enemies) cherishing malevolent feelings against thee and carrying arms cannot injure thee.

8. Thou holdest in thy hands unexhausted wealth; thou, renowned (Indra), hast irresistible strength in thy body; thy limbs are invested with (glorious) exploits, as wells¹ (are' surrounded by those who come for water); in thy members, Indra are many exploits.

SUKTA VI. (LVI.)

THE Deity, the Rishi and the metre are the same as in the preceding.

VORACIOUS (Indra) has risen up, as a horse (approaches) a mare, ^oto partake of the copious libations (contained) in the (sacrificial) ladles; having stayed his well-horsed, golden and splendid chariot, he plies himself, capable of heroic (actions, with the beverage).

2. His adorers, bearing oblations, are thronging round (him), as (merchants) covetous of gain crowd the ocean (in vessels) on a voyage: ascend quickly, with a hymn to the powerful Indra, the protector of the solemn sacrifice, as women (climb) a mountain.¹

3. He is quick in action and mighty; his faultless and destructive prowess shines in manly (conflict) like the peak of a mountain (afar), with which, clothed in iron² (armour), he, the suppressor of the malignant, when exhilarated (by the Soma-Juice), cast the wily S'ushna into prison and into bonds.

4. Divine strength waits, like the sun upon the dawn, upon that Indra, who is made more powerful for protection by thee, (his worshipper), who with resolute vigour resists the gloom, and inflicts severe castigation upon his enemies, making them cry aloud (with pain).

5. When thou, destroying Indra, didst distribute the (Vritra) hidden life-sustaining, undecaying waters through the different quarters of the heaven, then, animated (by the Soma-Juice), thou didst engage in

1 The Scholiast here also ekes out the scantiness of the Text,—as women climb a hill to gather flowers.—Wilson.

2 A'yasa, consisting of iron; that is, according to the Scholiast, whose body is defended by armour of iron, showing the use of coats of mail at this period, and intimating also, a representation of the person of Indra as an image or idol.—Wilson.

2. Undecaying Agni, combining his food¹ (with his flame) and devouring it quickly, ascends the dry wood; (the blaze) situate on the back (of Agni), spreading hither and thither for consuming, shines like a horse and roars like a roaring (cloud) in the height of heaven.

3. The immortal and effulgent Agni, the bearer of oblations, placed in front of all by the Rudras and Vasus, the invoker (of the Celestials), who is present at a sacrifice, and conquers the wealth (of the enemies), lauded by his worshippers, and admired like a chariot amongst mankind, accepts² the oblations that are successively presented.

4. Urged on by the wind, and roaring loudly, Agni easily sits upon the trees with his burning tongue and diffusive energy; when, undecaying and fiercely-blazing Agni, thou rushest rapidly like a bull amongst the forest trees, thy path is blackened.

5. The flame-weaponed and breeze-excited Agni, assailing the unexhaled moisture (of the trees), with all his strength, in a volume of fire, rushes triumphant (against all things) in the forest, like a bull, and all, whether stationary or moveable, are afraid of him as he flies along.

6. The Bhrigus amongst men, for the sake of being born as Celestials, cherished thee like a costly treasure, Agni, who sacrificest for men, who art the invoker (of the Celestials), the (welcome) guest at sacrifices, and who art to be esteemed like a loving friend.

1 The Text has 'adma,' food, or what may be eaten; but the Scholiast explains it, trina gulmádikam, straw and twigs; in contrast to ataśa, which presently occurs, and which he explains by káśhtha, wood or timber.—Wilson.

2 It may also mean "makes repeatedly over to the houses of worshippers desirable wealth." Sáyana has given both the explanations.

7. I worship with oblations that Agni whom the seven invoking priests invite as the invoker of the Celestials; who is most worthy of adoration at sacrifices, and who is the giver of all riches: I solicit of him riches.

8. Son of strength, favourably-shining Agni, grant to thy adorers, on this occasion, uninterrupted happiness: offspring of food, preserve him who praises thee from sin with guards of iron.

9. Agni of various rays, be a house to him who lauds thee. Wealthy Agni,¹ be a source of happiness to the wealthy (sacrificers); protect, Agni, thy worshippers from sin; may Agni, who is rich with righteous deeds, come (to us) speedily in the morning.

SUKTA II. (LIX.)

THE Rishi is Nodhas; the Deiti, Agni, in the form of Vais'wánara; ² the metre is Tristubh.

WHATEVER other fires there may be, they are but ramifications, Agni, of thee; all the immortals rejoice in thee: thou, Vais'wánara, art the navel of men and upholdest them like a deep-planted column.³

2. Agni, the head of heaven, the navel of earth, became the ruler over earth and heaven: all the battle, and with exulting (prowess) slewest Vṛitra, and didst send down an ocean of waters.

6. Thou, mighty Indra, sendest down from heaven, by thy power, upon the realms of earth, the (world)-sustaining rain: exhilarated (by the Soma-Juice), thou hast expelled the waters ³(from the clouds), and hast crushed Vṛitra by a solid rock.¹

SUKTA VII. (LVII.)

THE Deity, the Rîshi and the metre are the same.

I OFFER, the most desirable laudation to the most bountiful, the great, the opulent, the highly powerful and stately Indra, whose irresistible impetuosity is like (the rush) of waters down a precipice, and by whom widely-diffused wealth is laid open (to his worshippers) to sustain (their) strength.

2. Indra, this entire universe was engaged in thy sacrifice; the oblations of the sacrificer (flowed) like water (falling) to a depth; the beautiful, golden, fatal thunderbolt of Indra did not sleep upon the mountain.²

3. Beautiful Ushas, now present the oblation in this rite to the formidable, praise-deserving Indra, whose all-sustaining, celebrated and characteristic radiance has impelled him hither and thither, (in quest) of (sacrificial) food, as (a charioteer drives) his horses (in various directions).

1 Sâmayâ páshyâ; the latter may be either, with a stone or a spear; but the adjective samâ, whole, entire, seems to require the former.—Wilson.

a Or against the side of Vṛitra; that is, it did not stop until it had performed its office.—Wilson.

4. Much-lauded and most opulent Indra, we are they, who, relying (on thy favour), approach thee; acceptor of praise, no other than thou recieves our commendations; do thou be pleased (with our address), as the earth (cherishes her creatures).

5. Great is thy prowess, Indra: we are thine: satisfy, Maghavan, the desires of this thy worshipper; the vast heaven has acknowledged thy might; this earth has been bowed down through thy vigour.

6. Thou, the wielder of the thunderbolt, hast shattered with thy bolt, the broad and massive cloud into fragments, and hast sent down the waters that were confined in it, to flow (at will): verily thou alone possessest all power.

ANUVA'KA XI.

SUKTA I. (LVIII.)

THE Deity is Agni; the Rishi, Nodhas, the son of Gotama; the metre of the first five verses is Jagatí; of the last four, Trishtubh.

THE immortal Agni, generated by great strength,¹ quickly issues forth,² when he became the invoker of the Celestials and the messenger (of the sacrificer): he, going by suitable paths, created the firmament;³ he worships (the Deities) in the sacrifice with oblations.

1 The Scholiast says that fire is generated by rubbing two sticks with great force.

2 The Text has ni tundate. Sáyana explains it as either nitarám vyathayati—"gives pain," or nirgachhāti—"issues forth."

3 The firmament existed but in darkness, until fire, identified with light, rendered it visible, so that Agni may be said to have made or created it,—vima ne, or nírmamé.—Wilson.

Celestials created thee. Vais'wánara, in the shape of light, for the A'ryya.¹

3. Treasures were deposited in the Agni, Vais'wánara, like the permanent rays (of light) in the Sun : thou art the sovereign of all the treasures that exist in the mountains, in the herbs, in the waters, or amongst men.

4. Heaven and earth expanded as it were for their son.² The experienced sacrificer recites, like a bard,³ many ancient and copious praises addressed to the graceful-moving, truly-vigorous and all-guiding Vais'wánara.

5. Vais'wánara, who knowest all that are born, thy magnitude has exceeded that of the spacious heaven : thou art the monarch of Manu-descended men ; thou hast regained for the Celestials in battle, the wealth (carried off by the Asuras).

6. I extol the greatness of that showerer of rain whom men celebrate as the slayer of Vṛitra : the Agni, Vais'wánara, killed the stealer (of the waters) and

1 This is the first verse of a Tricha to be recited at a ceremony observed on the day of the equinox. Agni is said to be the head of heaven, as the principal element, and the navel of earth, as its main source of support. The term A'ryya may apply either to Manu 'as the institutor of the first sacrifice, or to the Yajamāna, the institutor of the present rite.—Wilson.

2 The Scholiast supports this affiliation by citing another Text ; but that does not apply particularly to any form of Agni, but to himself : Ubhā pitarā mahayan ajáyata agnir dyāvā prithiví,—Both parents, heaven and earth, expanding, Agni was born.—Wilson.

3 The Text has manushya : Sáyana explains it as, a panegyrist, or bard.

4 It is supplemented so by the Commentator, sent them down (upon earth), and clove the (obstructing) cloud.¹

7. Vais'wánara by his magnitude is all men,² and is worthy of being adored in sacrifices of nutritious viands.³ Agni, endued with rays and truthful speech, praises, with many commendations, Purunítha, the son of S'atavani.⁴

1 We have Vais'wánara here evidently identified with Indra, an identification not inconsistent with Vaidik theogony, which resolves all the Divinities into three,—Fire, Air, and the Sun, and those three again into one, or the Sun (Nirukta, 7, 4); but the Scholiast says we are to understand Vais'wánara, in this verse, as the Agni of the firmament, the Vaidyuta, the lightning or electric fire. The firmament, or middle region, is properly that of Váyu, the Wind, or of Indra; the inferior region, or earth, is the proper sphere of Agni, and that of the upper region, or heaven, of the Sun. The Scholiast cites a passage from the Nirukta, 7, 21, in which it is discussed who Vais'wánara is, and two opinions are compared, one which places him in the middle region, and identifies with Indra or Váyu, or both, in which character he sends rain, an office that the terrestrial Agni cannot discharge; and another which identifies him with Súryya, or the Sun in the upper sphere. Both are, however, considered by the Scholiast to be untenable, chiefly from the etymologies of the name, which make Vais'wánara an Agni, the fire, as above stated, of the middle region, or lightning; from which, when fallen to earth, the terrestrial fire is born, and from which also the rain is indirectly generated, the burnt-offering ascending to the Sun; and it is in consequence, from the Sun that rain descends; Vais'wánara is therefore an Agni. According to Pauránik astronomy, Vais'wánara is the central path of the Sun; in mythology, he occurs as one of the Dinavás. The cloud is termed in the Text S'ambara, who is elsewhere called an Asura.—Wilson.

2 The Text has Vis'wakrishti, literally rendered, all men: it means Agni has acquired sovereignty over all men.

3 Bharadwájeshu; in sacrifices which present food in the shape of nutritious (pushtikara) oblations of clarified butter (kavis); or it may mean, who is to be worshipped by the Rishis termed Bharadwájas, or of the Gotra, or race of Bharadwája.—Wilson.

4 These are Vaidik names; S'atavani is so called as the offerer of a hundred, i.e., numerous, sacrifices; his son has the patronymic S'átavaneya.—Wilson.

SUKTA III. (LX.)

THE Rishi is the same ; the Deity is Agni ; the metre Trishtubh.

MA'TARIS'WAN brought as a friend to Bhrigu,¹ the celebrated Vanhi, the illuminator of sacrifices, the careful protector (of his votaries), the swift-coursing messenger (of the Celestials), the offspring of two parents,² highly spoken of like wealth.

2. Both (Celestials and men)³ are the worshippers of this ruler ; those who are to be desired (the Celestials) and the mortals bearing oblations (are also the worshippers) ; for this adorable invoker (of the Celestials), the protector of people and distributor of desired-for objects, was placed by the officiating priests (upon the altar), before the Sun was in the sky.⁴

3. May our newest celebration⁵ come before that Agni, who is sweet-tongued, and is to be engendered

1 The Wind brought Agni to the sage Bhrigu, as a friend (râti) ; some translate it, a son, as in the Text, râtim bhrigûrâm,—the son of the Bhrigu. The more modern Sanskrit confirms the first sense, as, although it has lost the original simple term, it preserves it in the compound arâti, an enemy, one not (a) a friend (râti), an unfriend.—Wilson.

2 The Commentator explains it as either the offspring of heaven and earth, or produced by two pieces of wood.

3 The Text has only ubhayâsah, the both, which the Scholiast explains either Gods and men, or the ministering priests and their employer the Yajamâna. The same authority would repeat the phrase, Gods and men, as the sense of the Text, Us'ijo ye cha martâh, explaining the first by kâmayamâna devâh,—those who are to be wished for, the Gods ; he also proposes as an alternative for us'ijah, medhâvinah, wise, or the priests, and for mortals, the yajamânas.—Wilson.

4 The priests conduct the Yajamâna to the place where the fire has been prepared before the break of day by the Adhwaryu.—Wilson.

5 Navyasî sukîrttiḥ ; as if the hymn were of very recent composition.—Wilson.

in the heart ;¹ whom the descendants of Manu, sacrificing and presenting oblations to him, beget in the time of battle.²

4. Agni, the desirable, the purifying, the giver of dwellings, the excellent; the invoker (of the Deities), has been placed (upon the altar) among men: may he be determined upon subduing (our foes), the protector of (our) dwellings, and the lord of treasures in the sacrificial chamber.

5. We, born of the race of Gotama, laud thee, Agni, the protector of riches, with desirable (hymns): rubbing thee, the bearer of oblations, (as a rider rubs down) a horse :³ may he, who has acquired riches by sacred rites,⁴ come hither quickly in the morning.

SUKTA IV. (LXI.)

THE Deity is Indra; the Rishi and the metre are the same as in the previous hymn.

I OFFER acceptable adoration and oblations, offered by the preceding sacrificers, to that powerful, quick-coursing, mighty, praiseworthy and unobstructed Indra, as food (to a hungry man).

1 Agni, it is said, is engendered of air; but that air is the vital air, or breath, and Agni therefore is said to be produced in the heart, or in the interior of the human body.—Wilson.

2 In order to make burnt-offering to secure success.—Wilson.

3 The Text has only rubbing, or rather sweeping, thee as a horse; that is, according to the Scholiast, brushing the place of the fire for the burnt-offering, the altar perhaps, in like manner as persons about to mount a horse rub with their hands the part where they are to sit; one inference from which is, that the early Hindus had no saddles.—Wilson.

4 The Text has dhiyávasu: Sáyana explains it as, "karmaná budhyá bā prāptadhana," i.e., obtained riches by sacred rites or purified intellect.

2. I offer (oblations, acceptable as) food (to the hungry), to that Indra : I raise (to him) exclamations that may be of efficacy in discomfiting (my enemies) : others (also) adore Indra, the ancient lord, in heart, in mind, and in understanding.

3. I offer with my mouth a loud exclamation, with powerful and pure words of praise, to exalt him who is the type (of all), the giver (of good things), the great, the wise.

4. I send hymns to him (Indra), as the constructor of a car drives it to its owner, (so that he) may thence (obtain) food ;¹ I send praises, to him who is entitled to commendation ; and most excellent oblations, to the wise Indra.

5. For the sake of food, I combine praise with the instrument of invocation,² as (a man harnesses) a horse (to a car) ; I begin to celebrate the heroic, munificent and food-conferring Indra, the destroyer of the cities (of the Asuras).

6. For that Indra, verily Twashtṛi sharpened the well-acting, sure-aimed thunderbolt for the battle, with which fatal (weapon), the mighty and lordly (Indra), desirous of killing his enemies, pierced the vital parts of Vṛitra.

7. Quickly quaffing the libations, and devouring the grateful viands (presented) at the three (daily) sacrifices which are dedicated to the creator (of the world),¹ he, the pervader of the universe,² stole the ripe (treasures of the Asuras): the vanquisher (of his foes), the hurler of the thunderbolt, encountering, pierced the cloud.³

1. Ratham. na tashtéva tatsindya ; Sina, according to the Nirukta, is a synonym of food (Nirukta, 5, 5) ; tat implies the owner of the car, for his food.—Wilson.

2. Arkam juhvā ; the latter is defined, the instrument of invocation, the organ of speech ; the former means, as usual, hymn or praise in metre.—Wilson.

8. To that Indra the women, the wives of the Celestials,⁴ addressed their hymns, on the destruction of Ahi; he encompasses the extensive heaven and earth; they two do not surpass thy vastness.

9. His magnitude verily exceeds that of the heaven, and earth, and sŕky; Indra, self-irradiating in his

1 He may be so termed, as everything in the world proceeds from rain.—Wilson.

2 The term of the Text is Vishnu, applied to Indra as the pervader of all the world,—sarvasya jagato vyapakah.—Wilson.

3 Varáka, one of the synonyms of Mégha, 'cloud,' in the Nighantu; or it may mean sacrifice, from vara, a boon, and aha, a day. In reference to this purport, a different explanation of the Text is given, which is somewhat obscure: Vishnu, it is said, means the personified sacrifice (yajña), in which character he stole or attracted the accumulated wealth of the Asuras; after which he remained concealed behind seven difficult passes, or the days of initiatory preparation for the rite. Indra having crossed the seven defiles, or gone through the seven days of initiation, pierced or penetrated to, or accomplished, the sacrifice. This explanation is supported by a citation from the Taittiríya, which is still more obscure: This Varuka, the stealer of what is beautiful, (?) cherishes beyond the seven hills the wealth of the Asuras; he (Indra), having taken up the tufts of the sacred grass, and pierced the seven hills, slew him.—Vará-koyam vāmamoshah saptánám girínám parastád vittam védyam asuránam vibhartti; sa durbhapiñjúlám uddhritya, sapta girín bhittwa, tam ahanniti.—Wilson.

4 The wives of the Gods are the personified Gáyatrí, and other metres of the Védas; according to the Scholiast, the term gnah, preceding āévapātnih, usually means females, or women, whose nature, the Scholiast says, is locomotive,—gumanaswabhavah.—Wilson.

dwelling, equal to every exploit, engaged with no unworthy foe, and skilled in conflict, calls to battle.¹

10. Indra, by his power, cut to pieces with his thunderbolt Vṛitra, the absorber (of moisture), and set free the waters sucked by Vṛitra and capable of protecting the universes like cows (recovered from thieves); and, consentient (to the wishes) of the giver of the oblation, (grants him) food.

11. Through his power the rivers sport, since he has, by his thunderbolt, determined their limits; establishing his supremacy (by killing Vṛitra) and granting a (recompense) to the giver (of the oblation), he, the swift-coursing, provided a resting-place for Turvîti.²

12. Indra, the quick-coursing and strength-endowed lord (of all), hurl thy thunderbolt at this Vṛitra and cut off his joints, as (butchers cut up) a cow,³ that the rains may issue from him, and the waters flow (over the earth).

13. Describe, with new hymns, the former exploits of that quick-coursing Indra, when holding his weapons in battle, he encounters and destroys his foes.

1 The Scholiast says, he calls the clouds to battle, for by the mutual collision of the clouds rain is engendered — Wilson.

2 The name of a Rishi, who, the Scholiast adds, had been immersed in water: Indra brought him to dry land — Wilson.

3 The Text has, "cut in pieces the limbs of Vṛitra, as of a cow" (gor na); the Commentator supplies the rest, "as worldly men, the carvers of flesh, divide here and there the limbs of animals." The expression is remarkable, although it may not be quite clear what is meant by the term used by Sâyaṇa, vikartarah, cutters up, or carvers: perhaps the word should be vikretarah, venders of meat, butchers: at any rate it proves that no horror was attached to the notion of a joint of beef in ancient days among the Hindus — Wilson.

14. Through fear of him, the mountains remain still; and through fear of his appearance, heaven and earth tremble: lauding repeatedly with hymns the preserving power of that beloved Indra, Nodhas speedily acquired vigour.

15. He alone (is capable of subduing his enemies), and is the powerful lord of manifold riches; give unto him the hymns which he has desired for. Indra defended the pious sacrificer Etasa, when fighting with Súryya, the son of Swas'wa.¹

16. Indra, harnesser of steeds, the descendants of Gotama have offered to thee encomiastic hymns to secure thy presence: confer upon them manifold riches;² may he, who has acquired wealth by pious deeds, come here speedily in the morning.

1 The legend relates that a king named Swas'wa, or the lord of good (su) horses (as'wa), being desirous of a son, worshipped Súryya, who himself was born as the son of the king; at a subsequent period, in some dispute between him and the Rishi Etasa, Indra took part with the latter.—Wilson.

2 The Text has dhiyam; it may mean either "intellect," or "riches."

FIFTE ADHYA'YA.

SUKTA V. (LXII.)

THE Rishi is Nodhas ; the Deity, Indra ; the metre, Trishtubh.

WE meditate, like Aṅgiras, an excellent hymn (to be addressed) to that powerful and praise-deserving Indra, who is to be worshipped by his sacrificers (with hymns) capable of bringing him to the ceremony : let us repeat a prayer to the celebrated leader of all.

2. Do you, priests, offer to the vast and most powerful Indra, a great hymn, fit to be chanted aloud ;¹ for through him our forefathers, the Aṅgirasas, adoring him, and knowing the footmarks, recovered (the stolen) cattle.

3. When the search was set on foot by Indra and the Aṅgirasas, Saramá secured food for her young ;² then Vrihaspati³ killed the devourer and rescued the kine, and the Celestials, with the cattle, proclaimed their joy aloud.

4. Powerful Indra, who art to be gratified with a laudatory and well-accented hymn by the seven

1 The expression is āṅgushyam Sāma, a Sāma fit to be recited aloud,—āṅghoshya-yogyam ; such as the Rathantarās, and other prayers, which are usually considered portions of the Sāma Vēda ; but the Commentator understands Sāma in this place to mean, singing or chanting of the Richas :—Rikshu yad gānam tasya sāmetyākhyā.—Wilson.

2 When Indra desired the bitch Saramá to go in search of the stolen cattle, she consented to do so only on condition that the milk of the cows should be given to her young ones, which Indra promised.—Wilson.

3 Vrihaspati is here used as a synonym of Indra, the protector or master (pati) of the great ones (brihatām), the gods.—Wilson.

priests, whether engaged for nine months, or for ten ; and,¹ desirous of (safe) protection, thou hast terrified by thy voice the divisible fructifying cloud.²

5. Destroyer of foes, praised by the Aṅgirasas, thou hast scattered the darkness with the dawn, and with the rays of the sun : thou hast made straight the elevations of the earth ; thou hast strengthened the foundations of the ethereal region.

6. The deeds of that graceful Indra are most admirable : his exploits are most glorious, in that he has replenished the four rivers³ of sweet water, spread over the surface of the earth.

7. He who is not to be attained by violence,⁴ but

1 Sáyana identifies the priests (vīpras) with the Aṅgirasas, who, he says, are of two orders ; those who conduct sacrifices for nine months, and those who conduct them for ten. He cites the Nirukta for the confirmation of this (xi., 19) ; but the meaning of Ya'ska's interpretation of the word Navagwā is doubtful, as Navagati may mean, ' that one whose course or condition is new,' better than ' for nine.' Another explanation which he suggests,—Navanītagati,—is still less intelligible, for Navanīta usually means fresh butter. The seven priests are said to be Medhātithi and other Rishis of the race of Aṅgiras.—Wilson.

2 Adrim phaligam valam ; the last is here explained, cloud ; the first, that which is to be divided by the thunderbolt ; and the second, that which yields fruit, or causes grain to grow by its rain ; or the three words may be considered as substantives, Adri implying, as usual, a mountain ; phaliga, a cloud, and vala, an Asura ; all of whom were terrified by Indra's voice or thunder.—Wilson.

3 No specification of these four is given beyond their being the Ganges and others.—Wilson.

4 The term Ayásya has perplexed the Scholiast : it may be derived from Yása, effort, that which is not attainable by effort ; that is, according to one interpretation, not to be overcome in battle ; whence Rosen has rendered it by invictus. It is contrasted apparently with what follows, and which requires the insertion of Susādhya,—easily to be reached, or influenced by praises, and the like. Other etymologies are suggested, but they are still less satisfactory.—Wilson.

(is easily propitiated) by those who praise him with sacred hymns, parted twofold the eternal and united (spheres of heaven and earth); the graceful Indra cherished the heaven and earth, like the sun in the august and most excellent sky.

8. (Night and dawn,) of various complexion, repeatedly born, but ever youthful, have traversed in their revolutions alternately, from a remote period, earth and heaven; night with her dark, dawn with her luminous, limbs.

9. The son of strength, assiduous in good works, diligent in pious acts, retains his ancient friendship (for his votary). Thou, (Indra,) providest within the yet immature cows, whether black or red, the mature and glossy milk.

10. From a remote time the contiguous, unshifting, and unwearied fingers practise with (all) their energies many thousand acts of devotion (towards Indra);¹ and like the wives (of the gods), the protecting sisters² worship him who is without shame.

11. Beautiful Indra, who art to be praised with holy hymns, the pious who are desirous of holy rites, those who are anxious for riches, and those who are wise, repair to thee with veneration: powerful Indra,

1. This seems to intimate that the fingers were employed in the performance of what is at present termed mudrá, certain intertwinings and gesticulations accompanying prayer; the Commentary understands it as merely their employment in acts of worship or homage. That the practice is not altogether modern appears from the paintings of the Ajánta caves, several of the persons of which are evidently performing the finger gesticulations.—Wilson.

their minds adhere to thee, as affectionate wives to a loving husband.

12. Beautiful Indra, the riches that have long since been held in thy hands have suffered neither loss nor diminution. Thou, Indra, art illustrious, addicted to good works, and resolute: enrich us, thou who art diligent in action, by thy acts.

13. Mighty Indra, Nodhas, the son of Gotama, has composed for us this new hymn, (addressed) to thee, who hast been for ever, who harnesses thy coursers (to thy car), and art the sure guide (of all). May he who has acquired wealth by pious acts, come hither quickly in the morning.

SUKTA VI. (LXIII.)

Rishi, the Deity, and metre as before.

INDRA, thou art the mighty one, who, becoming manifest in (the hour of) alarm, didst sustain by thy energies heaven and earth;¹ then, through fear of thee, all creatures, and the mountains, and all other vast and solid things, trembled, like the (tremulous) rays of the sun.

2. When, Indra, thou harnesses thy variously-moving horses, thy praiser places thy thunderbolt in thy hands, wherewith, ¹ accomplisher of undesired acts, thou assailest thine enemies, and, glorified by many, destroyest their numerous cities.

3. Thou, Indra, the best of all beings, the assailer and humiliator (of thy foes), the chief of the Ribhus, ² the friend of man, the subduer of enemies, didst aid the young and illustrious Kutsa, ³ and slewest S'ushna, ³ in the deadly and close-fought fight.

4. Thou verily didst animate him to (acquire) such (renown) as that which, sender of rain and wielder of the thunderbolt, thou (didst acquire) when thou slewest Vṛitra, and when, munificent Hero, who easily conquerest (thy foes), thou didst put to flight the Dasyus ⁴ in battle.

5. Do thou, Indra, who art unwilling to harm any resolute (mortal), ⁵ set open all the quarters (of the horizon) to the horses of us who praise thee, (when we are exposed) to the aversion (of our enemies); and,

² So the Scholiast explains Ribhukshâ,—Ribhûnâm adhipati; or it may mean, he who abides in the Ribhus,—têshu kritanivâsa; but he understands Ribhu here to mean a wise man, a sage (medhâvin).—Wilson.

³ These names have occurred before in the same relation.—Wilson.

⁴ The Dasyus are described as the enemies of Kutsa,—Kutsa-syopakshayatârah. Agreeably to the apparent sense of Dasyu, barbarian, or one not Hindu, Kutsa would be a prince who bore an active part in the subjugation of the original tribes of India.—Wilson.

wielder of the thunderbolt, demolish our foes, as with a club.

6. Men invoke thee, such as thou art, in the thick-thronged and wealth-bestowing conflict. May this thy succour, powerful Indra, ever be granted in war, worthy to be enjoyed (by warriors) in battle.

7. Indra, wielder of the thunderbolt, warring on behalf of Purukutsa,¹ thou didst overturn the seven cities; thou didst cut off for Sudás the wealth of Amhas, as if (it had been a tuft) of sacred grass, and didst give it to him, O king, ever satiating thee (with oblations).

8. Increase, divine Indra, for us throughout the earth, abundant food, (that it may be as plentiful) as water, by which, Hero, thou bestowest upon us (existence), as thou causest water to flow on every side.

9. Praises have been offered to thee, Indra, by the sons of Gotama: (they have been) uttered with reverence (to thee), borne (hither) by thy steeds: grant us various sorts of food. May he who has acquired wealth by pious acts, come hither quickly in the morning.

SUKTA VII. (LXIV.)

THE Rishi is the same; the Deities are the Maruts collectively; the metre is Jagatí, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

OFFER, Nodhas, earnest praise to the company of the Maruts, the senders of rain and ripeners of fruit, deserving of adoration. Composed, and with folded-hands, I utter the praises conceived in my mind, which are efficacious in sacred rites, (and flow readily) as the waters.

2. They were born handsome and vigorous from the sky, the sons of Rudra,¹ the conquerors of their foes, pure from sin, and purifying (all), radiant as suns, powerful as evil spirits,² diffusers of rain-drops, and of fearful forms.

3. Youthful Rudras, and undecaying, destructive of those who do not worship (the gods), of unobstructed progress, and immovable as mountains, they are desirous of granting (the wishes of the worshipper), and by their strength agitate all substances, whether of heaven or of earth.

4. They decorate their persons with various ornaments; they have placed, for elegance, brilliant (garlands) on their breasts; lances are borne upon their shoulders, and with them and their own strength have they been born, leaders, from the sky.

5. Enriching their worshipper, agitating the clouds, devourers of foes, they create the winds and lightnings by their power: the circumambient and agitating Maruts milk heavenly udders, and sprinkle the earth with the water.

² Satwáno na; Satwánah is explained, Parames'warasya-bhúta gana,—the troops of demons attendant on Paramés'wara or S'iva.—Wilson.

6. The munificent Maruts scatter the nutritious waters, as priests, at sacrifices, the clarified butter; as grooms lead forth a horse, they bring forth, for its rain, the fleet-moving cloud, and milk it, thundering, and unexhausted.

7. Vast, possessed of knowledge, bright-shining, like mountains in stability, and quick in motion, you, like elephants, break down the forests when you put vigour into your ruddy (mares).

8. The most wise Maruts roar like lions; the all-knowing are graceful as the spotted deer, destroying (their foes), delighting (their worshippers); of deadly strength in their anger, they come with their antelopes,¹ and their arms, (to defend the sacrificer) against interruption.

9. Maruts, who are distinguished in troops, who are benevolent to men, who are heroes, and whose strength is deadly in your anger, you make heaven and earth resound (at your coming); your (glory) sits in the seat-furnished chariots, conspicuous as (a beautiful) form, or as the lovely lightning.

10. The Maruts, who are all-knowing, co-dwellers with wealth, combined with strength, loud-sounding, repellers of foes, of infinite prowess, whose weapon (of offence) is Indra, and who are leaders (of men), hold in their hands the shaft.

11. Augmenters of rain, they drive with golden wheels the clouds asunder, as elephants² (in a herd break down the trees in their way) : they are honoured with sacrifices, visitants of the hall of offering, spontaneous assailers of (their foes), subverters of what are stable, immovable themselves, and wearers of shining weapons.

¹ Prishatibhis, with the spotted deer, which are the Vâhanas, or steeds of the Maruts.—Wilson.

12. We Invoke with praise the foe-destroying, all-purifying, water-shedding, all-surveying band of Maruts, the offspring of Rudra : (priests) to obtain prosperity, have recourse to the dust-raising and powerful band of Maruts, receiving libations from sacred vessels,¹ and showering down (benefits).

13. The man whom, Maruts, you defend with your protection, quickly surpasses all men in strength ; with his horses, he acquires food ; and with his men, riches : he performs the required worship, and he prospers.

14. Maruts, grant to your wealthy (worshippers, a son),² eminent for good works, invincible in battle, illustrious, the annihilator (of his adversaries), the seizer of wealth, the deserver of praise, and all-discerning : may we cherish such a son and such a grandson for a hundred winters.

15. Grant us, Maruts, durable riches, attended by posterity, and mortifying to our enemies : (riches) reckoned by hundreds and thousands, and ever increasing ; may they who have acquired wealth by pious acts, come hither quickly in the morning.

² Putra, son, is supplied by the Comment ; the concluding phrases authorize the addition,—Wilson.

ANUVA'KA XII.

SUKTA I. (LXV.)

THE Deity is Agni; the Rishi, Parás'ara, son of S'akti, the son of Vas'ishtha: the metre is Dwiṣṭāda-Virāt.¹

THE intelligent Divinities, all equally pleased, followed thee, Agni, by thy footmarks, when hiding in the hollow (of the waters),² like a thief (who has stolen) an animal; thee, receiving oblations and carrying them to the Deities: all the Celestials, worthy of adoration, sit down near thee.

2. The Deities followed the traces of the fugitive; the search was made everywhere, and earth became like the celestial region; the waters swelled (to conceal him), who was much enlarged by laudation, and was manifested as it were in the womb in the waters, the source of sacrificial food.³

3. Agni is beautiful as nourishment, vast as the earth, the giver of food as a mountain, and delightful as water; he is like a horse urged to a charge in battle, and like flowing waters;¹ who can arrest him?

³ A fish revealed to the Gods where Agni had hidden, as, according to the Taittirīyas, " he, concealing himself, entered into the waters; the Gods wished for a messenger to him; a fish discovered him." Védārthayātna, however, gives a different interpretation of this Rik:—" Of the truthful (Agni) the Gods obey the ordinances; (to him) the earth like heaven, became the home. Him the waters nourish, who is well-born in the womb, the altar of the sacrifice, (and) well-nourished with prayers."

4. He is the friend of the waters, like a brother to his sisters; he consumes the forest as a king slays his enemies; when excited by the wind, he traverses the woods and shears the hairs of the earth.²

5. He breathes amidst the waters like a sitting swan; awakened at the dawn, he restores by his operations consciousness to men; he is a creator, like Soma;³ born from the waters, (where he lurked) like an animal with coiled-up limbs, he became enlarged, and his light (spread) afar.

1 The epithets are in the Text attached to the objects of comparison, although equally applicable to Agni; thus he is pushtirna ranvâ—like grateful nourishment; kshirna prithvî,—like the vast earth; etc. Several of the comparisons admit of various interpretations; as the first may signify the increase of desired fruits or rewards, as the consequence of sacrifices with fire; in no case does it import the frugum maturitas of Rosen.—Wilson.

2 Fruits, flowers, grasses, shrubs, etc., are described as the hairs of the earth.

3 Somo na védhah; in like manner as Soma creates or causes useful plants to grow, so Agni creates or extracts from them their nutritive faculty. The Agni here alluded to is the fire of digestion, the heat of the stomach: Agnir annado annupatis'cha,—Agni is the eater and sovereign of food; and in the Vajasaneyi Yajush we have, etavad va idam annam annadas'cha Soma eva annam Agnir annadah,—inasmuch as there is food and feeder, so Soma is the food, and the feeder is Agni.—Wilson.

SUKTA II. (LXVI.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre the same.

AGNI,—who is of variegated form like wealth, who is the surveyor of all like the Sun, who is the protector of life like the vital air (Prāṇa), who is the doer of good like a son, who upholds the universe like a horse, who is the giver of gratification like a cow, who is pure and radiant,—consumes the forests.

2. Like a beautiful mansion,¹ he protects property ; he (nourishes people) like barley ; he is the conqueror of (hostile) men ; he is like a Rishi, the praiser (of the Deities), eminent amongst (devout) persons, delighted like a steed :² may he bestow upon us food.

3. Agni, of unattainable effulgence, is like a vigilant sacrificer ;³ he is (an ornament to all in the sacrificial chamber), like a woman in a dwelling ;⁴ when he shines with wonderful lustre, he is like the white (sun), or like a golden chariot amongst men, resplendent in battle.

4. He terrifies (his adversaries) like an army sent (against an enemy), or like the bright-pointed shaft of an archer. Agni, as Yama, is all that is born ; as Yama,

² The Text has Vájeena prītaḥ : literally, "delighted like a steed," Sáyana supplements the ellipsis, and Wilson translates this explanatory passage as,—"as a spirited horse (goes to battle), [so] he (Agni) repairs delighted to the hall of sacrifice."

⁴ The Text is elliptical : its meaning is,—"he is an ornament to all in the sacrificial chamber like a woman in a dwelling."

all that will be born :¹ he is the lover of maidens,² the husband of wives.³

5. Let us approach that blazing Agni with animal and vegetable offerings,⁴ as cows hasten to their pens. He has tossed about his flames, like running streams of water ; the rays commingle (with the radiance) visible in the sky.

SUKTA III. (LXVII.)

Deity, Rishi and metre the same.

BORN in the woods ; the friend of man, Agni protects his worshipper, as a king favours a man shorn

1 Yamo ha jâto, yamo janitwam, is the phraseology of the Text, and is somewhat obscure ; according to the Scholiast, Yama here has its etymological purport only ; he who gives the desired object to the worshippers,—yachchhati dadâti-kâmân stotribhyah, in which sense it is a synonym of Agni,—yam Agnir uchyatê ; or it may be applied to him as one of the twins (yama), from the simultaneous birth of Indra and Agni, according to Yâska. Jâta is said to imply all existing beings ; janitwa, those that will exist : both are identical with Agni as Yama, from the dependence of all existence, past, present, or future, upon worship with Fire.—Wilson.

2 Because they cease to be maidens when the offering to Fire, the essential part of the nuptial ceremony, is completed.—Wilson.

3 The wife bearing a chief part in oblations to Fire ; or a legend is alluded to, of Soma, having obtained, it does not appear how, a maiden, gave her to the Gandharba, Vis'wawasu ; he transferred her to Agni, who gave her to a mortal husband, and bestowed upon her wealth and offspring. The whole of this stanza is similarly commented upon in the Nirukta, 10, '21.—Wilson.

4 So the Commentator explains the terms charâthâ and vasatyâ, invocations prompted by minds purified by offerings of moveable things, that is, animals ; or of immoveable things, as rice, and the like : tat prabhavaih hridayâdibhih sâdhyâhutih ; or, pas'u parbhava hridayadisddhanayâdhutyâ.—Wilson.

of decrepitude, able as a defender, adorable as a performer of (good) works, may he, the invoker of the Deities, the bearer of oblations,¹ be the performer of excellent works.

2. Holding in his hand all (sacrificial) wealth, and hiding in the hollows (of the waters), he filled the Deities with alarm; the leaders (the Deities), the upholders of acts, then knew Agni when they recited the prayers conceived in the heart.

3. Like the unborn (Sun) he sustains the earth and the firmament, and props up the heaven with true prayers.² O Agni, the source of sustenance unto all, do thou protect the pasture that is grateful unto animals and repair to the cave which is unfit for grazing.³

4. He who knows Agni hidden in the cave; he who approaches him who is the maintainer of sacrifice,⁴ those who, after performing a sacrifice, laud him, to them he, forsooth, promises affluence.

1 Havyavāh, here used generally, is, properly, the bearer of oblations to the Gods; the Véda recognizing besides the usual fires, three Agnis: Havyavāh or Havyavāhana, that which conveys offerings to the Gods; Kavyavāh, which conveys them to the Pitris or Manes; and Saharukshas, that which receives those offered to the Rákshasas.—Wilson.

2 According to the Taittirīyas, the Gods, alarmed at the obliquity of the region of the Sun, and fearing that it might fall, propped it up with the metres of the Véda, an act here attributed to Agni.—Wilson.

3 Guhā guham gāh; Rosen has, de specu in specum procedas; but Guhā here means, apparently, any arid or rugged tract unfit for pasture, or as the Commentary says, sancharāyogyam sthānam,—"a place unfit for grazing," and which Agni may, therefore, scorch up with impunity.—Wilson.

4 The Text has Rītasya, which Sāyana explains either as truth or sacrifice.

5. The wise, (first) adoring Agni, as they do a dwelling,¹ perform sacrifices—(Agni) who implants their (peculiar) virtues in herbs, and places flowers and fruits in mother-like herbs, and who is the giver of knowledge and sustenance.

SUKTA IV. (LXVIII.)

The Rishi, the Deity and the metre the same.

THE bearer (of the oblations), (Agni), mixing them (with other ingredients), ascends to heaven, and clothes all things, moveable and immoveable,² and the nights themselves, (with light), radiant amongst the Celestials, and in himself alone comprehending the virtues of all these (substances).³

2. O Divine Agni, when thou art born living⁴ from the dry wood, (by attrition), then all (thy worshippers) perform the sacred ceremony, and obtain verily true divinity by lauding thee, who art immortal, with hymns that reach thee.

3. Laudatory hymns are addressed to him when he comes (to the sacrifice); sacrifice⁵ is performed

1 In building a house, worship is first offered to the edifice, and it is then put to use. So Agni is to be first adored, and then employed in any sacrificial rites.—Wilson.

2 i.e., the entire universe.

3 Or it may be rendered, "he alone surpasses the glories (mahitvá) of all these Gods;" as Rosen has it, excellit deus, deorum magnitudine. —Wilson.

4 The Text has Jeevan: literally, "living:" but Sâyana explains it as prajvalan, "burning;" for the living condition of the Fire is nothing but burning.

5 The Text has Dhiti: The Scholiast explains it as,— "that in which the Soma-Juice is quaffed" i.e., a sacrifice.

when he comes ; he is the source of sustenance unto all ; all (worshippers) perform all rites¹ (for him). Do thou, Agni, knowing (his works), grant riches to him who presents to thee oblations, or who wishes (to be able to present them).

4. Thou hast abided with the descendants of Manu² as the invoker (of the Deities) ; thou art indeed the lord of their wealth ; they desire (of thee) procreative energy in their bodies,³ and, shorn of stupefaction, they live for ever with their excellent sons.⁴

5. Hastening to obey the commands of Agni, like sons (obedient to the orders) of a father, they celebrate his worship : abounding in food, Agni sets open before them treasures that are at the doors of the sacrifice, and he who delights in the sacrificial chamber has studded the sky with constellations.

SUKTA V. (LXIX.)

The Rishi, the Deity and the metre the same.

WHITE (Agni), like (the Sun), the lover of the dawn, is the illuminator of all, and fills united (heaven and

1 The Text has Apângsi : Sâyana explains it as, Dars'âpurna mâsâ-dîni kar mâni, i.e., "religious rites held half-monthly and at the Full-Moon in honour of the departed Manes when oblations are offered to the Sacred Fire."

2 With mankind.

3 i.e., "through thy favour they obtained sons," as explained by the Scholiast in the next line of the Commentary.

4 The Text has samjânata swai dakshais amaras : The Scholiast gives two interpretations of the Text. One we have given in the translation. The word daksha means prâna, vital air. So the passage means,—"associated with their own vital airs, they know all things." The word samjânata : may mean either "live for ever" or "contemplate."

earth with light), like the lustre of the radiant (sun). Thou, as soon as manifested, hast pervaded all the world with devout acts, being (both) the father and son of the Celestials.¹

2. The wise, the humble and discriminating Agni, is the giver of flavour to food, as the udder of cows (gives sweetness to the milk); invited (to the ceremony), he sits in the sacrificial chamber, diffusing happiness, like a benevolent man, amongst mankind.

3. He diffuses happiness in a dwelling, like a son (newly) born; he overcomes enemies in battle, like an animated charger; when I, along with other men, invoke Divinities living in one place, thou, Agni, assumest all (their) celestial natures.²

4. (The Rákshasás)³ never interrupt the rites performed for thee, since thou conferrest on the sacrificers happiness (as a reward); for should (such spirits) disturb thy sacrifice, then, assisted by leaders, (Maruts), equally (competent) like thyself,⁴ thou puttest the intruders to flight.

1 Devánâm pitâ putrah san. The passage is also explained, the protector, either of the Gods or of the priests (ritvijām), and their messenger, that is, at their command, like a son; but the expressions are, probably, to be used in their literal sense, with a metaphorical application. Agni, as the bearer of oblations, may be said to give paternal support to the Gods, whilst he is their son as the presenter to them of sacrificial offerings.—Wilson.

2 Tad devatárūpo bhavati,—he becomes of the form or nature of that Deity; as in the Text, Twam Agni Varuno jāyase twam Mitro bhavasi, etc.,—Thou art born as Varuna, thou becomest Mitra.—Wilson.

3 The Text has Nakīh minanti: Sāyana explains it as, “Rákshasás do not obstruct them.”

4 Samánair nribhīh,—with equal leaders, or men; that is, with the Maruts.

5. May Agni, who is possessed of manifold light, like the lover of the dawn,¹ the granter of habitations, and of cognizable form, know (the desires of) this, (his worshipper); (his rays), spontaneously bearing the oblation, open the doors (of the sacrificial chamber), and all spread through the visible heaven.

SUKTA VI. (LXX.)

Rishi, etc., as before.

WE solicit abundant (food). Agni, who is to be approached by meditation, and shines with pure light, pervades all holy rites, knowing well the acts that are addressed to the Deities, and (those which regulate) the birth of the human race.

2. (They offer oblations) on the mountain, or in the mansion, to that Agni, who is within the waters, within woods,² and within all movable and immovable things, immortal, and performing pious acts, like a benevolent (prince) among his people.

3. Agni, the lord of night,³ grants riches to (the worshipper) who adores him with sacred hymns. Agni, who art omniscient, and knowest the origin of Gods and men, protect all these (beings dwelling) upon earth.

² He is the garbha, the embryo, the internal germ of heat and life, in the waters, etc., all which depend for existence upon natural or artificial warmth.—Wilson.

4. Agni, whom many variously-tinted (mornings) and nights increase, whom, invested with truth, all movable and immovable things augment, has been propitiated, and is kindly seated at the holy rite, as the invoker (of the Gods), and rendering all (pious) acts (productive) of reward.

5. Agni, confer excellence upon our valued cattle, and may all men bring us acceptable tribute ; offering in many places sacrifices to thee, men receive riches from thee, as (sons) from an aged father.

6. (May Agni), who is like one who succeeds (in his undertakings), and acquires (what he wishes for), who is like a warrior casting a dart, and resembles a fearful adversary, who is brilliant in combats, (be to us a friend).

SUKTA VII. (LXXI.)

The Deity and Rishi are the same, but the metre is Trishtubh.

THE contiguous fingers, loving the affectionate Agni, as wives love their own husbands, please him (with offered oblations), and honour him, who is entitled to honour, (with gesticulations), as the rays of light (are assiduous in the service) of the dawn, which is (at first) dark, (then) glimmering, and (finally) radiant.

2. Our forefathers, the Angirāṣas, by their praises (of Agni), terrified the strong and daring devourer, (Paṇi), by the sound ; they made for us a path to the vast heaven, and obtained accessible day, the ensign of day,¹ (A'ditya), and the cows (that had been stolen).

3. They secured him, (Agni, in the sacrificial chamber), they made him worship the source of wealth:² whence opulent votaries preserve his fires and practise his rites. Free from all (other) desire, assiduous in his adoration, and sustaining gods and men by their offerings, they come into his presence.³

4 When the diffusive vital air⁴ excites Agni, he becomes bright and manifest⁵ in every mansion, and the institutor of the rite, imitating Bhrigu, prevails on him to perform the function of messenger, as a prince

² Aryâh, explained dhanasya swâminah; it does not appear why Rosen renders it matrons.—Wilson.

5. When (the worshipper) offers an oblation to his great and illustrious protector, the grasping (Rákshas), recognizing thee, Agni, retires, but Agni, the archer, sends after him a blazing arrow from his dreadful bow, and the God bestows light upon his own daughter, (the dawn).

6. When (the worshipper) kindles thee in his own dwelling, and presents an oblation to thee, daily desiring it, do thou, Agni, augmented in two ways, (as middling and as best), increase his means of sustenance: may he whom thou sendest with his car to battle, return with wealth.

7. All (sacrificial) viands concentrate in Agni, as the seven great rivers flow into the ocean: our food is not partaken of by our kinsmen,² therefore do thou, who knowest (all things), make our desires known to the Gods.

8. May that (digestive) faculty (of Agni) which regards food, be imparted to the devout and illustrious protector of priests, as the source of virile vigour;³ and may Agni be born as (his) robust, irreproachable, youthful, and intelligent son, and instigate him (to acts of worship).

² That is, we have not any to spare for others.

³ That is, the vigour derived from the digestive Agni; or, retas may be rendered, 'water;' when the passage will mean, "may fire and water, or heat and moisture, be spread through the earth for the generation of corn."

9. The Sun, who traverses alone the path of heaven^h with the speed of thought, is at once lord of all treasures : the two kings, Mitra and Varuṇa, with bounteous hands, are the guardians of the precious ambrosia of our cattle.

10. Dissolve not, Agni, our ancestral friendship, for thou art cognizant of the past as well as of the present ; in like manner as light (speeds over) the sky, so decay impairs (my body) ; think of me before that source of destruction (prevails).¹

SUKTA VIII. (LXXII.)

Rishi, etc., as before.

1. AGNI, holding in his hands many good things for men, appropriates the prayers addressed to the eternal creator.² Agni is the lord of riches, quickly bestowing (on those who please him) all golden (gifts).

2. All the immortals, and the unbewildered (Maruts), wishing for him was (dear) to us as a son, and was everywhere around, discovered him not ; oppressed with fatigue, wandering on foot, and cognizant of his acts, they stopped at the last beautiful (hiding-)place of Agni.

3. Inasmuch, Agni, as the pure (Maruts) worshipped thee, (equally) pure, with clarified butter for three

1 Which is tantamount to asking Agni to grant immortality,—Amritatwam prayachchhēti yāvat.—Wilson.

2 Swātmābhīmukham karoti,—he makes them present or applicable to himself ; the Creator is named Védhas, usually a name of Brahmā, and is here associated with s'ās'wata, the eternal ; this looks as if a First Cause were recognized, distinct from Agni and the elemental Deities. although, in a figurative sense, they are identified with it.—Wilson, years; therefore they acquired names worthy (to be repeated) at sacrifices, and, being regenerated, obtained celestial bodies.¹

4. Those who are to be worshipped, (the Gods), inquiring between the expansive heaven and earth for Agni, recited (hymns) dedicated to Rudra:² the troop of mortal³ (Maruts), with (Indra), the sharer of half the oblation,⁴ knowing where Agni was hiding, found him in his excellent retreat.

5. The Gods, discovering thee, sat down, and with their wives paid reverential adoration to thee upon their knees.⁵ Secure on beholding their friend, of

² The allusion to Agni's hiding himself, occurring previously, also in verse 2, has already been explained, but we have here some further curious identifications, from which it appears that Rudra is Agni; the hymns of the Gods are addressed to Agni, and are therefore termed Rudriyā, for Rudra is Agni. Rudra-agniḥ; the legend which is cited in explanation, from the Taittirīya branch of the Yajush, relates, that during a battle between the Gods and Asurās, Agni carried off the wealth which the former had concealed; detecting the theft, the Gods pursued the thief, and forcibly recovered their treasure; Agni wept (arodīt) at the loss, and was thence called Rudra—Wilson.

⁴ Here also we have only the epithet nemadhita, 'the half-sharer,' from nema, a half; to which, according to the Taittirīya school, Indra is entitled at all sacrifices; the other half goes to all the Gods,—sarve-dēvāḥ é ko arddhah, Indra éka evāparo arddhah.—Wilson.

⁵ Abhijnu; or it may be applied to Agni kneeling before them.—Wilson.

being protected, thy friends, the Gods, abandoned the rest of their bodies in sacrifice.¹

6. (Devout men), competent to offer sacrifices, have known the thrice seven mystic rites comprised in thee,² and with them, worshipped thee: do thou, therefore, with like affection, protect their cattle, and all that (belongs to them), movable or stationary.*

7. Agni, who art cognizant of all things to be known, ever provide for the subsistence of men, grief-alleviating (food); so shalt thou be the diligent bearer of oblations, and messenger of the Gods, knowing the paths between (earth and heaven), by which they travel.

8. The seven pure rivers that flow from heaven (are directed, Agni, by thee: by thee the priests), skilled in sacrifices, knew the doors of the (cave where) the treasure, (their cattle), were concealed; for thee Saramá discovered the abundant milk of the kine with which man, the progeny of Manu still is nourished.³

1 So the Text, Dévah yajñam atanwata, "The Gods verily constituted the sacrifice;" but the expression is still obscure, and refers to some legend, probably which has not been preserved.—Wilson.

2 Grihyāni padū(ni),—secret or mysterious steps by which heaven is to be obtained; meaning the ceremonies of the Vedas. These are arranged in three classes, each consisting of seven, or the Pāka yajñas, those in which food of some kind is offered, as in the Aupāsana, Homa, Vais'wadeva, &c.; the Havir-yajñas, those in which clarified butter is presented, as at the Agnyādheya, Dars'a, Púrnamāsa, and others; and the Soma-yajñas, the principal part of which is the libation of the Soma-Juice, as the Agnishtoma, Atyagnishtoma, etc. All these are comprised in Agni, because they cannot be celebrated without fire.—Wilson.

3 These circumstances are stated in the Text absolutely, without any reference to the instrument, or agent. The Scholiast supplies "Agni, by thee, etc.;" but the completion of the ellipse is consistent with prevailing notions; the sun, nourished by burnt offerings, is

9. Thou hast been fed. (Agni, with oblations), ever since the A'dityas, devising a road to immortality, instituted all (the sacred rites) that secured them from falling,¹ and mother earth, Aditi, strove with her magnitude to uphold (the world), along with her mighty sons.

10. (The offerers of oblations) have placed in this (Agni) the graceful honours (of the ceremony, and the two portions of clarified butter that are the two eyes² enabled to send down the rain which supplies the rivers; the Angirasas recovered their cattle when carried off by Vala through the knowledge obtained by holy sacrifices; and Indra sent Saramā on the search, when propitiated by oblations with fire. Hence, Agni may be considered as the prime mover in the incidents.—Wilson.

1 It may be doubted if either of the former translators has given a correct version of this passage: Rosen has, Diu cunctas luce destitutas per noctes stant; M. Langlois has, Qui s'élèvent assurant la marche de (l'astre) voyageur. The Text has, ye vis'wā swapatyāni, interpreted by Sáyana, sobhanāni apatana-hétu-bhūtāni,—those which were the prosperous causes of not falling; that is to say, certain sacred acts, which secured to the A'dityas their station in heaven; or, that immortality, the way to which they had made or devised. This interpretation is based upon a Taittiriya Text:—"The A'dityas, desirous of heaven (su-varga, or swarga), said, 'Let us go down to the earth;' they beheld there that (Shat-trins'adrātra) rite of thirty-six nights; they secured it, and sacrificed with it." It is to this, and a similar rite of fourteen nights, connected with the Ayanas, or 'comings' of the A'dityas, that allusion is made. Some reference to solar revolutions may be intended, although it is not obvious what can be meant, as no such movement is effected by thirty-six nights or days, and the Scholiast terms them Karmāni, 'acts or ceremonies.' A'tastha is also explained, they made or instituted: A'tasthuh swapatyāni means, according to him, chaturdas'arātra shat-trins'adrātrādityānam ayanādāni karmāni kṛitavantaḥ,—they made the rites or acts which were the Ayanas and others of the A'dityas, (and which were for) thirty-six or fourteen nights.—Wilson.

2 An expression found also in another Text; or there are, as it were, two eyes of a sacrifice, which are the two portions of the clarified butter.—Wilson.

(of the sacrifice) ; then the immortals come from heaven, and thy bright flames, Agni, spread in all directions like rushing rivers, and the Gods perceive it (and rejoice).

SUKTA IX. (LXXIII.)

THE Rishi, Deity, and metre are the same

AGNI, like a patrimonial wealth, is the giver of food ; he is a director, like the instructions of one learned in scripture ; he rests in the sacrificial chamber like a welcome guest, and like an officiating priest, he brings prosperity on the house of the worshipper.

2. He who is like the divine Sun, who knows the truth (of things), preserves by his actions (his votaries), in all encounters ; like nature,¹ he is unchangeable, and, like soul,² is the source of happiness : he is ever to be cherished.

3. He who, like the divine (Sun), is the supporter of the universe, abides on earth like a prince, (surrounded by) faithful friends : in his presence, men sit down like sons in the dwelling of a parent, and (in purity he resembles) an irreproachable and beloved wife.

4. Such as thou art, Agni, men preserve thee constantly kindled in their dwellings, in secure places, and offer upon thee abundant (sacrificial) food : do thou, in whom is all existence, be the bearer of riches (for our advantage).

¹ Amati, the term of the Text, is explained Rûpa or Swarûpa,—peculiar form or nature ; as this is essentially the same in all the modifications of earth, or any other element, so Agni is one and the same in all the sacrifices performed with fire.—Wilson.

5. May thy opulent worshippers, Agni, obtain (abundant) food : may the learned (who praise thee and offer thee (oblations), acquire long life : may we gain in battles booty from our foes, presenting their portion to the Gods for (the acquisition of) renown.

6. The cows, loving (Agni, who has come to the hall of sacrifice), sharing his splendour, have brought with full udders (their milk) to be drunk. The rivers, soliciting his good will, have flowed from a distance in the vicinity of the mountain.

7. (The Gods), who are entitled to worship, soliciting thy good will, have intrusted to thee, resplendent Agni, the (sacrificial) food, and, (for the due observance of sacred rites), they have made the night and morning of different colours, or black and purple.

8. May we, mortals, whom thou hast directed (to the performance of sacrifices) for the sake of riches, become opulent : filling heaven and earth, and the firmament (with thy radiance), thou protectest the whole world like a (sheltering) shade.¹

9. Defended, Agni, by thee, may we destroy the horses (of our enemies) by (our) horses, their men by (our) men, their sons by (our) sons, and may our sons, learned, and inheritors of ancestral wealth, live for a hundred winters.

10. May these our praises, sapient Agni, be grateful to thee, both in mind and heart ; may we be competent to detain thy well-supporting wealth, offering upon thee their share of the (sacrificial) food to the Gods.

ANUVA'KA XIII.

SUKTA I. (LXXIV.)

THE Deity is Agni; the Rishi, Gotama, son of Rahúgana; the metre, Gáyatrí.

HASTENING to the sacrifice, let us repeat a prayer to Agni, who hears us from afar.

2. Who, existing of old, has preserved wealth for the sacrificer, when malevolent men are assembled together.

3. Let men praise Agni as soon as generated, the slayer of Vṛitra,¹ and the winner of booty in many a battle.

4. (The sacrificer), in whose house thou art the messenger of the Gods, whose offering thou conveyest for their food, and whose sacrifice thou renderest acceptable—

5. Him, Aṅgiras, son of strength, men call fortunate in his sacrifice, his Deity, his oblations.

6. Bring hither, radiant Agni, the Gods, to (receive, our praise and our oblations for their food.

7. Whenever thou goest, Agni, on a mission of the Gods, the neighing of the horses of thy (swift-) moving chariot, however audible, is not heard.

8. He who was formerly subject to a superior, having been protected, Agni, by thee, now stands in thy presence as an offerer (of oblations) without bashfulness, and supplied with food.

9. Verily, divine Agni, thou art desirous of bestowing upon the offerer (of oblations) to the Gods, ample (wealth), brilliant, and giving vigour.

¹ Vṛitra may be here understood, an enemy in general; or, Agni may be identified with Indra.—Wilson.

SUKTA II. (LXXV.)

Rishi, Deity and metre as before.

ATTEND to our most earnest address, propitiatory of the Gods, accepting our oblations in thy mouth.

2. And then, most wise Agni, chief of the Angirasas, may we address (to thee) an acceptable and gratifying prayer.

3. Who, Agni, amongst men is thy kinsman? who is worthy to offer thee sacrifice? who, indeed, art thou, and where dost thou abide?

4. Worship for us, Mitra and Varuṇa; worship for us, all the Gods; (celebrate) a great sacrifice, be present in thine own dwelling.

SUKTA III. (LXXVI.)

Rishi and Deity as before; the metre is Trishtubh

WHAT approximation of the mind, Agni, to thee, can be accomplished for our good; what can a hundred encomiums (effect); who, by sacrifices, has obtained thy might; with what intent may we offer thee (oblations)?¹

2. Come, Agni, hither; invoker (of the Gods), sit down;² be our preceptor; for thou art irresistible: may the all-expansive heaven and earth defend thee, that thou mayest worship the Gods to their great satisfaction.

3. Utterly consume all the Rákshasás, Agni, and be the protector of our sacrifices against interruption.

¹ That is, it is not possible to offer sacrifice, praise, or prayer that shall be worthy of Agni.—Wilson.

² In the chamber where burnt-offerings are presented.

Bring hither the guardian of the Soma-Juice, (Indra),¹ with his steeds, that we may show hospitality to the giver of good.

4. I invoke (thee), who art the conveyer (of oblations), with thy flames, with a hymn productive of progeny (to the worshipper) ; sit down here with the Gods, and do thou, who art deserving of worship, discharge the office of Hotṛi, or of Potṛi, and awaken us, thou who art the depositary and generator of riches.

5. As at the sacrifice of the holy Manu, thou, a sage amongst sages, didst worship the Gods with oblations, so also, Agni, veracious invoker of the Gods, do thou to-day (present the oblations), with an exhilarating ladle.

SUKTA IV. (LXXVII.)

Rishi, etc., as before.

WHAT (oblations) may we offer to Agni? what praise is addressed to the luminous (Agni) that is agreeable to the Gods? that Agni who is immortal and observant of truth who is the invoker of the Gods, the performer of sacrifices, and who, (present) amongst men, conveys oblations to the Deities.

2. Bring hither, with praises, him who is most constant in sacrifices, observant of truth, and the invoker (of the Gods), for Agni, when he repairs to the Gods on the part of man, knows those (who are to be worshipped), and worships them with reverence.¹

3. For he is the performer of rites, he is the destroyer and reviver (of all things),² and, like a friend, he is the donor of unattained wealth; all men reverencing the Gods, and approaching the well-looking Agni, repeat his name first in holy rites.

4. May Agni, who is the chief director of sacrifices, and the destroyer of enemies, accept our praise and worship with oblations, and may those who are affluent with great wealth, who are endowed with strength, and by whom the sacrificial food has been prepared, be desirous to offer adoration.

5. Thus has Agni, the celebrator of sacrifices, and by whom all things are known, been hymned by the pious descendants of Gotama; to them has he given the bright Soma-Juice to drink, along with the sacrificial food, and, gratified by our devotion, he obtains nutriment (for himself).

² The words are marya and sâdhu; the Commentator explains the first, the killer or extirpator of all, and the latter, the producer.—Wilson.

SUKTA V. (LXXVIII.)

THE Rishi and Deity are the same ; the metre is Gāyatrī.

KNOWER and beholder of all that exists, Gotama¹ celebrates thee, Agni, with praise : we praise thee repeatedly with commendatory (hymns).²

2. To thee, that (Agni) whom Gotama, desirous of riches, worships with praise, we offer adoration with commendatory (hymns).

3. We invoke thee, such as thou art, the giver of abundant food, in like manner as did Aṅgiras : we praise thee repeatedly with commendatory (hymns).

4. We praise thee repeatedly with commendatory (hymns), who art the destroyer of Vṛitra, and who puttest the Dasyus to flight.

5. The descendants of Rahúgaṇa have recited sweet speeches to Agni : we praise him repeatedly with commendatory (hymns).

SUKTA VI. (LXXIX.)

THE Rishi is the same, Gotama ; the hymn consists of four Trichas, or triads ; the Deity of the first is the Agni of the middle region, the ethereal or electric fire or lightning ; the Deity of the other triads is Agni in his general character ; the metre of the first of them is Trishtubh, of the second, Ushnih, and of the last two, Gāyatrī.

THE golden-haired Agni is the agitator of the clouds when the rain is poured forth, and, moving with the swiftness of the wind, shines with a bright radiance. The mornings know not (of the showers),¹ like honest² (people), who, provided with food, are intent upon their own labours.

² Mantras is supplied by the Commentator ; the Text has only dyumnaih, ' with bright,' or those manifesting Agni's worth.—Wilson.

2. Thy falling (rays), accompanied by the moving (Maruts), strike against (the cloud): the black shedder of rain has roared; when this is done, (the shower) comes with delightful and smiling (drops), the rain descends, the clouds thunder.

3. When this, (the lightning, Agni), nourishes the world with the milk of the rain, and conducts it by the most direct ways³ to (the enjoyment of) water, then Mitra, Aryaman, Varuṇa, and the circumambient (troops of Maruts) pierce through the (investing) membrane into the womb of the cloud.

4. Agni, son of strength, lord of food and of cattle, give us abundant sustenance, thou who knowest all that exists.

5. He, the blazing Agni, who is wise, and the granter of dwellings, is to be praised by our hymns: Oh! thou whose mouth (glows) with many (flames),⁴

1 Agni, in his manifestation of lightning, takes part in the production of rain by piercing the clouds; the dawn is not concerned in the operation; but this is said, not to depreciate the excellence of Ushas, but to enhance that of Agni.—Wilson.

2 Satyáh, true, sincere; there is no substantive; but Prajáh, people, or progeny, is supplied by the Commentary; Rosen substitutes mulieres, satyáh being feminine, but so also is Prajá.—Wilson.

3 Or uses; as drinking, washing, bathing, and the like.—Wilson.

4 Purvaníka; from puru, many, and aníka, face or mouth; flames are understood, agreeably to a common name of Agni, Jwálā-jihva, flame-tongued. Rosen has evidently read the mukha of the Commentary, sukha, and explains purvaníka, multis gaudiis fruens.—Wilson.

shine (propitiously, so) that food-providing wealth may be ours.

6. Shining Agni, drive off (all disturbers of the rite), either by thyself or (thy servants), whether by day or by night; sharp-visaged Agni, destroy the Rákshasás, entirely.

7. Agni, who in all rites art to be praised, guard us with thy protection, (propitiated) by the recitation of the metrical hymn.¹

8. Grant us, Agni, riches that dispel poverty, that are desirable (to all), and cannot be taken (from us) in all encounters (with our foes).

9. Grant us, Agni, for our livelihood, wealth, with sound understanding, conferring happiness, and sustaining (us through life).

10. Gotama, desirous of wealth, offers to the sharp-flaming Agni pure prayers and praises.

11. May he, Agni, who annoys us, whether nigh or afar, perish, and do thou be to us (propitious) for our advancement.

12. The thousand-eyed,² all-beholding Agni, drives away the Rákshasás, and, (praised by us) with holy hymns, he, (the invoker of the Gods), celebrates their praise.

SUKTA VII. (LXXX.)

THE Rishi is Gotama, as before, but the Deity is Indra, ; the metre is Pankti.

MIGHTY wielder of the thunderbolt. when the priest¹ had thus exalted thee (by praise), and the exhilarating Soma-Juice (had been drunk), thou didst expel, by thy vigour, Ahi from the earth, manifesting thine own sovereignty.²

2. That exceedingly exhilarating Soma-Juice, which was brought by the hawk³ (from heaven), when poured forth, has exhilarated thee, so that in thy vigour, thunderer, thou hast struck Vritra from the sky, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

3. Hasten, assail, subdue ; thy thunderbolt cannot fail : thy vigour, Indra, destroys men ; slay Vritra, win the waters, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

4. Thou hast struck Vritra from off the earth and from heaven ; (now) let loose the wind-bound, life-sustaining rain, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

5. Indignant Indra, encountering him, has struck with his bolt the jaw of the trembling Vritra, setting the waters free to flow, and manifesting his own sovereignty.

1 The Brahmâ, which the Scholiast interprets Brâhmana.—Wilson.

2 The burthen of this and of all the other stanzas of this hymn is archannanu swarâjyam ; the first term usually implies worshipping, honouring, but the Commentator gives as its equivalent, prakatayan : swasya swâmitwam prakatayan,—making manifest his own mastership or supremacy.—Wilson.

3 Syenâbhrita, as Rosen translates it, accipitri delatus ; the Scholiast says it was brought from heaven by the Gâyatri, having the wings of a hawk.—Wilson.

6. Indra has struck him on the temple with his hundred-edged thunderbolt, and, exulting, wishes to provide means of sustenance for his friends, manifesting his own sovereignty.

7. Cloud-borne Indra, wielder of the thunderbolt, verily thy prowess is undisputed, since thou, with (superior) craft, hast slain that deceptive deer,¹ manifesting thine own sovereignty.

8. Thy thunderbolts were scattered widely over ninety-and-nine rivers;² great is thy prowess; strength is deposited in thy arms, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

9. A thousand² mortals worshipped him together; twenty³ have hymned (his praise); a hundred (sages) repeatedly glorify him; so, Indra, is the oblation lifted up, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

10. Indra overcame by his strength the strength of Vṛitra: great is his manhood, wherewith, having slain Vṛitra, he let loose the waters, manifesting his own sovereignty.

11. This heaven and earth trembled, thunderer, at thy wrath, when, attended by the Maruts, thou slewest Vṛitra by thy prowess, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

12. Vṛitra deterred not Indra by his trembling or his clamour; the many-edged iron thunderbolt fell upon him: (Indra) manifesting his own sovereignty.

¹ The Commentary says Vritra had assumed the form of a deer, but nothing further relating to this incident occurs.—Wilson.

ed his strength ; pleasing in appearance, having a handsome chin, and possessing (bright) coursers, he grasps the iron thunderbolt in his contiguous hands for (our) prosperity.

5. He has filled the space of earth and the firmament (with his glory) ; he has fixed the constellations in the sky : no one has been ever born, nor will be born, Indra, like to thee : thou hast sustained the universe.

6. May Indra, the protector, who returns to the giver (of oblations) the food that is fit for mortals, bestow (such food) on us : distribute thy wealth, which is abundant, so that I may obtain (a portion) of thy riches.

7. The upright performer of (pious) acts is the donor of herds of cattle to us, when receiving frequent enjoyment (from our libations) : take up, Indra, with both hands, many hundred (sorts) of treasure ; sharpen (our intellects), bring us wealth.

8. Enjoy along with us, O hero, the suffused libation for (the increase of our) strength and wealth : we know thee (to be) the possessor of vast riches, and address to thee our desires ; be, therefore, our protector.

9. These, thy creatures, Indra, cherish (the oblation) that may be partaken of by all ; thou, lord of all, knowest what are the riches of those men who make no offerings : bring their wealth to us.

SUKTA IX. (LXXXII.)

THE Deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Pankti, except in the last stanza, where it is Ṣagatī.

APPROACH, Maghavan, and listen to our praises; be not different (from what thou hast hitherto been);¹ since thou hast inspired us with true speech, thou art solicited with it; therefore, quickly yoke thy horses.

2. (Thy worshippers) have eaten the food which thou hadst given, and have rejoiced, and have trembled through their precious (bodies); self-illuminated sages have glorified thee with commendable thoughts; therefore, Indra, quickly yoke thy horses.

3. We praise thee, Maghavan, who lookest benignly (upon all); thus praised by us, repair (in thy car), filled with treasure, to those who desire thy presence: Indra, quickly yoke thy horses.

4. May he ascend that chariot which rains (blessings), and grants cattle, and which provides the vessel filled with the mixture of Soma-Juice and grain:² quickly, Indra, yoke thy horses.

5. Performer of many (holy) acts, let thy steeds be harnessed on the right and on the left, and when

² Patram hariyojanam, a plate or patera filled with hariyojanam; the appellation of a mixture of fried barley, or other grain, and Soma-Juice.—Wilson.

13. When thou, (Indra). didst encounter with thy bolt Vritra, and the thunder-bolt (which he hurled), then, Indra, the strength of thee determined to slay Abhi was displayed in the heavens, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

14. At thy shout, wielder of the thunderbolt, all things, moveable or immoveable, trembled; even Tvashtri shook with fear, Indra, at thy wrath, manifesting thine own sovereignty.

15. We know not of a certainty the all-pervading Indra: who (does know him, abiding) afar off¹ in his strength? for in him have the Gods concentrated riches, and worship, and power, manifesting his own sovereignty.

16. In like manner as of old, so in whatever act of worship Atharvan, or father Manu, or Dadhyañch² engaged, their oblations and their hymns were all congregated in that Indra, manifesting his own sovereignty.

² Manush-pitâ, Manu, being the progenitor of all mankind. Dadhyañch, or Dadhichi, is a well-known Rishi, the son of Atharvan, of whom mention subsequently more than once recurs.—Wilson.

SIXTH ADHYA'YA.

SUKTA VIII. (LXXXI.)

THE Rishi, Deity, and metre as before.

INDRA, the slayer of Vṛitra, has been augmented in strength and satisfaction by (the adoration of) men :¹ we invoke him in great conflicts as well as in little ; may he defend us in battles.

2. For thou, hero, Indra, art a host ; thou art the giver of much booty ; thou art the exalter of the humble ; thou bestowest (riches) on the worshipper who offers thee oblations, for abundant is thy wealth.

3. When battles arise, wealth devolves on the victor ; yoke thy horses, humblers of the pride (of the foe), that thou mayest destroy one and enrich another :² place us, Indra, in affluence.

4. Mighty through sacrifice, formidable (to foes), partaking of the sacrificial food, Indra has augment-

1 The Scholiast explains this,—“a Deity acquiring vigour by praise increases ;” that is, becomes more powerful and mighty. The notion is clear enough, but although ‘increases’ is the literal rendering of varddhaté, it expresses its purport but incompletely.—Wilson.

2 We have a legend in illustration of this passage : Gotama, the son of Rahúgana, was the Purohita of the Kuru and Srinjaya princes, and, in an engagement with other kings, propitiated Indra by this hymn, who, in consequence, gave the victory to the former. Rosen puts the phrase interrogatively, Quemnam occisurus es, quemnam opulentia dabis ? but the Scholiast explains kam, whom, by kamchit, any one, some one ; that is, Indra gives the victory to whomsoever he is pleased with.—Wilson.

exhilarated by the (sacrificial) food, repair in thy chariot to thy beloved wife: quickly, Indra, yoke thy horses.

6. I harness thy long-maned steeds with (sacred) prayers: depart; take the reins in your hands: the effused and exciting juices have exhilarated thee, wielder of the thunderbolt; thus filled with nutriment, rejoice with thy spouse.

SUKTA X. (LXXXIII.)

Rishi and Deity as before; the metre is Jagati.

THE man who is well protected, Indra, by thy cares, (and dwells) in a mansion where there are horses, is the first who goes to (that where there are) cows; enrich him with abundant riches, as the unconscious rivers¹ flow in all directions to the ocean.

2. In like manner, as the bright waters flow to the sacrificial ladle, so they (the Gods) look down (upon it); as the diffusive light (descends to earth), the Gods convey it, desirous of being presented to them by progressive (movements to the altar), and are impatient to enjoy it, filled with the oblation, as bridegrooms long for (their brides).²

² In this stanza, as usual in the more elaborate metres, we encounter strained collocations and elliptical and obscure allusions,

3. Thôu hast associated, Indra, words of sacred praise with both (the grain and butter of oblation), placed together in ladles, and jointly presented to thee, so that (the sacrificer), undisturbed, remains (engaged, in thy worship, and is prosperous ; for to the sacrificer pouring out oblations (to thee), auspicious power is granted.

4. The Ângirasas first prepared (for Indra) the sacrificial food, and then, with kindled fire, (worshipped him) with a most holy rite : they, the institutors of the ceremony), acquired all the wealth of Paṇi. comprising horses, and cows, and (other) animals.

5. Atharvaṇ first by sacrifices discovered the path (of the stolen cattle) : then the bright Sun, the cherisher of pious acts, was born.¹ Atharvaṇ regained the cattle ; Kāvya (Us'anas) was associated with him.²

imperfectly transformed into something intelligible by the additions of the Scholiast ; thus, avah pas'yanti, 'they look down,' is rendered special by adding dévâh, 'the Gods,' who look down, it is said, upon the sacrificial ladle, hotriyam, well pleased to behold it filled with the intended libation. The Text, again, has only "as diffused light ;" the Comment adds, "descends on earth." In the next phrase we have, "the Gods lead that which is pleased by the libation, and wishes for them, either by progressive movements, or in an eastern direction (prâchair), as bridegrooms delight." What is so led, and whither ? The ladle, chamasa, the altar, vedî, as well as the bride or maiden, kanayakâ, are filled up by the Comment. The same character of brevity and obscurity pervades the entire hymn.—Wilson.

1. A'jani ; but it may mean, as the Scholiast says, "the Sun appeared, in order to light the way to the cave where the cows were hidden.—Wilson.

2. With Indra, according to the Comment, which also identifies Kāvya with Us'anas, and the latter with Bhrigu ; "Kāvyaḥ Kaveḥ putra Us'and Bhriguḥ," meaning, however, perhaps, only that Us'anas was of the family of Bhrigu.—Vishnu Purâna, 82, n.—Wilson.

Let us worship the immortal (Indra), who was born to restrain (the Asuras).¹

6. Whether the holy grass be cut (for the rite) that brings down blessings,² whether the priest repeats the (sacred) verse in the brilliant (sacrifice), whether the stone (that expresses the Soma-Juice) sound like the priest who repeats the hymn, on all these occasions Indra rejoices.

SUKTA XI. (LXXXIV.)

THE Deity and the Rishi are the same, but the metre is diversified.

The first six stanzas are in the Anushtubh measure; the three next, in Uskniḥ; the three next, in Pankī; the three next, in Gāyatrī; and the next three, in the Trishtubh; the nineteenth verse is in the Bṛihati-, and the twentieth, in the Sato-Bṛihati-, metre.

THE Soma-Juice has been expressed, Indra, for thee : potent humbler (of thy foes), approach; may vigour fill thee (by the potation), as the Sun fills the firmament with his rays.

2. May his horses bear Indra, who is of irresistible prowess, to the praises and sacrifices of sages and of men.

3. Slayer of Vṛitra, ascend thy chariot, for thy horses have been yoked by prayer; may the stone

² Swāpatyāya; resolving this into Su and āpatya, Rosen renders it, egregiam prolem conferentis causa, and M. Langlois has, le chef de famille, jaloux d'obtenir une heureuse postérité Sāyana understands it differently, and explains it by Sobhanāpatana hetubhūtāya,—for the sake of the descent, or coming down, of what is good.—Wilson.

(that bruises the Soma) attract, by its sound, thy mind towards us.

4. Drink, Indra, this excellent, immortal, exhilarating libation, the drops of which pellucid (beverage) flow towards thee in the chamber of sacrifice.

5. Offer worship quickly to Indra; recite hymns (in his praise); let the effused drops exhilarate him; pay adoration to his superior strength.

6. When, Indra, thou harnesses thy horses, there is no one a better charioteer than thou; no one is equal to thee in strength; no one, although well-horsed, has overtaken thee.

7. He who alone bestows wealth upon the man who offers him oblations, is the undisputed sovereign, Indra:—ho!¹

8. When will he trample with his foot upon the man who offers no oblations, as if upon a coiled-up snake;² when will Indra listen to our praises?—ho!

9. Indra grants formidable strength to him who worships him, having libations prepared:—ho!

10. The white cows drink of the sweet Soma-Juice thus poured forth, and, associated with the bounti-

ful Indra, for the sake of beauty, rejoice : abiding (in their stalls), they are expectant of his sovereignty.¹

11. Desirous of his contact, those brindled cows dilute the Soma-Juice with their milk : the milch-kine that are loved of Indra, direct his destructive thunderbolt against his foes, abiding (in their stalls), expectant of his sovereignty.

12. These intelligent kine reverence his prowess with the adoration (of their milk) ; they celebrate his many exploits as an example to later (adversaries) ; abiding (in their stalls), expectant of his sovereignty.

13. Indra, with the bones of Dadhyañch, slew ninety times nine Vritras.²

1 This, which constitutes the burthen of the triad, is rather obscure ; the Text is, vasvîranu swarâjyam, literally, dwelling after, or according to, his own dominion. Sâyana does not make it more intelligible : " Those cows, " he says, " who, by giving milk, are the means of providing habitation (nivâsakârinyah), remain looking to the kingdom of him, 'or Indra ;" so Rosen has, domicilium procurantes, quæ ipsius dominium respicientes adstant.—Wilson.

2 Dadhyañch, also named Dadhîcha and Dadhîcni, is a well-known sage in Paurânîk legend, of whom, it is said, that his bones formed the thunderbolt of Indra. The story seems to have varied from the original Vaidik fiction, as we shall have subsequent occasion to notice (Sûkta cxvi.). In this place, the story told by the Scholiast also somewhat differs. He relates, that while Dadhyañch, the son of Atharvan, lived, the Asuras were intimidated and tranquillized by his appearance, but when he had gone to Swarga, they overspread the whole earth. Indra, inquiring what had become of him, and whether nothing of him had been left behind, was told that the horse's head with which he had at one time taught the Madhuvidyâ to the As'wins, was somewhere in existence, but no one knew where. Search was made for it, and it was found in the lake S'aryanavat, on the skirts of Kurukshêtra ; and with the bones of the skull, Indra slew the Asuras, or, as otherwise explained, foiled the nine times ninety, or eight hundred and ten, stratagems or devices of the Asurâs or Vritras. The Scholiast accounts for the 14. Wishing for the horse's head hidden in the mountains, he found it at S'aryanávat.

15. The (solar rays) found on this occasion the light of Twashtri verily concealed in the mansion of the moving Moon.¹

number, by saying, that, in the beginning, the A'surímaya, or demoniac illusion, was practised in the three worlds, for three periods in each,—past, present, and future, whence it was ninefold; each being exerted with three s'aktis, or energies, made the number twenty-seven; each of these again being modified by the three gunas, they become eighty-one, and the scene of their display extending to each of the ten regions of space, the total reaches the nine times ninety of the Text, or eight hundred and ten. This seems to be pure invention, without any rational or allegorical meaning.—Wilson.

1 The Text has only "they found;" the Scholiast, following Yáska (Nir. 4, 25), supplies A'ditya rásmayah, the rays of the Sun. Twashtri is here used for the Sun, being one of the A'dityas; or, according to the Scholiast, for Indra, to whom the hymn is addressed, and who is also one of the A'dityas. The purport of the stanza is apparently the obscure expression of an astronomical fact, known to the authors of the Védás, that the Moon shone only through reflecting the light of the Sun; so it is said, "the rays of the Sun are reflected back in the bright watery orb of the Moon;" and again, "the solar radiance, concealed by the night, enters into the Moon, and thus dispels darkness by night as well as by day." According to the Nirukta, 2, 6, it is one ray of the Sun (that named Sushumna) which lights up the Moon, and it is with respect to that, that its light is derived from the Sun. The Purānas have adopted the doctrine of the Védas.—Vishnu Purana, 36

2 Another interpretation may be assigned to this verse, which turns upon rendering Kah by Prajápati, instead of who, and ga by

17. Who goes forth, (through dread of foes, when Indra is at hand); who is harmed (by his enemies); who is terrified; who is aware that Indra is present, who that he is night?¹ What need is there that any one should importune Indra for his son, his elephant, his property, his person, or his people?

18. Who praises the (sacrificial) fire, (lighted for Indra), or worships him with the oblation of clarified butter, presented in the ladle, according to the constant seasons?² To whom do the Gods quickly bring (the wealth) that has been called for? What sacrificer, engaged in offering oblations and favoured by the Gods thoroughly knows Indra?

19. Powerful Indra, be present and be favourable to the mortal (who adores thee): there is no other giver of felicity, Maghavan, than thou; hence, Indra, I recite thy praise.

20. Granter of dwellings, let not thy treasury, let not thy benefits,³ ever be detrimental to us. Friend of mankind, bring to us, who are acquainted with prayers, all sorts of riches.

words of the Vêda, instead of horses; making, "Prajâpati combines to-day with the burthen of the sacrifice the sacred words that are effective, brilliant, essential, emitted from the mouth, animating the heart, and productive of happiness: the worshipper who fulfils the object of such prayers, obtains life."—Wilson.

1 That is, we know it very well, and are therefore secure in his presence at this ceremony; or Kah may again be explained by Prajâpati, with the sense of the stanza modified accordingly.—Wilson.

2 Ritubhir dhruvebhih; in which ritu may have its ordinary sense of 'season'; or the passage may mean, 'presented by the Divinities called Ritus, who preside over sacrifices,' as in the Text, Ritavo vai prâyâjah,—the Ritus are the chief sacrifices; i.e., prayâjadevatâh,—the Deities presiding over them.—Wilson.

3 Utayâh, benefits, assistances; but it may be read, dhûtayaḥ, shakers, agitators; i.e., the Maruts, or winds.—Wilson.

ANUVA'KA XIV.

SUKTA I. (LXXXV.)

THE Deities are the Maruts, the Rishi, Gotama: the metre of the fifth and twelfth verses is Trishtubh, of the rest, Jagati.

THE Maruts who are going forth decorate themselves like females: thy are gliders (through the air), the sons of Rudra, and the doers of good works, by which they promote the welfare of earth and heaven: heroes, who grind (the solid rocks), they delight in sacrifices.

2. They, inaugurated by the Gods,¹ have attained majesty; the sons of Rudra have established their dwelling above the sky: glorifying him (Indra) who merits to be glorified, they have inspired him with vigour: the sons of Pris'ni have acquired dominion.

3. When the sons of earth² embellish themselves with ornaments, they shine resplendent in their persons with (brilliant) decorations; they keep aloof every adversary: the waters follow their path.³

4. They who are worthily worshipped shine with various weapons: incapable of being overthrown, they are the overthrowers (of mountains): Maruts; swift as thought, intrusted with the duty of sending rain, yoke the spotted deer to your cars.

5. When, Maruts, urging on the cloud, for the sake of (providing) food, you have yoked the deer to your chariots, the drops fall from the radiant¹ (Sun), and moisten the earth, like a hide, with water.

6. Let your quick-paced, smooth-gliding coursers bear you hither); and, moving swiftly, come with your hands (filled with good things): sit, Maruts, upon the broad seat of sacred grass, and regale yourselves with the sweet sacrificial food.

7. Confiding in their own strength, they have increased in (power); they have attained heaven by their greatness, and have made (for themselves) a spacious abode: may they, for whom Vishṇu defends (the sacrifice) that bestows all desires and confers delight, come (quickly), like birds, and sit down upon the pleasant and sacred grass.

8. Like heroes, like combatants, like men anxious for food, the swift-moving (Maruts) have engaged in battles: all beings fear the Maruts, who are the leaders (of the rain), and awful of aspect like princes.

9. Indra wields the well-made, golden, many-bladed thunderbolt, which the skilful Twasṭri² has framed for him, that he may achieve great exploits in war. He has slain Vṛitra and sent forth an ocean of water.

10. By their power, they bore the well aloft, and clove asunder the mountain that obstructed their path: the munificent Maruts, blowing upon their pipe,¹ have conferred, when exhilarated by the Soma-Juice, desirable (gifts upon the sacrificer).

11. They brought the crooked well to the place (where the Muni was), and sprinkled the water upon the thirsty Gotama:² the variously-radiant (Maruts) come to his succour, gratifying the desire of the sage with life-sustaining (waters).

12. Whatever blessings (are diffused) through the three worlds, and are in your gift, do you bestow upon the donor (of the oblation), who addresses you with praise; bestow them, also, Maruts, upon us, and grant us, bestowers of all good, riches, whence springs prosperity.

SUKTA II. (LXXXVI.)

Rishi and Deities the same; the metre is Ġâyatri.

THE man in whose mansion, resplendent Maruts, descending from the sky, you drink (the libation), is provided with most able protectors.

2. Maruts, bearers of oblations, hear the invocation of the praises of the worshipper with or (without) sacrifices.³

1 Dhamanto vânatâ. The Scholiast explains vânâ to be a lute, a vinâ with a hundred strings,—a sort of Æolian harp, perhaps; dhamanta, 'blowing,' would better apply to a pipe, a wind instrument.

2 In this and the next stanza, allusion is made to a legend in which it is related that the Rishi Gotama, being thirsty, prayed to the Maruts for relief, who thereupon brought a well from a distance to his hermitage. This exploit is subsequently (Sukta cxvi.) related to the Asvins.

3 The expression is yajñair-vâ, 'with sacrifices or,' the 'without' is supplied by the Scholiast.

3. And may he for whom ministrant priests have sharpened¹ the sapient (troop of the Maruts), walk among pastures crowded with cattle.

4. The libation is poured out for the hero (band) at the sacrifice, on the appointed days, and the hymn is repeated, and their joy (is excited).

5. May the Maruts, victorious over all men, hear (the praises) of this (their worshipper), and may (abundant) food be obtained by him who praises them.

6. Enjoying the protection of you who behold all things, we have offered you, Maruts, (oblations) for many years.

7. Maruts, who are to be especially worshipped, may the man whose offering you accept be ever prosperous.

8. Possessors of true vigour, be cognizant of the wishes of him who praises you, and toils in your service, desirous of (your favour.)

9. Possessors of true vigour, you have displayed your might, with the lustre (of which) you have destroyed the Rákshasas.

10. Dissipate the concealing darkness; drive away every devouring (foe); show us the light we long for.

¹ Atakshata, have sharpened, i.e., have excited or animated, by their offerings.

SUKTA III. (LXXXVII.)

Rishi and Deities as before; metre, Jagati.

ANNIHILATORS (of adversaries,) endowed with great strength, loud-shouting, unbending, inseparable¹ partakers of the evening oblation,² constantly worshipped and leaders (of the clouds), (the Maruts), by their personal³ decorations, are conspicuous (in the sky), like certain rays of the sun.

2. When, Maruts, flying like birds along a certain path (of the sky), you collect the moving passing (clouds) in the nearest portions (of the firmament), then coming into collision with your cars, they pour forth (the waters); therefore, do you shower upon your worshipper the honey-coloured rain.⁴

1. Always associated in troops —Wilson.

2. The term is Rijîshinah, which is not very clearly explained; Rijîsha, in ordinary use, means a frying-pan, but here the Scholiast seems to consider it as a synonym of Soma, the Maruts being thus named because they are entitled, at the third daily ceremony, or the evening worship, to a share of the effusion of the Rijîsha, —Rijîshasya abhishavât; or the term may signify, he adds, "the acquirers or receivers of the juices," —Prârajayitârah rasânâm; from rij, to acquire: Rosen has, lance sacrificiis culti; M. Langlois, amis de nos sacrifices. —Wilson.

3. Stribhîh, covering, or clothing; from stri, to cover; an epithet of anjibhîh, ornaments; swasarirasyâchchhîdakair, âbharanaih, —with ornaments covering their own persons. As the word is separated from the substantive, however, by the intervening simile, "like some rays" (kechid usrà iva), it has been understood in a different sense by former translators: thus, Rosen has, Ornamentis dignoscuntur, rari lucis, radii velut qui stellis effunduntur; and M. Langlois, Les Maruts brillent sous leurs parures, comme les nuages sous les feux des étoiles; but stribhîh cannot have any relation to stars. —Wilson.

4. Madhuvarnam, having the colour of honey; or, according to the Commentator, being equally pure or pellucid (swachchha). —Wilson.

3. When they assemble (the clouds) for the good work, earth trembles at their impetuous movements, like a wife (whose husband is away) : sportive, capricious, armed with bright weapons, and agitating (the solid rocks), they manifest their inherent might.

4. The troop of Maruts is self-moving, deer-borne, ever young, lords of this (earth), and invested with vigour : (you, who are sincere liberators from debt,¹ irreproachable, and shedders of rain, are the protectors of this our rite.

5. We declare by our birth our ancient sire, that the tongue (of praise) accompanies the manifesting (invocation of the Maruts) at the libations of the Soma ; for, inasmuch as they stood by, encouraging Indra in the conflict, they have acquired names that are to be recited at sacrifices.

6. Combining with the solar rays, they have willingly poured down (rain) for the welfare (of mankind) and, hymned by the priests, have been pleased partakers of the (sacrificial food) ; addressed with praises, moving swiftly, and exempt from fear, they have become possessed of a station agreeable and suitable to the Maruts.

SUKTA IV. (LXXXVIII.)

Rishi and Deity as before; the metre of the first and last stanzas Prastara-pankti of the intermediate four, Jagatî.

COME, Maruts,¹ with your brilliant, light-moving, well-weaponed, steed-harnessed chariots; doers of good deeds, descend like birds, (and bring us) abundant food.

2. To what glorifier (of the Gods) do they repair with their ruddy, tawny, car-bearing horses for his advantage? bright as burnished (gold), and armed with the thunderbolt, they furrow the earth with their chariotwheels.

3. Maruts, the threatening (weapon) are upon your persons, (able to win) dominion: (to you) they raise lofty sacrifices, like (tall) trees: well-born Maruts, for-you do wealthy worshippers enrich the stone (that grinds the Soma-Plant).

4. Fortunate days have befallen you, (sons of Gotama), when thirsty, and have given lustre to the rite for which water was essential; the sons of Gotama, (offering) oblations with sacred hymns, have raised aloft the well (provided) for their dwelling.

5. This hymn is known to be the same as that which Gotama recited, Maruts, in your (praise), when

1 The Scholiast here proposes various etymologies of the name Marut, some of which are borrowed from Yâska, Nir. 11, 13. They sound (ruvanti, from ru), having attained mid-heaven (mitam); or,
 They sound without measure (amitam); or, They shine (from ruch), in the clouds made (mitam), by themselves; or, They hasten (dravanti) in the sky. All the minor Divinities, that people the mid air said in Védas to be styled Maruts, as in the Text, "All females whose station is the middle heaven, the all-pervading masculine Vâyu, and all the troops (of Demigods), are Maruts." : Sâyana also cites the Paurânîk tradition of the birth of the forty-nine Maruts, in seven troops, as the sons of Kas'yapa—(Vishnu Purâna), he beheld you seated in your chariots with golden wheels, armed with iron weapons, hurrying hither and thither, and destroying your mightiest foes.

6. This is that praise, Maruts, which, suited (to your merits), glorifies every one of you. The speech of the priest has now glorified you, without difficulty, with sacred verses, since (you have placed) food in our hands.

SUKTA V. (LXXIX.)

THE Rishi, as before, Gotama; but the hymn is addressed to the Vis'wadevas. The metre of the first five stanzas and of the seventh is Ṣugati; of the sixth, Virātssthāna, and of the last three, Trishtubh.

MAY auspicious works, unmolested, unimpeded, and subversive (of foes), come to us from every quarter; may the gods, turning not away from us, but granting us protection, day by day, be ever with us for our advancement.

2. May the benevolent favour of the gods (be ours); may the bounty of the gods, ever approving of the upright, light upon us; may we obtain the friendship of the gods, and may the gods extend our days to longevity.

3. We invoke them with an ancient Text,¹ Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Daksha, Asridh, Atyaman, Varuṇa, Soma, the As'wins; and may the gracious Saraswati grant us happiness.²

¹ Purvayā nividā; nivid is a synonym of vāch, speech, or a text; here said to be a Text of the Vēda.—Wilson.

² Most of these, here included amongst the Vis'wadevas, have occurred before; but the Scholiast here also explains their functions:—

4 May the wind waft to us the grateful medicament,¹ may mother earth, may father heaven, (convey it (to us),² may the stones that express the Soma-juice, and are productive of pleasure, (bring) it (to us); As'wins, who are to be meditated upon, hear (our application)

5 We invoke that lord of living beings, that protector of things immovable, Indra, who is to be propitiated by pious rites, for our protection; as Púshan has ever been our defender for the increase of our riches, so may he (continue) the unmolested guardian of our welfare

Bhaga and Mitra are A'dityas, and the latter is especially the lord of day, as, by the text, maitrām va ahar,—the day is dependent on Mitra. Aditi is the mother of the gods, Dakṣha is called a Prāśāpāli able to make the world; or, he is the creator (Hiranyagarbha), diffused among breathing or living creatures as breath or life, as by the Text, Prāno vai Dakṣha,—Dakṣha verily is breath. Asridh, from sridh, to dry up, undrying, unchanging, that is the class of Maruts. Aryaman is the sun, as by the Text, Asau va āditya āryama,—he, the sun, is Aryaman. Varuṇa is named from vr, to surround, encompassing the wicked with his bonds, he is also the lord of night, as by the Text, Vāruṇ rātri,—the night is dependent on Varuṇa. Soma is twofold; the plant so called on earth, and the moon, as a Divinity in heaven. The As'wins are so termed either from having horses (as'wavantau), or from pervading all things, the one with moisture, the other with light, according to Yaska, who also states the question, Who were they? which is thus answered; according to some, they are heaven and earth, to others, day and night, according to others, the sun and moon, and, according to the traditionists (Ātīhāsika), they were two virtuous princes.—Nirukta 12, 1.—Wilson

3 Bheshajam, that medicament which the As'wins, as the physicians of the gods, are qualified to bestow. No other specification is given.—Wilson

4 Earth is so termed, as producing all things necessary for life, and heaven as sending rain, and therefore indirectly nourishing all things.—Wilson.

May Indra, who listens to much praise, guard our welfare, may Pûshan, who knows all things, guard our welfare, may Tarkshya,¹ with unblemished weapons, guard our welfare

7 May the Mîruts, whose coursers are spotted deer, who are the sons of Pris'ni, gracefully-moving, frequenters of sacrifices, (seated) on the tongue of Agni, regards (of all), and radiant as the sun, may all the gods come hither for our preservation

Let us hear, gods, with our ears, what is good; objects of sacrifice, let us see with our eyes what is good, let us, engaged in our praises, enjoy with firm limb and (sound) bodies the term of life granted by the gods.²

9 Since a hundred years were appointed (for the life of man), interpose not, gods, in the midst of our passing existence, by inflicting infirmity on our bodies, so that our sons become our sires.

1 Tarkshya is a patronymic, implying son of Triksha and, according to the Scholiast, Garuda. He is termed in the Text Arishtanemi,—he who has unharmed or irresistible (arishṭa) weapons (nemi), or the latter may imply, as usual, the circumference of a wheel—whose chariot-wheel is unimpeded, but Arishtanemi occurs in the Vāgvi Purāṇa, as the name of a Prajāpati, so that the passage might mean Arishtanemi, the son of Triksha, which, according to some authorities, is a name of the patriarch Kas'yapa. The same make Tarkshya a synonym of Arima, the personified dawn. It is doubtful if we have any reference to the vehicle of Vishnu, Garuda—Wilson.

2 This may be predicated of all the deities, as they receive oblations through the mouth of Agni—Wilson.

3 Devahitam, whence it may be rendered, as the Scholiast proposes, in the singular, understanding by Deva, Prajapati, either a patriarch or Brahme. The Commentator says the limit of human life is 116 or 120 years, but the stanza specifies a century—Wilson.

4 That is, let us not become so feeble and infirm as to be, as it were, infants, and to require the paternal care of our own sons.

10. Aditi¹ is heaven; Aditi is the firmament; Aditi is mother, father, and son; Aditi is all the gods; Aditi is the 'five classes of men';² Aditi is the generation and birth.³

SUKTA VI. (XC.)

THE Rishi is the same, the deities are various, the metre Gâyatri.

MAY Varuna and the wise Mitra lead us, by straight paths, (to our desires) and Aryaman,⁴ rejoicing with the gods.

2. For they are the distributors of wealth (over the world); and, never heedless, discharge their functions every day.

3. May they, who are immortal, bestow upon us mortals, happiness; annihilating our foes.

4. May the adorable Indra, the Maruts; Pushan, and Bhaga, so direct our paths, (that they may lead) to the attainment of good gifts.

1 Aditi, literally meaning the independent or the indivisible, may here signify either the earth, or the mother of the gods, according to the Scholiast. According to Yâska, the hymn declares the might of Aditi,—aditē vibhūtim āchaklāte (Nir. 4, 23); or, as Sâyana, "Aditi is hymned as the same with the universe.

2 As before noticed, the five orders of men are said to be the four castes and the outcastes. It is also interpreted five classes of beings, or Gods, men, Gandharvas (including Apsarâs), Serpents, and Pitrîs; Gods Asuras, and Râkshasas.

3 Jâtam is the actual birth of beings, Janitânam, the faculty of being born, generation. Rosen renders the terms, natum and nasciturum.

4 Aryaman is said to be the sun in his function of separating day from night.

5. Pushan, Vishnu,¹ Maruts, make our rites restorative of our cattle, make us prosperous.

6. The winds² bring sweet (rewards) to the sacrifice; the rivers bring sweet (waters); may the herbs yield sweetness to us.

7. May night and morn be sweet; may the region of the earth be full of sweetness; may the protecting heaven be sweet to us.

8. May Vanaspati be possessed of sweetness towards us; may the sun be imbued with sweetness; may the cattle be sweet to us.

9. May Mitra be propitious to us; may Varuna, may Aryaman, be propitious to us; may Indra and Brihaspati be propitious to us; may the wide-stepping Vishna be propitious to us.

SUKTA VII. (XCI.)

THE Rishi is still Gotama, the deity is Soma; from the fifth to the sixteenth stanza the metre is Gāyatrī; the seventeenth, Usukh, the rest, Trishtubh.

THOU, Soma, art thoroughly apprehended by our understanding; thou leadest us along a straight path: by thy guidance, Indra, our righteous fathers obtained wealth amongst the gods.

2. Thou, Soma, art the doer of good by holy acts; thou art powerful by thine energies, and knowest all things; thou art the showerer (of benefits) by the bounties, and (art great) by thy greatness; thou, the 1 Vishnu is said to mean, the pervader, or pervading deity.

2 The term of the text is Evayāvan, which is explained by the Scholiast, the troop of Maruts, from their going with horses (evash), guide of men, hast been well nourished by sacrificial offerings

3 Thy acts are (like those) of the royal Varuna ¹ thy glory, Soma, is great and profound, thou art the purifier (of all), like the beloved Mitra; thou art the augmenter of all, like Arvaman.

4 Endowed with all the glories (that are displayed) by thee in heaven, on earth, in the mountains, in the plants, in the waters, do thou, illustrious² Soma, well-disposed towards us, and devoid of anger, accept our oblations

5 Thou, Soma, art the protector, 'the sovereign of the pious,'³ or even the slayer of Vritra, thou art holy sacrifice⁴

6 Thou, Soma, fond of praise, the lord of plants, art life to us if thou wilt, we shall not die

1 Rajro te Varunasya The Scholiast would seem to argue that Varuna here means that which is enclosed in a cloth, or the Soma plant that has been purchased for a sacrifice,—Yâdârtthan akritak krite vastrendratal Soma Varunah, chiefly because Soma is the king of the Brahmans, as by the text of the Yeda, Soma asmâkam Brahmanândam Râjâ—Soma is the king of us Brahmans, and Somarâjno Brahmanah—the Brahmans have Soma for king. But in that sense the moon, not the plant, is usually understood by Soma, and there does not appear any reason for understanding the term Varuna in any other than its usual acceptation. The title of Râjâ we have already seen is not unfrequently assigned to him, although, as the following stanzas show, it was equally given to Soma

2 Or royal (Râjan) Soma

3 Satpatis twam Râjâ uta Sat may be explained, also, according to the Scholiast, by Brahman, making the sentence, "the protector, or lord (Patî), or the king (Râja), of the Brahmans"

4 Soma may be considered as identifiable with sacrifice, from the essential part it performs in it (adrupe bhavati sâdhyatvad yajñânām).

7 Thou bestowest Soma upon him who worships thee whether old or young, wealth, that he may enjoy, and live

8 Defend us, royal Soma, from every one seeking to harm us the friend of one like thee can never perish

9 Soma, be our protector with those assistances which are sources of happiness to the donor (of oblations)

10 Accepting this our sacrifice, and this our praise, approach, Soma, and be to us as the augments of our rite

11 Acquainted with hymns, we elevate thee with praises do thou, who art benignant, approach

12 Be unto us, Soma, the bestower of wealth, the remover of disease, the cognizant of riches, the augment of nutriment, an excellent friend.

13 Soma, dwell happy in our hearts, like cattle in fresh pastures, like men in their own abodes.

14 The experienced sage commends the mortal who through affection, divine Soma, praises thee.

15 Protect us, Soma, from calumny, preserve us from sin; pleased with our service, be our friend

16 Increase, Soma may vigour come to thee from every side be diligent in the supply of food (to us)

17 Exulting Soma, increase with all twining plants, be to us a friend well supplied with food, we may prosper

18 May the milky juices flow around thee, may sacrificial offerings and vigour be concentrated in the destroyer of foes and, being fully nourished do thou provide, Soma, excellent viands in heaven for our immortality.

19. Whichever of thy glories (men) worship with oblations, may our sacrifice be invested with them all : come to our mansions, Soma, who art the bestower of wealth, the transporter (over difficulties) ; attended by valiant heroes, the non-destroyer of progeny.

20. To him who presents offerings, Soma gives a a milch-cow, sweet horse, and a son who is able in affairs, skilful in domestic concerns, assiduous in worship, eminent in society, and who is an honour to his father.

21. We rejoice, Soma, contemplating thee, invincible in battle, triumphant amongst hosts, the granter of heaven, the giver of rain, the preserver of strength, born amidst sacrifices, occupying a brilliant dwelling, renowned and victorious.

22. Thou, Soma, hast generated all these herbs, the water, and the kine ; thou hast spread out the spacious firmament ; thou hast scattered darkness with light.

23. Divine and potent Soma, bestow upon us, with thy brilliant mind, a portion of wealth : may no (adversary) annoy thee ; thou art supreme over the valour of (any) two (mutual) opponents defend us (from our enemies) in battle.¹

SUKTA VIII. (XCII.)

THE Rishi is Gotama, the deity is Ushas (the dawn), except in the last triad, which is addressed to the Aswins. The metre of the first four verses is Jagati, of the last six, Ushnih, of the rest Trishtubh.

THESE divinities of the morning¹ have spread light (over the world); they make manifest the light in the eastern portion of the firmament, brightening all things, like warriors burnishing their weapons; the radiant and progressing mothers² (of the earth), they travel daily (on their course).

2. Their purple rays have readily shot upwards; they have yoked the easily-yoked and ruddy kine (to their car); the deities of the dawn have restored, as of yore, the consciousness (of sentient creatures), and, bright-rayed, have attended upon the glorious sun.

3. The female leaders (of the morning) illuminate³ with their inherent radiance the remotest parts (of the heaven), with a simultaneous effort, like warriors⁴ (with their shining arms in the van of battle), bringing every kind of food to the performer of good works; to the bountiful, and to the worshipper who presents libations.

1 We have the term Ushasâ in the plural, intending, according to the commentator, the divinities that preside over the morning; but, according to Yâska, the plural is used honorifically only, for the singular personification.—Nirukta, 12 7.

2 Or mâtri may mean simply maker, author; authors of light,—bhaso nirmâtryâh.—Nirukta, 12, 7.

3 Archanti; literally, worship; that is, the heavens; but the term is used for spreading over, or extending.

4 The text has only "like warriors;" the Scholiast explains the comparison,—“as they spread with bright arms along the front of the array, so the rays of the dawn spread along the sky before the coming of the sun.

4 Ushas cuts off the accumulated (glooms), as a barber (cuts off the hair);¹ she bares her bosom as a cow yields her udder (to the milkèr), and, as cattle hasten to their pastures, she speeds to the east, and, shedding light upon all world, dissipates the darkness

5 Her brilliant light is first seen towards (the east), 'it spreads and disperses the thick darkness. she anoints her beauty as the priests anoint the sacrificial food in sacrifice: the daughter of the sky² awaits the glorious sun.

6. We have crossed over the boundary of darkness Ushas restores the consciousness (of living beings), bright-shining, she smiles, like a flatterer, to obtain favour, and, lovely in all her radiance, she has swallowed for our delight, the darkness.

7. The brilliant daughter of the sky, the exciter of pleasant voices,³ is praised by the descendants of Gotama Ushas, grant us food associated with progeny and dependants, and distinguished by horses and cattle.

8 May I obtain, Ushas, that ample wealth which confers fame, posterity, troops of slaves, and is characterized by horses, which thou, who aboundest in riches, and art the giver of food, displayest, (when gratified) by hymns and holy sacrifices.

1 Nritur wa, 'like a barber,' is the phrase of the text, or Nrituh may mean a dancing girl, when the translation will be, 'Ushas displays graces, like a dancing-girl' (pesanti vapate), the former meaning either darkness or elegance, the latter, either to cut off, or to possess. There is no point of similitude expressed in Rosen's version, Tenebras dissipat Aurora, veluti saltatrix.

2 Duhita divah, the daughter of heaven, or the sky

3 With the appearance of dawn, the cries of various animals and birds, and the voices of men, are again heard,

9. The 'divine (Ushas), having lighted up the whole world, spreads, expanding with her radiance, towards the west, arousing all living creatures to their labours; she hears the speech of all endowed with thought.

10. The divine and ancient Ushas, born again and again, and bright with unchanging hues, wastes away the life of a mortal, like the wife of a hunter cutting up and dividing the birds.¹

11. She has been seen illuminating the boundaries of the sky, and driving into disappearance the spontaneously-retiring (night);² wearing away the ages of the human race, she shines with light like the bride of the sun.³

12. The affluent and adorable Ushas has sent her rays abroad, as (a cowherd drives) the cattle (to pasture), and spreads expansive, like flowing water; she is beheld associated with the rays of the sun, unimpeding sacred ceremonies.⁴

13. Ushas, possessor of food, bring us that various wealth by which we may sustain sons and grandsons.

1 Like 2. Swaghnī; literally, the wife of a dog-killer, but explained Vyādhasatri, as in the text.

2 Swasāram is the only term in the text, explained, Swayam sarantim,—going of her own accord; the Scholiast adds night, otherwise, we might have understood it in its usual sense of 'sister;' making night the sister of morning.

3 Yārasya yoshā. Yāra, meaning the causer of the decay, or disappearance, of night is explained by, Surya, the sun.

4 Aminati dainyāni vratāni, not injuring, that is, favouring divine rites or offerings to the gods, which are to be performed by daylight, or after dawn; as by the text, na rātram na Sāyam asti devayū ajushtam,—sacrifice is not acceptable to the gods at night, or in the evening.

14. Luminous Ushas, possessor of cows and horses; true of speech, dawn here to-day upon this (ceremony), that is to bring us wealth.

15. Possessor of food, Ushas, yoke, indeed, to-day, your purple steeds, and bring to us all good things.

16. Aswins, destroyers of foes, turn with favourable intentions your chariot towards our abode, which contains cattle and gold.

17. Aswins, who have sent adorable light from heaven¹ to man, bring us strength.

18. May the steeds awakened at dawn bring hither, to drink the Soma-Juice, the divine Aswins, who are the givers of happiness, the destroyers of foes, seated in a golden chariot.

SUKTA IX. (XCIII.)

The Rishi is Gotama, the deities are Agni and Soma : the metre of the three first stanzas is Anushtubh ; of three, beginning with the ninth, Gāyatrī ; of the eighth, Jagati or Trishtubh, and of the rest, Trishtubh.

AGNI and Soma showerers (of desires), favourably hear this my invocation, graciously accept my hymns, and bestow felicity on the donor (of the oblation).

2. Agni and Soma, grant to him who addresses this prayer to you both, store of cattle with sound strength and good horses.

¹² As before observed, the Aswins are sometimes identified with the sun and moon.

3. Agni and Soma, may he who offers you the oblation of clarified butter, enjoy sound strength, with progeny, through all his life.

4. Agni and Soma, that prowess of yours, by which you have carried off the cows that were the food of Pani, is (well) known to us ; you have slain the offspring of Brisaya,¹ and you have acquired the one luminary (the sun²), for the benefit of the many.

5. You two, Agni and Soma, acting together, have sustained these constellations in the sky ; you have liberated the rivers that had been defiled from the notorious imputation.³

6. Agni and Soma, the wind brought one of you from heaven, a hawk carried off the other by force from the summit of the mountain ; growing vast by praise,

1 Brisayasya sesha ; the latter is a synonyme of apatya, offspring.—Nirukta, 3, 2. Brisaya is said to be a synonyme of Twashtri, here styled an Asura. The offspring of Twashtri is Vritra ; and the agency of Agni and Soma in his death is explained by identifying them with the two vital airs, Prāna and Apāna, the separation of which from Vritra was the approximate cause of his death.

2 By the destruction of Vritra, the enveloping cloud, or gathered darkness, the sun was enabled to appear in the sky.

3 The imputation, or charge, of Brahmanicide, was incurred by Indra, it is said, in killing Vritra, who was a Brahman, but which guilt he transferred to river, women, and trees. This looks rather like a Pauranik legend. One of a more Vaidik character is also given ; the rivers were defiled by the dead body of Vritra, which had fallen into them : their waters were consequently unfit to bear any part in sacred rites until they were purified by Agni and Soma, that is, by oblations to fire, and libations of Soma-Juice.

4 The legend relates that Vāyu brought Agni from heaven at the desire of Bhrigu, when performing a sacrifice ; Soma was brought from Swarga, on the top of Mount Meru, by Gāyatrī, in the shape of a hawk ; these are clearly allegorical allusions to the early use of fire and the Soma plant in religious ceremonies.

you have made the world wide for (the performance of) sacrifice.

7. Agni and Soma, partake of the proffered oblation; be gracious to us; showerers (of desires), be pleased; prosperous and diligent protectors, be propitious, and grant to the sacrificer health and exemption from ill.

8. Agni and Soma, protect his sacrifice and defend him from ill, who, with a mind devoted to the gods, worships you with clarified butter and oblations: grant to the man engaged (in devotion) extreme felicity.

9. Agni and Soma, endowed with the like wealth, and invoked by a common invocation, share our praises, for you have (ever) been the chief of the gods.¹

10. Agni and Soma, give ample (recompense) to him who presents to you both this clarified butter.

11. Agni and Soma, be pleased with these our oblations, and come to us together.

12. Agni and Soma, cherish our horses, and may our cows, affording (milk that yields butter for) oblations be well nourished; give to us, who are affluent, strength (to perform) religious rites, and make our sacrifice productive of wealth.

1 The term is simply Devatrâ, explained deveshu prasastah. Another text is quoted, which states that Agni and Soma are they who are the two kings of the gods (Râjânau va etau devânâm yad-agnishomau.)

ANUVA'KA XV.

SUKTA I. (XCIV.)

The Rishi is Kutsa, the son of Angiras; the deity is Agni, associated in three parts of the eighth stanza with the gods in general, and in the half of the last with different divinities. The metre of the two last stanzas is Trishtubh, of the rest, Jagati.

To him who is worthy of praise, and all-knowing, we construct, with our minds, this hymn, as (a workman makes) a car: happy is our understanding when engaged in his adoration: let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.¹

2. He, for whom thou sacrificest, accomplishes (his objects), abides free from aggression, and enjoys (wealth, the source of) strength; he prospers, and poverty never approaches him: let us not suffer injury, through thy friendship.

3. May we be able to kindle thee: perfect the rite, for through thee the gods partake of the offered oblations: bring hither the A'dityas² for we love them: let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.

4. We bring fuel, we offer oblations, reminding thee of the successive seasons (of worship); do thou thoroughly complete the rite, in order to prolong our lives: let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.

5. His genial (flames), the preservers of mankind, spread around, and both bipeds and quadrupeds are enlivened by his rays ; shining with various lustre, and illuminating (the world by night), thou art superior to the dawn : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

¹ This last clause is the burden of all the stanzas except the concluding two: Sakhye ná rishámā vayam tava,—May we not be injured in or by thy friendship; that is, according to the Scholiast, Do thou preserve us.

² The sons of Aditi, that is, all the gods.

6. Thou art the sacrificing or the invoking priest, thou art the 'principal (presenter of the offering), the director (of the ceremonies), their performer, or by birth the family priest ;¹ thus conversant with all the priestly functions, thou performest perfect the rite : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

7. Thou art of graceful form, and alike on every side, and, although remote, shinest as if nigh : thou seest, divine Agni, beyond the darkness of night : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

8. Gods,² let the chariot of 'the offerer of the libation be foremost ;³ let our denunciations overwhelm the wicked : understand and fulfil my words : let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.

9. Overcome with your fatal (weapons) the wicked and the impious, all who are enemies whether distant

¹ Agni is here identified with the chief of the sixteen priests engaged at solemn sacrifices. He is the Adhwaryu, usually called the reciter of the Yajush, here defined by the Scholiast as the presenter of the offerings ; he is the Hotri, or 'invoking priest ; he is the Prasûstri, or the Maitrâvârûna, whose duty it is to direct the other priests what to do and when to perform their functions ; he is the Potri, or priest so termed, and the family or hereditary Purohita : or Purohita may be the same as the Brahmâ of a ceremony, being to men what Brihaspati is to the gods.

² Deva. All the gods are here considered to be but portions or members of Agni or near, and then provide an easy (path) for the sacrificer who praises thee : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

10. When thou hast yoked the bright red horses, swift as the wind, to thy car, thy roar is like that of a bull, and thou enwrappest the forest trees with a banner of smoke : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

11. At thy roaring, even the birds are terrified : when thy flames, consuming the grass, have spread in all directions, (the wood) is easy of access to thee and to thy chariots : let not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

12. May this, (thy adorer), enjoy the support of Mitra and of Varuna : wonderful is the fury of the Maruts : (dwellers in the region) below (the heavens,¹ encourage us : let us not suffer injury, Agni, through thy friendship.

13. Thou, brilliant (Agni), art the especial friend of the gods ; thou, who art graceful in the sacrifice, art the confirmer of all riches : may we be present in thy most spacious chamber of sacrifice ; let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

14. Pleasant is it to thee when thou art lighted in thine own abode, and, propitiated by libations, art praised (by the priests) : then, much delighted, thou givest rewards and riches to the worshipper : let us not, Agni, suffer injury through thy friendship.

15. (Fortunate is the worshipper) to whom, (assiduous) in all pious works, thou, possessor of riches, indivisible Agni, grantest exemption from sin, whom thou associatest 'with auspicious strength, may he be (enriched) by thee with wealth that comprehends progeny

16. Do thou, divine Agni, who knowest what is good fortune, on this occasion prolong our existence, and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us ¹

1 This verse terminates the following hymns, with one exception, as far as the hundred and first Sukta Mitra, Varuna, and Aditi have been before noticed. By Sindhu, is to be understood the divinity presiding over, or identified with, flowing water; and it may mean either the sea, or flowing streams collectively or the river Indus. Prithivi and Dyu are the personified earth and heaven. These are requested to honour, 'meaning to preserve or perpetuate, whatever blessing has been asked for (tan māmahantam), from maha, to venerate or worship, tad, that, refers here to A'yus, or life.

SEVENTH ADHYA YI.

NUVA KA XV —(Contd.)

SUKIA I. (XCV)

The deity is Agni, having the attributes of the dawn or the sun, entitled to a share of the morning oblation, or the pure or simple. The Rishi is Kutsa, the metre, Trishtubh.

1 Two periods, of different complexions,¹ revolve for their own purposes, and each in succession severally nourishes a son; in one, Hari is the receiver of oblations, in the other, the brilliant Agni is beheld.

2. The vigilant and youthful Ten beget, through the wind, this embryo Agni,² inherent (in all

1 Viruṣe, of various nature, or, here, complexions, black and white, or night and day. Day is said to be the mother of fire, which is then, as it were, in an embryo state, and is not fully manifested or born until it is dark so the sun is in the womb of night, and is born, or shines, in the morning, Hari, or the sun, being manifested in the morning is then to be worshipped, Agni, shining at night, is to be worshipped in the evening—tas mā agnaye śyāni huyate Sūryaya prātar, which is rather at variance with the preliminary statement, that the Agni of the hymn is the one entitled to a share of the morning oblation (Ushasi havirbhāgyo agnirasti sa devatā), therefore, it is said, the Agni is that endowed with the properties of dawn, or it may be the simple, discrete Agni (aushasagunavīśiṣṭo Agni, suddho Agniḥ vā). We must therefore consider Agni to be treated as identical with Hari, or the sun, as well as referred to his own personification.

2 This stanza is somewhat differently interpreted. The Ten are said by the Scholiast to be, in one conception, the ten regions of space, which generate the electrical fire, or lightning as an embryo in the clouds, through the agency of the winds, as in the text, "wind is the cause of fire, fire of wind" (Agnér hi vāyuh kāranam, vāyo agnir). The term in the text for wind, or its agency, is tvāṣṭuh, which is here said to mean 'brilliant,'—from "the brilliant central proximity of beings),¹ sharp-visaged, universally renowned, shining among men ; him they conduct (to every dwelling).

3. They contemplate three places of his birth ; one in the ocean, one in the heaven, one in the firmament ; and, dividing the seasons of the year for the benefit of earthly creatures, he formed, in regular succession, the eastern quarter.²

4. Which of you discerns the hidden³ Agni ? a son, he begets his mothers by oblations ;⁴ the germ of many (waters), he issues from the ocean ;⁵ mighty and wise, the recipient of oblations.

5. Appearing amongst them (the waters), the bright-shining (Agni) increases, rising above the flanks wind" diptânmadhyamâd vâyah sakasât). Rosen connects twushtuh with garbham, and renders them fulminatoris rentem. He also follows the explanation of the Ten, which applies it to the ten fingers, who generate Agni through the act of attrition as an embryo in the sticks. Sâyana gives both interpretations.

1 Vibhritam, deposited in all creatures ; that is, in the capacity of the digestive faculty, which is referred to the action of natural heat.

2 As submarine fire, Agni is born in the ocean ; as the sun, in heaven ; and as lightning, in the firmament. In his character of the sun, he may be said to be the distributor of time and space ; regulating the seasons, and indicating the points of the horizon.

3 Latent heat ; the natural heat extant in the waters, in the woods, and in all fixed and moveable things, although not perceptible to sense.

4 Agni, in the the form of lightning, may be considered as the son of the waters collected in the clouds, and those waters he is said to generate by the oblations which he conveys ; as in the Smriti, it is said, " Oblations offered in fire ascend to the sun ; rain is produced from the sun, corn from rain, and thence spring mankind."

5 Agni is thought to rise in the morning in the shape of the sun from out of the ocean,—upasthât (samudrât) nirgachchhati.

of the waving waters,¹ spreading his own renown : both (heaven and earth) are alarmed as the radiant Agni is born, and, approaching the lion,² they pay him honour.

6. Both the auspicious ones³ (day and night) wait upon him like two female attendants, as loving kine (follow their calves) by the paths (that they have gone); he has been the lord of might among the mighty, whom (the priests) on the right (of the altar) anoint.

7. Like the sun, he stretches forth his arms, and the formidable Agni, decorating both heaven and earth (with brightness), labours (in his duties); he draws up from everything the essential (moisture), and clothes (the earth) with new vestments (derived) from his maternal (rains).

8. Associated in the firmament with the moving waters, he assumes an excellent and lustrous form, and the wise sustainer (of all things) sweeps over the source⁴ (of the rains with his radiance), whence a concentration of light is spread abroad by the sportive deity.

9. The vast and victorious radiance of thee, the mighty one, pervades the firmament: Agni, who hast

² Sinha, the Scholiast considers as applicable to Agni, to imply his ability to suffer or be overcome—sahana silam, abhibhavanasilam: there does not seem to be any objection to the metaphorical use of the literal meaning of the word,—‘a lion.’

³ Both, may also intimate heaven and earth, or the two pieces of wood rubbed together to produce flame.

⁴ Budhna is the term in this and in the next verse for the antariksha, or firmament, as the root, or source of the rains.

been kindled by us, preserve us with all thy undiminished and protecting glories.

10. He causes the waters to flow in a torrent through the sky, and with those pure waves he inundates the earth; he gathers all (articles of) food in the stomach, and for that purpose sojourns in the new-sprung parents¹ (of the grain.)

11. Agni, who art the purifier, growing with the fuel we have supplied, blaze for the sake of (securing) food to us, who are possessed of wealth; and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SUKTA III. (XCVI.)

THE Rishi and metre are as before; the deity is Agni, but either in his general character, or as Dravinodā.

ENGENDERED by force, Agni verily appropriates, as soon as born, the offerings of the sages: the waters and voice make him their friend,² and the gods retain him as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.³

2. Propitiated by the primitive laudatory hymn of A'yu, he created the progeny of the Manus,⁴ and

1 The text has merely nava prasūshu—in the new parents, or mothers; that is, in the Oshadhis, the annuals, or the cerealia, which ripen after the rains, and bear food, being impregnated by the terrestrial Agni.

2 The Agni alluded to is the ethereal, or electric fire, combined at its production with rain and with sound.

3 As the conveyer of oblations, the term is Dravinodā, the giver of wealth; but the wealth is that of sacrifice, or abundance of clarified butter.

4 Ayu is said by the Scholiast to be another name of Manu: what is intended by the progeny of the Manus is not very obvious, but it pervades, with his all-investing splendour, the heavens and the firmament : the gods retain Agni as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

3. Approaching him, let all men adore Agni, the chief¹ (of the gods), the accomplisher of sacrifices, who is gratified by oblations and propitiated by praises,—the offspring of food, the sustainer of (all men), the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

4. May Agni, the dweller in the firmament, the nourisher with abundant benefits, the bestower of Suvarga, the protector of mankind, the progenitor of heaven and earth, instruct my sons in the right way : the gods retain Agni as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

5. The night and the day, mutually effacing each other's complexion, give nourishment, combined together, to one infant,² who, radiant, shines between earth and heaven : the gods retain Agni as the giver of sacrificial wealth.

6. The source of opulence, the bestower of riches, the director of the sacrifice, the accomplisher of the desires (of the man) who has recourse to him ; him, the gods, preserving their immortality, retain as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth.

7 The gods retain Agni as the giver of (sacrificial) wealth, who now is, and heretofore has been, the abode of riches, the receptacle of all that has been, and all appears to intend simply mankind ; the Scholiast says, being hymned, by Manu, he created all the offspring of Manu (Manunâ stutâh san manavîh prajāh ajanayat).

1 The term is prathama—the first, which the commentator interprets by mukhya, chief.

2 Agni, whom they nourish with the oblations offered during their continuance, that will be, born, and the preserver of all (that) exists, (as well as of all) that are coming into existence.

8. May Dravinodá grant us (a portion) of moveable wealth; may Dravinodá grant us (a portion) of that which is stationary; may Dravinodá give us food attended by progeny; may Dravinodá bestow upon us long life.

9. Thus, Agni, who art the purifier, growing with the fuel (we have supplied), blaze for the sake of securing food to us, who are possessed of wealth, and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, heaven, preserve it to us.

SUKTA IV. (XCVII.)

THE Rishi is the same, the deity Agni, as pure fire, or that of which purity is the attribute; the metre is Gáyatri.

MAY our sin, Agni, be repented of;¹ manifest riches to us; may our sin be repented of.

2. We worship thee for pleasant fields, for good roads, and for riches: may our sin be repented of.

3. (In like manner as among these thy worshippers Kutsa) is the pre-eminent panegyrist, so are our encomiasts (of thee) the most distinguished: may our sin be repented of.

¹ Agham apa nah soshudat; from s'uch, to sorrow, in the intensive form and the Vaidik imperative, or let, with apa prefixed, although locally detached. The commentator proposes two interpretations: "Let our sin pass away from us, and light upon our adversaries;" or, "Let our sin, affected by grief, perish." Rosen renders it, nostrum eripietur scelus.

4. Inasmuch as thy worshippers (are blessed with descendants,) so may we, (by repeating thy praise), obtain posterity :¹ may our sin be repented of.

5. Since the victorious flames of Agni penetrate universally, may our sin be repented of.

6. Thou, whose countenance is turned to all sides, art our defender : may our sin be repented of.

7. Do thou, whose countenance is turned to all sides, send off our adversaries, as if in a ship, (to the opposite shore) : may our sin be repented of.

8. Do thou convey us in a ship across the sea, for our welfare : may our sin be repented of.

SUKTA V. (XCVIII.)

Īishi as before ; the deity is either Vais'wânara, or the pure (Suddha) Agni ; the metre is Trishtubh.

MAY we continue in the favour of Vais'wânara,² for verily he is the august sovereign of all beings : as soon as generated from this (wood), he surveys the universe ; he accompanies the rising sun.³

² Vais'wânara implies either he who rules over all (viswa) men (nara) or who conducts them (nara) to another region ; either to heaven through oblations, or possibly to future life through the funeral fire.

2. Agni, who is present¹ in the sky, and present upon earth, and who, present, has pervaded all herbs : may the Agni Vais'wânara, who is present in vigour, guard us night and day against our enemies.

3. Vais'wânara, may this (thy adoration be attended) by real (fruit) ; may precious treasures wait us,² and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve them to us.

SUKTA VI. (XCIX.)

The Rishi is Kasyapa, the son of Marichi, and the hymn, consisting of a single stanza, in the Trishtubh metre, is addressed to Agni as Jâtavedas 3

WE offer oblations of Soma to Jâtavedas ; may he consume the wealth of those who feel enmity against us ; may he transport us over all difficulties : may Agni convey us, as in a boat over a river, across all wickedness.

1 Vrishta, explained by sansprishtha, in contact with, or nihita, placed, or present in the sky—Agni, is in contact with, or present, in the sun ; on earth, in sacred and domestic fire, and in herbs, or annuals, as the cause of their coming to maturity.

2 Rosen has, fac nos opulentos ; but the maghavânah of the text cannot be the accusative plural, which would be either Magha-vatah, or Maghonah : it is the adjective of the word immediately preceding, dyâh, riches, here said to mean wealth in family, or sons, grandsons, etc.

3 There is nothing remarkable in this Sukta, except its brevity, consisting of a single stanza.

SUKTA VII. (C).

The deity is Indra, the Rishis are the Vārshágiras, or five sons of Vrishágir,¹ a Raja, who were Rajarshis, or regal sages, severally named in the seventeenth stanza. The metre is Trishtubh.

MAY he who is the showerer of desires, who is co-dweller with (all) energies, the supreme ruler over the vast heaven and earth, the sender of water, and to be invoked in battles; may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

2. May he whose course, like that of the sun, is not to be overtaken, who in every battle is the slayer of his foes, the witherer (of opponents), who, with his swift-moving friends (the winds) is the most bountiful (of givers); may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

3. May he, whose rays, powerful and unattainable, issue forth like those of the sun, milking (the clouds); he who is victorious over his adversaries, triumphant by his manly energies; may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

4. He is the swiftest among the swift,² most bountiful amongst the bountiful, a friend with friends, venerable among those who claim veneration, and pre-eminent among those deserving of praise: may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

5. Mighty with the Rudras, as if with his sons, victorious in battle over his enemies, and sending down with his co-dwellers (the waters which are productive of) food: Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

² Angirobhirangirastama,—the most Angiras of Angirasas, which might be thought to refer to the Rishis so named; but the commentator derives it from anga, to go, and explains angirasaḥ by gantārah, goers; those who go swiftly.

6. May he, the represser of (hostile) wrath, the author of war, the protector of the good, the invoked of many, share with our people on this day the (light of the) sun :¹ may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

7. Him, his allies, the Maruts, animate in battle ; him, men regard as the preserver of their property ; he alone presides over every act of worship : may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

8. To him, a leader (to victory), his worshippers apply in contests of strength for protection and for wealth, as he grants them the light (of conquest) in the bewildering darkness (of battle) :² may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

9. With his left hand he restrains the malignant, with his right he receives the (sacrificial) offerings ; he is the giver of riches, (when propitiated) by one who celebrates his praise : may Indra, associated with Maruts, be our protection.

10. He, along with his attendants, is a benefactor ; he is quickly recognized by all men to-day, through his chariots ; by his manly energies he is victor over unruly (adversaries) : may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

11. Invoked by many, he goes to battle with his

1 The Vârshagiras are supposed to address this prayer to Indra, that they might have day light, in which to attack their enemies, and

3 They recover the cattle that had been carried away by them ; or, that the light may be withheld from their opponents.

2 The expression jyotish, light and chit-tamasi, in the darkness of thought, may also be applied more literally, and express the hope that Indra will give the light of knowledge to darkness of understanding.

kinsmen, or with (followers) not of his kindred; he secures the (triumph) of those who trust in him, and of their sons and grandsons: may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

12. He is the wielder of the thunderbolt, the slayer of robbers, fearful and fierce, knowing many things, much eulogized, and mighty, and, like the Soma juice, inspiring the five classes of beings with vigour: may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

13. His thunderbolt draws cries (from his enemies), he is the sender of good waters, brilliant as (the luminary) of heaven, the thunderer, the promoter of beneficent acts, upon him do donations and riches attend: may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection:

14. May he, of whom the excellent measure (of all things), through strength,¹ eternally and everywhere cherishes heaven and earth, propitiated by our acts, convey us beyond (evil): may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

15. Nor gods, nor men, nor waters, have reached the limit of the strength of that beneficent (divinity),² for he surpasses both earth and heaven by his foe-consuming (might): may Indra, associated with the Maruts, be our protection.

16. The red and black coursers, long-limbed, well-caparisoned, and celestial, and harnessed, well-pleased, to the yoke of the chariot in which the showerer of benefits is conveyed, for the enrichment of Rijrás'wa, and is recognize ' amongst human hosts.¹

¹ Savasâ-mânam, the distributor of all things, through his power: or it may mean that he is the prototype of everything endued with vigour.

² The text has, na yasya devâ devatâ; the latter is said to be put for devasya, a Vaidik license, and is explained, "endowed with the properties of giving, etc," (dânâdi guna-yuktasya).

17. Indra, showerer (of benefits), the Várshágiras, Rijrás'wa and his companions, Ambarisha, Sahadeva, Bhayamána, and Surádhas, address to thee this propitiatory praise.

18. Indra, who is invoked by many, attended by the moving (Maruts), having attacked the Dasyus and the Simyus,² slew them with his thunderbolt; the thunderer then divided the fields with his white-complexioned friends,³ and rescued the sun and set free the water.

19. May Indra be daily our vindicator, and may we, with undiverted course, enjoy (abundant) food; and may Mitra, Varuna, Aḁiti,—ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

1 Nálushishu vikshu: nahusha is explained by 'man'; whence the derivative will mean, manly, or human; vis' also imports, man; whence Rosen renders the phrase, inter humanas gentes. The Scholiast interprets vikshu by senálakshanásu prajásu,—people designated as an army.

2 The commentary explains these, 'enemies' and Rákshasas, but they more probably designate races not yet subjected by the Vaidik Hindus, or Arians.

3 Sakhibhih s'witnyebhih. These, according to the Scholiast, are the winds, or Maruts; but why they should have a share of the enemy's country (s'atrundám bhumin), seems doubtful. Allusion is more probably intended to earthly friends or worshippers of Indra, who were white (s'witnya) in comparison with the darker tribes of the conquered country.

SUKTA VIII. (CI.)

THE Rishi is Kutsa, the son of Angiras; the deity, Indra; the metre of the first seven stanzas is Jagati, of the last four, Trishtubh.

1. Offer adoration with oblations to him who is delighted (with praise), who, with Rijis'wan, destroyed the pregnant wives of Krishna:¹ desirous of protection, we invoke, to become our friend, him, who is the showerer (of benefits), who holds the thunderbolt in his right hand, attended by the Maruts.

2. We invoke to be our friend, Indra, who is attended by the Maruts; he who, with increasing wrath, slew the mutilated Vritra, and Sambara, and the unrighteous Pipru,² and who extirpated the unabsorbable S'ushna.³

3. We invoke to become our friend, Indra who is attended by the Maruts; whose great power (pervades) heaven and earth, in whose service Varuna and Surya are steadfast, and whose command the rivers obey.

4. Who is the lord over all horses and cattle, who is independent, who, propitiated by praise, is constant in every act, and who is the slayer of the obstinate abstainer from libations: we invoke to become our friend, Indra, attended by the Maruts.

5. Who is the lord of all moving and breathing creatures, who first recovered the (stolen) kine for the

1 Rijis'wan is said to be a king, the friend of Indra; Krishna to be an Asura, who was slain, together with his wives, that none of his posterity might survive. Krishna, the black, may be another name for Vritra the black cloud; or we may have here another allusion to the dark-complexioned aborigines.

2 Sambara and Pipru are both termed Asuras; the latter is also styled avratam,—not performing, or opposing Vratas or religious rites.

3 As'usham S'ushnam, the dryer up who is without being dried up, who cannot be absorbed, Brāhmaṇ,¹ and who slew the humbled *Dāsya*s: we invoke to become our friend, Indra, attended by the Maruts.

6. Who is to be invoked by the brave and by the timid, by the vanquished and by victors, and whom all beings place before them (in their rites): we invoke to become our friend, Indra, attended by the Maruts.

7. The radiant Indra proceeds (along the firmament) with the manifestation of the Rudras:² through the Rudras, speech spreads with more expansive celerity, and praise glorifies the renowned Indra: him, attended by the Maruts, we invoke to become our friend.

8. Attended by the winds, giver of true wealth, whether thou mayest be pleased (to dwell) in a stately mansion or in a lowly dwelling, come to our sacrifice: desirous of thy presence, we offer thee oblations.

9. Desirous of thee, Indra, who art possessed of excellent strength, we pour forth to thee libations: desirous of thee, who art obtained by prayer, we offer thee oblations; therefore, do thou, who art possessed of horses, sit down with pleasure upon the sacred grass, attended by the Maruts, at this sacrifice.

² Indra is here said to be radiant through identity with the sun, and the Rudras to be the same as the Maruts in their character of vital airs, or Prāṇ; as it is said in another text, "When shining, he rises, having taken the vital airs of all creatures" (sarveshām bhūtānām prāṇān ādāyodeti); hence, also, the subservience of the Rudras to the expansion of voice, or speech. Another application of the etymological sense of Rudra is here given by Sāyana, deriving it, as elsewhere, from the causal of rud, to weep. When the vital airs depart from the body, they cause the kindred of the deceased to weep; hence they are called Rudras.

10. Rejoice, Indra, with the steeds who are of thy nature; open thy jaws, set wide thy throat (to drink the Soma juice); let thy horses bring thee, who hast a handsome chin, (hither), and, benignant towards us, be pleased by our oblations.

11. Protected by that destroyer of (foes), who is united in praise with the Maruts, we may receive sustenance from Indra; and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SUKTA IX. (CII.)

THE Rishi and deity as in the last; the metre of the first eight stanzas is Jagati, of the last, Trishtubh.

I ADDRESS to thee, who art mighty, this excellent hymn, because thy understanding has been gratified by my praise: the gods have successively delighted that victorious Indra with the power (of praise) for the sake of prosperity and wealth.

2. The seven rivers display his glory; heaven, and earth, and sky display his visible form: the sun and moon, Indra, perform their revolutions, that we may see, and have faith in what we see.

3. Maghavan, despatch thy chariot to bring us wealth; that victorious car, which, Indra, who art much praised by us in time of war, we rejoice to behold in battle: do thou, Maghavan, grant happiness to those who are devoted to thee.

4. May we, having thee for our ally, overcome our adversaries in every encounter ; defend our portion ; render riches easily attained by us ; enfeeble, Maghavan, the vigour of our enemies.

5. Many are the men who call upon thee for thy protection : mount thy car to bring wealth to us, for thy mind, Indra is composed, and resolved on victory.

6. Thy arms are the winners of cattle, thy wisdom is unbounded, thou art most excellent, the granter of a hundred aids in every rite : the author of war, Indra is uncontrolled ; the type of strength ; wherefore men, who are desirous of wealth, invoke him in various ways.

7. The food, Maghavan, (which is to be given by thee) to men, may be more than sufficient for a hundred, or for more, even, than a thousand : great praise has glorified thee, who art without limit, whereupon thou destroyest thy enemies.

8. Strong as a twice-twisted rope, thou art the type of strength ; protector of men, that art more than able to sustain the three spheres, the three luminaries,¹ and all this world of beings, Indra, who hast from birth ever been without a rival.

9. We invoke thee, Indra, the first among the gods ; thou hast been the victor in battles ; may Indra put foremost in the battle this our chariot, which is efficient, and the uprooter (of all impediments).²

10. Thou conquerest, and withholdest not the booty : in trifling or in serious conflicts, we sharpen thee, fierce Maghavan, for our defence ; do thou, therefore, inspirit us in our defiances.

¹ The three fires ; or the sun in heaven, lightning in mid-air, and fire, sacred or domestic, on earth.

² Or the epithets may be applied to putra, a son, understood,—may indra give us (a son), an offerer of praise, and the subduer of foes ; and (give us) also a chariot foremost in battle.

III. May Indra daily be our vindicator, and may we, with undiverted course, enjoy abundant food; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, preserve it to us.

SUKTA X. (CII.)

THE Rishi and the delty as before; the mètre, Trishtubh.

THE sages have formerly been possessed of this thy supreme power, Indra, as if it were present with them,¹ one light of whom shines upon the earth, the other in heaven, and both are in combination with each other,² as banner (mingles with banner) in battle.

2. He upholds, and has spread out, the earth; having struck (the clouds), he has extricated the waters; he has slain Ahi, he has pierced Rauhina, he has destroyed, by his prowess, the mutilated (Vritra).³

3. Armed with the thunderbolt, and confident in his strength, he has gone on destroying the cities of the Dasyus Thunderer, acknowledging (the praises of thy worshipper), cast, for his sake, thy shaft against the

1 The term is parâchais, which is rather equivocal. Rosen renders the phrase,—Contra ipsorum inimicos directo robore tuo; but it rather means the contrary—inverse, averted (pardchinam, pardumukham; but the other sense, proposed by the Scholiast, seems preferable,—abhimukham eva, as if present.

2 The sun and fire are equally, it is said, the lustre of Indra. In the day, fire is combined (samprichyate) with the sun; in the night, the sun is combined with fire.

3 Ahi and Vritra have on former occasions been considered as synonyms; here they are distinct, but mean, most probably, only differently-formed clouds. Rauhina, termed an Asura, is, in all likelihood, something of the same sort;—a purple, or red, cloud.

Dasyu, and augment the strength and glory of the A'rya.¹

4. Maghavan, 'possessing a name² that is to be glorified, offers to him, who celebrates it, these (revolving) ages of man:³ the thunderer, the scatterer (of his foes), sallying forth to destroy the Dasyus, has obtained a name (renowned for victorious) prowess.

5. Behold this, the vast and extensive (might of Indra); have confidence in his prowess; he has recovered the cattle, he has recovered the horses, the plants, the waters, the woods.

6. We offer the Soma libation to him who is the performer of many exploits, the best (of the gods); the showerer (of benefits), the possessor of true strength, the hero who, holding respect for wealth, takes it from him who performs no sacrifice, like a foot-pad (from a traveller), and proceeds (to give it) to the sacrificer.

7. Thou didst perform, Indra, a glorious deed, when thou didst awaken the sleeping Ahi with thy thunderbolt; then the wives (of the gods), the Maruts, and all the gods, imitated thy exultation.

8. Inasmuch, Indra, as thou hast slain S'ushna, Pipru, Kuyava, and Vritra, and destroyed the cities of S'ambara, therefore may Mitra, Varuna,—ocean, earth, and heaven, grant us that (which we desire).

¹ We have here the Dasyu and A'rya placed in opposition; the one as the worshipper, the other as the enemy of the worshipper. Dâsih, as the adjective to Purâh, cities, is explained, of, or belonging to, the Dasyus. The mention of cities indicates a people not wholly barbarous, although the term may designate villages or hamlets.

² Nâma vibhvat. The Scholiast interprets nâma, strength, "that which is the bender or prostrator of foes;" from nâma, to bow down; but it does not seem necessary to adopt any other than the usual sense.

³ Mânushemâ yugâni,—these mortal yugas; the Krita, Tretâ, etc., according to the Scholiast, which Indra successively evolves in the character of the sun.

SUKTA XI. (CIV.)

THE Rishi, deity, and metre, as before.

THE altar has been raised, Indra, for thy seat ; hasten to sit upon it, as a neighing horse (hastens) to his stable ; slackening the reins, and letting thy coursers free, who, at the season of sacrifice,¹ bear thee night and day.

2. These persons have come to Indra (to solicit) his protection ; may he quickly direct them on the way ; may the gods repress the wrath of the destroyer, and bring to our solemnity the obviator of evil.

3. (The Asura),² knowing the wealth of others, carries it off of himself ; present in the water, he carries off, of himself, the foam ; the two wives of Kuyava bathe with the water : may they be drowned in the depths of the Siphâ river.

4. The abiding-place of the vagrant³ (Kuyava) was concealed (in the midst) of the water : the hero increases, with the waters formerly (carried off, and is renowned (throughout the world) : the Anjasi Kulisi and *Vira-patni*⁴ rivers, pleasing him with their substance, sustain him with their waters.

1 We have only for the season of sacrifice, prâpitwe, for prâpte, literally, 'arrived,' synonymous in the Nirukta, 3. 20, with adverbs signifying proximity,—near, nigh, at hand. The Scholiast supplies, yâgakâle prapte,—the time of sacrifice being arrived.

2 Presently named Kuyava ; his exploits are obscurely alluded to and the river Siphâ is not elsewhere found.

3 Aya is said by the Scholiast to be an appellative of Kuyava ; from aya, to go,—one going about to do mischief to others.

4 Neither of these is found in the Paurânîk lists.

5. Since the track that leads to the dwelling of the *Dasyu*¹ has been seen by us, as a cow knows the way to her stall, therefore do thou, Maghavan, (defend us) from his repeated violence; do not thou cast us away as a libertine throws away wealth.

6. Excite in us, Indra, veneration for the sun, for the waters, and for those who are worthy of the praise of living beings, as exempt from sin: injure not our offspring while yet in the womb, for our trust is in thy mighty power.

7. Hence, Indra, I meditate on thee; on this (thy power) has our trust been placed: showerer (of benefits) direct us to great wealth; consign us not, thou who art invoked by many, to a destitute dwelling; give, Indra, food and drink to the hungry.

8. Harm us not, Indra, abandon us not; deprive us not of the enjoyments that are dear to us; injure not, affluent S'akra, our unborn offspring; harm not those who are capable (only of crawling) on their knees.

9. Come into our presence; they have called thee, fond of the Soma juice; it is prepared; drink of it for thine exhilaration: vast of limb, distend thy stomach, and, when invoked, hear us as a father (listens to the words of his sons).

SUKTA XII. (CV.)

THE hymn is addressed to the Vicwādēvas, by Trita, or by Kutsa, on his behalf; the metre is Pankti, except in the eighth verse, where it is Mahābrihati 1. amādhya.

THE graceful-moving moon¹ speeds along the middle-region in the sky: bright golden rays, (my eyes) behold not your abiding-place.² Heaven and earth, be-conscious of this (my affliction).³

2. Those who seek for wealth, obtain it: a wife-enjoys (the presence of her husband, and from their union progeny is engendered. Heaven and earth, be-conscious of this (my affliction).

3. Never, gods, may this (my ancestry, abiding: above in heaven, be excluded (from it);⁴ never may we be in want (of a son) the cause of joy (to his progenitors,) entitled to libations of the Soma juice. Heaven, and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

1 Chandramāh suṣarnāh; the latter the Scholiast explains, sobhana-pātana, the well, or elegantly, going; or it may mean, connected with the ray of the sun called suparna, the combination with which gives the moon its light.

2 This refers to the supposed position of Trita at the bottom of the well, which, being covered over, shuts out from him all visible objects. (See the story of Trita, Hymn LII. note a. p. 114.)

3 The text has only, "Heaven and earth, know of this of me" (vittam me asya rodasī); that is, according to Sāyana, either, "Be aware of this my affliction," or, "Attend to this my hymn."

4 By failure of posterity, such as Trita anticipates for himself; as by a text quoted: "By a son a man conquers the worlds: there is no world (loka) for one who has no son." It may be observed of this reference, that although the Scholiast cites the Veda, iti s'ruteh, the passage occurs in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. It may possibly be found in the text of a hymn, but it is also possible that Sāyana includes the Brāhmaṇa under the designation Sruti; in which case we must receive his citations generally with reserve, for the Brāhmaṇa is not the Sruti as applicable to the original Vaidik text, although it is so regarded by all the native interpreters of the Vedas. (See Introduction.)

4. I implore the first (of the gods),¹ the object of sacrifice, that he will become my messenger, and narrate (my condition to the other deities). Where, Agni, is thy former benevolence, what new being now possesses it? Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

5. Gods, who are present in three worlds, who abide in the light of the sun, where now is your truth, where your untruth, where the ancient invocation (that I have addressed) to you? Heaven and earth, be conscious of (my affliction).

6. Where, deities, is your observance of the truth, where the (benignant) regard of Varuṇa, where is the path of the mighty Aryaman,² (so that) we may overcome the malevolent? Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

7. I am he, Gods, who formerly recited (your praise) when the libation was poured out, yet sorrows, assail me, like a wolf (that falls upon) a thirsty deer. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

8. The ribs (of the well close) round me, like the rival wives (of one husband); cares consume me, Satakratu, although thy worshipper, as a rat (gnaws a weaver's) threads.³ Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction)

1 According to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, agnir-va devānām avamah; which Scholiast explains, the first produced of all the gods; as by another text, agnir-mukham prathamam devatānām,—Agni is the mouth, the first of the deities.

2 Varuṇa is here explained to mean, the obstructor of evil, as what is undesired (anishṭanivāraka); Aryaman, the restrainer of enemies (arīnām niyantā).

3 Which, according to the Scholiast, have been steeped in rice-water, to render them more tenacious, and which are therefore palatable to

9. Those which are the seven rays (of the sun,) in them is my navel expanded;¹ Trita, the son of the waters,² knows that (it is so), and he praises them for his extrication (from the well). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

10. May the five shedders (of benefits)³ who abide in the centre of the expanded heavens, having together conveyed my prayers quickly to the gods, (speedily) return. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this my affliction).

11. The rays of the sun abide in the surrounding centre of heaven; they drive back the wolf crossing rats; or it may be rendered, "As a rat gnaws, or licks, its tail, having just dipped it in oil or grease." The practice of thickening threads with starch we have noticed by Manu, where the law requires that the cloth returned shall be heavier than the thread given, on this account (VIII, 397).

1 It is not very clear what is intended by the term nâbhi. Rosen renders it, domicile: Hi qui septem solis radii sunt, inter illos meum domicilium collocatum est; but it is not so explained in the commentary, and the ordinary sense of nâbhi is 'navel' in which the Scholiast seems to understand it; identifying the solar rays with the seven vital airs abiding in the ruling spirit (teshu suryarasmishu adhyâtman sap-taprânarupena vartamâneshu); alluding, perhaps, though obscurely, to the mystic practice of contemplating the umbilical region as the seat of the soul.

2 A'pîya; explained, Apâm putra, son of the waters; but it may be doubted if it can properly bear such an interpretation, for, as admitted by the Scholiast, such a patronymic from Apâ would be properly A'pya, and the insertion of the t is an anomaly.

3 They are said to be Indra, Varuna, Agni, Aryaman and Savitri; or, according to other texts, Fire, Wind, the Sun, the Moon, and the Lightning; for these, according to Sâtyâyana, are all luminous in their respective spheres; or fire upon earth, wind in the firmament, the sun in heaven, the moon in the planetary region, and lightning in the clouds. The Taittirîyas substitute for lightning, the Nakshatras, or asterisms, shining in the Svar-loka.

the great waters from the path.¹ Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction)

12. That new praiseworthy and commended (vigour)² is seated in you, ye Gods, (by which) the rivers urge on the waters, and the sun diffuses his constant (light). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

13. Worthy of praise, Agni, is that thy relationship (with the gods); do thou, who art most wise, seated at our (solemnity), worship (the gods), as (at the sacrifice of) Manu.

14. May that wise and liberal Agni, a sage amongst the gods, seated at our rite, as at the sacrifice of Manu, be the invoker of the deities, and offer them oblations. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

15. Varuna performs the rite of preservation;³ we desire him as the guide of our way; (to him, the repeater of praise) addresses praise with his (whole) heart; may he who is entitled to laudation become our true (support). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

1 Alluding, it is said, to a story of a wolf who was about to swim across a river to devour Trita, but was deterred by the brightness of the solar rays. According to Yaska, as quoted by Sāyana, he interprets Vriha, the moon and Apah the firmament, and renders the passage, "The rays of the sun prevent the moon from appearing, or being visible, in the firmament."

2 Bala, strength, is said by the commentator to be understood; of which ukthyam, praiseworthy, is an epithet. Rosen takes ukthyam for the substantive, in its not unusual sense of 'hymn,' and translates the text, nova hac cantilena dicata est vobis. Dii

3 Brhma kṛinoti Varuna. The first is here explained rak-shanāruṣaḥ karma, the act which is of the nature of preserving.

16. The sun, who is avowedly made the path in heaven,¹ is not to be disregarded, Gods, by you; but you, mortals, regard him not. Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

17. Trita, fallen into the well, invokes the Gods for succour; Brihaspati, who liberates many from sin, heard the supplication). Heaven and earth, be conscious of this (my affliction).

18. Once a twany wolf beheld me faring on my way, and, having seen me, rushed upon me, (rearing) as a carpenter,² whose back aches (with stooping, stands erect from his work).

19. By this recitation may we, becoming possessed of Indra, and strong with multiplied progeny, overcome our foes in battle; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be gracious to us in this (request).

1 Asau yathā pānthā ādityo divi pravāchyaṃ kṛitāḥ One meaning of pānthā is given as an epithet of Āditya, the sun, as satatagāmi the ever-going; but the more usual sense is a road, a path, and this interpretation is borne out by texts which represent the sun as the road to heaven; as, Surya-dvāreṇa virajāḥ prayānti—those who are free from soil go by the gate of the sun.

2 For the gods depend for existence indirectly upon the sun, who regulates the seasons at which sacrifices are offered.

3 The meaning of the comparison is not very clear, and is only rendered intelligible by the additions of the commentary. The wolf, like the carpenter, was urddhābhimukha (standing in presence erect). The passage admits of a totally different rendering, by interpreting vrika, the moon, and uniting māsakṛit, me once, into māsa-kṛit, month-maker. He, the moon, it is said, having contemplated the constellations going along the path of sky, became united with one of them paying, therefore, no attention to Trita in the well.

ANUVA'KA XVI.

SUKTA I. (CVI.)

THE Rishi is Kutsa, or it may be Trita; the hymn is addressed to all the gods; the metre is Yagati, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. We invoke, for our preservation, Indra, Mitra, Varuṇa, Agni, the might of the Maruts, and Aditi; may they, who are bountiful and bestowers of dwellings, extricate us from all sins, as a chariot from a defile.

Sons of Aditi, come with all (your hosts) to battle; be to us the cause of happiness in combats, and may they, who are bountiful and bestowers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

3. May the Pitris,¹ who are easily to be praised, protect us; and may the two divinities, heaven and earth, the promoters of sacrifices, and of whom the gods are the progeny, protect us; and may they, who are bountiful and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from sin, as a chariot from a defile.

4. Exciting him who is the praised of men and the giver of food, (to be present) at this rite, we solicit (also) with our praises him who is the purifier and destroyer of heroes;² may they who are bountiful and the givers of food, extricate us from sin, as a chariot from a defile.

5. Brihaspati, always confer happiness upon us; we solicit that faculty of both (alleviating pain and obviating peril) implanted in thee by Manu :¹ may they who are bountiful and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sins, as a chariot from a defile.

¹ The Agnishwāttas and others.—See Manu, III. 195.

² In the first clause, it is said Agni is alluded to; in the second, Pushan is named; but the term is explained by the Scholiast poshakam devam—nutrientem deum.

6. Kutsa,² the Rishi, thrown into a well, has invoked to his succour, Indra, the slayer of enemies, the encourager of good works :³ may they, who are bountiful and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

7. May the goddess Aditi, with the gods, protect us, and may the radiant guardian, (the sun), be vigilant for our protection ; and may they, who are bountiful and the givers of dwellings, extricate us from all sin, as a chariot from a defile.

SUKTA II. (CVII.)

THE Rishi is Kutsa ; the deities, all the gods ; the metre Trishtubh.

1. May our sacrifice give satisfaction to the gods : A'dityas, be gracious, and may your good intentions be directed towards us, so as to be an abundant source of affluence to the poor.

2. May the gods, who are to be lauded by the hymns of the Angirasas, come hither for our protection ; may Indra with his treasures, the Maruts with the vital airs, and Aditi with the A'dityas, (come and) give us felicity.

¹ Sam yor yat te Manurhitam,—The good, or blessing of those two (things, or properties) which was placed in them by Manu. The two are explained in the commentary as in the translated text.

³ Sachi-pati ; which might be rendered, 'the husband of Sachi ;' but the more usual sense of Sachi in the Veda is karma, act, or rite ; and it is so rendered in this place by the commentator.

3. May Indra, may Varuṇa, may Agni, may Āryamaṇ, may Savitri, bestow upon us that food (which we solicit); and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth and heaven, preserve it (to us).

SUKTA III. (CVIII.)

The Rishi is still Kutsa, who addresses Indra and Agni; the metre is Trishtubh.

1. Indra and Agni, sitting together in your car,—that wonderful car which illuminates all beings, approach and drink of the effused Soma juice.

2. Vast as is the whole universe in expanse, and profound in depth, such, Indra and Agni, may this Soma be for your beverage, sufficient for your desires.

3. You have made your associated names renowned, since, slayers of Vritra, you have been allied (for his death); the showerers of benefits, Indra and Agni, are the two seated together (on the altar); receive (your portion) of the libation.

4. The fires being kindled, the two (priests stand by),¹ sprinkling the clarified butter from the ladles, which they raise, and spreading the sacred grass (upon the altar); therefore, Indra and Agni, come before us for our gratification, (attracted) by stimulating Soma juices sprinkled all around.

5. Whatever heroic exploits you have achieved, whatever forms (you have created), whatever benefits (you have poured down), whatever ancient and fortunate friendships (you have contracted, come with them all) and drink of the effused Soma juice.

6. Come and witness the sincere faith with which, selecting you two, I first promised (you the libation); drink of the effused libation, for the Soma juice is prepared by the priests.

7. If, adorable Indra and Agni, you have ever been delighted (with libations) in your own dwelling, in that of a Brâhman, or in that of a prince,¹ then, showerers of benefits, come hither from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

8. If Indra and Agni, you are amongst men who are inoffensive, malevolent, or tyrannical, or those who live (to fulfil the duties of life), or those who receive the fruits (of good deeds),² then, showerers of benefits, come hither from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

9. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in the lower, the central, or the upper region of the world, show-

1 Yad brahmani rājani vā. The first is explained, a Brâhman who is a different institutor of a sacrifice (Brâhmane anyasmin yajamāne); the second, by kshatriye, a man of the second, or military caste.

2 The terms thus rendered, in conformity to the explanations of the Scholiast, would seem rather to be intended for proper names, the names of tribes or families well known in the Puranas, being severally, Yadus, Turvasas, Druhyus, Anus, and Purus, descendants of the five sons of Yayati, similarly named. (Mahabh. 1, 138.) Here, however, Yadu is explained by ahinsaka, non-injurious; Turvasa, by hinsaka, injurious; Druhyu, by upadraévchchhu, tyrannical; Anu, by pránair Yukta, having breath, or life, wherewith to acquire knowledge and perform religious acts; and Puru, by kamaih purayitavya, to be filled full of the objects of desire. The meanings may be supported by the etymology of the words, but the interpretation seems to be a needless refinement.

erers of benefits, come hither from wherever you may be; and drink of the effused libation.

10. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in the upper, central, or lower region of the world, come showerers of benefits, hither from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

11. Whether, Indra and Agni, you are in heaven or upon earth, in the mountains, in the herbs, or in the waters, showerers of benefits, come hither from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

12. Although, Indra and Agni, in the midst of the sky, on the rising of the sun, you may be exhilarated by your own splendour, yet, showerers of benefits, come hither from wherever you may be, and drink of the effused libation.

13. Thus Indra and Agni, drinking deep of the libation, grant to us all (kinds of) wealth; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, and Aditi, lean, earth, and heaven, preserve it to us.

SUKTA IV. (CIX.)

Rishi, deities, and metre, as in the last.

1. Indra and Agni, desirous of wealth, I consider you, in my mind, as kinsmen and relations; the clear understanding you have given me, (is given) by no one else, and, (so gifted), I have composed this hymn to you intimating my wish for sustenance.

2. I have heard, Indra and Agni, that you are more munificent givers than an unworthy bride-groom,¹ or the brother of a bride;¹ therefore, as I offer you a libation, I address you, Indra and Agni, with a new hymn.

3. Never may we cut off the long line of posterity); thus soliciting and asking for descendants endowed with the vigour of their progenitors, the (worshippers), begetting children, praise Indra and Agni for their happiness, and they two, destroyers of foes, are nigh (to hear this adoration).

4. The sacred prayer,² desiring your presence, offers to you both, Indra and Agni, for your exhilaration the Soma libation; do you two, who have horses, handsome arms, and graceful hands, come quickly and mix (the libation) with sweetness in the waters.

by the Vedas, and who is therefore obliged to conciliate his father-in-law by liberal gifts; which is, in fact, paying for, or buying, his wife; as in the interpretation of this stanza by Yaska, it is said (Nirukta, 6, 9), that the vijāṁdri is the "asusamāpta" the unfulfilled, or unaccomplished, bridegroom, which implies, according to some, that he is the husband of a purchased bride (kritapatī). This recognition in the Veda, of the act of receiving money from the bridegroom, is at variance with the general tenor of the law of marriage as laid down by Manu, which condemns the acceptance of anything by the father of a maiden, beyond a complimentary present, and censures the receipt of money, as equivalent to a sale: "Let no father who knows the law receive a gratuity, however small, for giving his daughter in marriage, since the man who, through avarice, takes a gratuity for that purpose is a seller of his offspring." Laws of Manu III. 51.) And again: "A bribe, whether large or small, is an actual sale of the daughter, although a bull and cow might be given at a marriage of saintly persons or Rishis" (Ibid. 53.) We have here, therefore, an indication of a different condition of the laws of marriage.

1 The Sydla, the brother of the maiden, who makes her gifts through affection. The word is derived by Yāksa from sya, a winnowing basket, and lā, for laja, fried grains, which are scattered at the marriage ceremony by the bride's brother.

2 Devi dhishand, divine speech; mantrarūpa, in the form of prayer.

5. I have heard, (when you were present) at the division of the treasure (among the worshippers), that you two, Indra and Agni, were most vigorous in the destruction of Vritra: beholders of all things, seated at this sacrifice upon the sacred grass, be exhilarated, (by drinking of the effused libation

6. Attending to the summons at the time of battle, you surpass all men (in magnitude): you are vaster than the earth, than the sky, than the rivers, than the mountains; you exceed all other existent things.

7. Bring wealth, thunderers, and give it to us; protect us, Indra and Agni, by your deeds; may those rays of the sun,¹ by which our forefathers have attained together² a heavenly region, shine also upon us.

8. Indra and Agni, wielders of the thunderbolt, overturners of cities, grant us wealth, defend us in battles; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be propitious to this (our prayer).

ŚUKTA V. (CĀ).

This hymn is addressed to the Ribhus; the Rishi is Kutsa; the fifth and ninth stanzas are in the Trishtubh, the rest in the Jagati metre.

i. Ribhus, the rite formerly celebrated by me is again repeated, and the melodious hymn is recited in 1 By the rays of the sun, in this place, it is said, are intended the radiance of Indra and Agni, as identical with the sun; by praising the latter, therefore, Indra and Agni are praised also.

2 Supitwam is explained, saṅapráptavyam sthānam, a place to be obtained together; that is according to the commentator, the world of Brahma, to which the pious proceed by a path of light, etc; (archirādi-mārgena Brahmaloṇam upāsakā gacchānti).

your praise ; in this ceremony, the Soma juice is sufficient for all the gods ; drink of it to your utmost content when offered on the fire.

2. When Ribhus, you who were amongst my ancestors, yet immature (in wisdom), but desirous of enjoying (the Soma libations) retired to the forest to perform (penance), then, sons of Sudhanwan,¹ through the plentitude of your completed (devotions), you came to the (sacrificial) hall of the worshipper Savitri.

3. Then Savitri bestowed upon you immortality, when you came to him, who is not to be concealed,² and represented (your desire) to partake of the libations ; and that ladle for the sacrificial viands, which the *Asura*³ had formed single, you made fourfold.

4. Associated with the priests, and quickly performing the holy rites, they, being yet mortals, acquired immortality, and the sons of Sudhanwan, the Ribhus, brilliant as the sun, became connected with the ceremonies (appropriated to the different seasons) of the year

5. Lauded by the bystanders, the Ribhus, with a sharp weapon, meted out the single sacrificial ladle like a field (measured by a rod), soliciting the best (libations), and desiring (to participate of) sacrificial food amongst the gods.

² In the preceding verse, Savitri, derived from sû to offer oblations, might mean merely the presenter of oblations ; but here we have evidently the sun alluded to.

³ Twashtri ; as in a former passage.

6. To the leaders (of the sacrifice),¹ dwelling in the firmament, we present, as with a ladle, the appointed clarified butter, and praise with knowledge those Ribhus, who, having equalled the velocity of the protector (of the universe, the sun),² ascended to the region of heaven, through (the offerings) of sacrificial food.

7. The most excellent Ribhu is in strength our defender; Ribhu, through gifts of food and of wealth is our asylum; may he bestow them upon us, Gods, through your protection; may we, upon a favourable occasion, overcome the hosts of those who offer no libations.

8. Ribhus, you covered the cows with a hide, and reunited the mother with the calf:³ sons of Sudhanwan, leaders (of sacrifice), through your good works you rendered your aged parents young.

9. Indra, associated with the Ribhus, supply us, in the distribution of viands, with food,⁴ and consent to bestow upon us wonderful riches; and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, preserve them for us.

1 Nribhyah; yajnasya netribhyah as in the text, Ribhavo hi yajnasya netarah,—"The Ribhus are the leaders of the sacrifice;" on which account they obtained immortality; or the term may be connected with antarikshasya, which precedes in the text, and may mean, as Rosen has it, to the chiefs of the firmament (aeris regibus).

2 A text of the Vêda identifies the Ribhus with the solar rays (Adityarâsmayo api Ribhava uchyante). The Ribhus are, indeed, said to be the rays of the sun.

3 A story is related, that a Rishi, whose cow had died, leaving a calf, prayed to the Ribhus for assistance, on which, they formed a living cow, and covered it with the skin of the dead one, from which the calf imagined it to be its own mother.

4 Vâjebhir no vâjasâtam avidâhi may be also rendered, "protect us in battle with your horse."

SUKTA VI. (CXI.)

THE Rishi and deities are the same ; the metre of the fifth verse is Trishtubh.

THE Ribhus, possessed of skill in their work, constructed (for the Aswins) a well-built car; they framed the vigorous horses bearing Indra; they gave youthful existence to their parents; they gave to the calf its accompanying mother.¹

2. Prepare fully for our sacrifice resplendent² sacrificial food, and for our rite and for our strength, such nutriment as may be the cause of excellent progeny, so that we may live (surrounded) by vigorous descendants; such wealth do you confer upon us for our benefit.

3. Ribhus, conductors (of sacrifice), bestow ample sustenance upon us, upon our chariots, upon our horses; let every one daily acknowledge our victorious wealth, and may we triumph in battle over our foes, whether strangers or kinsmen.

4. I invoke the mighty³ Indra for protection, and the Ribhus, Vâjas, and Maruts to drink the Soma juice; also both Mitra, Varuna, and the Aswins, and may they direct us to opulence, to holy rites, and to victory.

5. May Ribhu supply us with wealth for war; may Vâja, victorious in battle, protect us, and may Mitra, Varuna and Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be propitious to this our prayer.

1. See the preceding hymn; also Hymn xx.

2 Ribhumat; explained, having much light; for according to the Nirukta etymology, Ribhu means much light, from uru, much, and bhā to shine.

3 Ribhukshanam Indram might be Indra, who is Ribhukshin, of which Ribhukshanam is the accusative. In the following expressions, Ribhun and vâjān, plural accusatives, we are to understand, according to the commentator, the three sons of Sudhanwan,—Ribhu, Vibhu, and Vâja.

SUKTA VII. (CXII.)

THE Rishi is Kutsa, ; the first quarter-stanza is addressed to the Earth and Sky, the second to Agni, the rest of the hymn to the Aswins. The metre of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth stanzas is Trishtubh, of the rest, Jagati.

I PRAISE Heaven and Earth for preliminary meditation, (prior to the coming of the Aswins) ; I praise the hot and bright-shining Agni upon their approach, (as preparatory) to their worship : with those appliances with which you sound the conch shell in battle for your share (in the booty), with those aids,¹ Aswins, come willingly hither.

2. Earnest and exclusive adorers stand, Aswins, round your car, (to benefit) by your bounty, as (disciples listen) to the words (of a teacher) for instruction : with those aids with which you defend the pious who are engaged in acts of worship, come, Aswins, willingly hither.

3. By the vigour infused from celestial nectar, you are able, leaders (of sacrifice), to rule over those beings (who people the three worlds) : with those aids by which you gave (milk) to the barren cow,² come, Aswins, willingly hither.

4. With those aids by which the circumambient (wind,) endowed with the vigour of his son,³ the

1 Utibhak, instr. plur. of uti, help, aid, assistance, protection. It is rather an awkward term to render into English with the sense of plurality although not without precedent.

2 Alluding, according to the commentary, to the cow of a Rishi, named S'ayu, to which, although barren, the As'wins, at his entreaty, gave abundance of milk.

3 Agni is said to be the son of Vāyu ; as by the text, Vayor-Agnih either as generated, in the character of digestive warmth, by the vital airs, or as having been excited into flames by the wind at the time of creation.

measurer of the two worlds (of heaven and earth),¹ and swiftest of the swift, beautifies (all things), and by which (Kakshivat) became learned in the three kinds of sacrifice ;² with them come, Aswins, willingly hither.

5. With those aids by which you raised up from the water, Rebha, who had been cast bound (into a well), and also Vandana (similarly circumstanced), to behold the sky ; by which you protected Kanwa, when longing to see the light ;³ with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

6. With those aids by which you rescued Antaka,⁴ (when cast into) a deep (pool), and about to be destroyed ; by which, inflicting no distress, you preserved Bhujyu,⁵ and by which you relieved Kar-

1 Dvimâtri may be applied to the wind, in conjunction with Agni as the respective occupants of the earth and the firmament, the former being the region of Agni, the latter of Vâyu ; or it may be rendered, as in former instances, the son of two mothers, or the two sticks used for attrition, and thence be applicable to Agni.

2 Or, Trimantu, acquainted with the pâka-yajnas, or offerings of food ; the havir yajnas, or oblations of clarified butter, and the Soma yajnas, or libations of Soma juice. In this sense, Trimantu is synonymous, apparently, with Kakshivat, whose name is supplied by the Scholiast.

3 Rebha and Vandana are said to have been Rishis who were cast into wells by the Asuras. According to the Niti-manjari, they brought this upon themselves, by maintaining a friendly intercourse with the Asuras. Kanwa is said also to have been thrown by them into darkness. In these, and similar instances subsequently noticed, we may possibly have allusions to the dangers undergone by some of the first teachers of Hinduism among the people whom they sought to civilize.

4 Antaka is called a Râjarshi, whom the Asuras threw into a pond or a well,

5 Of Bhrigu, the son of the Râjâ Tugra, we shall hear again rather more in detail ; the tradition is remarkable. Bhujyu had embarked on a kandhu and Vayya,¹ with them, Aswins, come, willingly hither.

7. With those aids by which you enriched Suchanti² and gave him a handsome habitation, and rendered the scorching heat pleasurable to Atri,³ and by which you preserved Prisnigu and Purukutsa;⁴ with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

8. Showerers (of benefits), with those aids by which you enabled (the lame) Paravrij (to walk), the blind (Rijrâswa) to see, and (the cripple) S'rona to go,⁵ and by which you set free the quail⁶ when seized (by a wolf); with those aids, Aswins, come willingly hither,

9. With those aids by which you caused the sweet stream to flow, by which you, who are exempt from maritime expedition against the enemies of his father, but encountered a storm, in which his vessel was lost; he was saved, and brought back to his father by the intervention of the Aswins.

1 These are said to be Asuras whom the Aswins extricated from misfortunes.

2 No account is given of this person.

3 Atri, the patriarch, was thrown, it is said by the Asuras into a cave with a hundred doors, at all of which fires of chaff were kindled; they were extinguished with cold water by the Aswins; or, according to Yâska, Atri is here a name of Agni, the eater (Atri) of clarified butter but whose apperite, or intensity, being checked by the heat of the sun in the hot weather, was renovated by the rain sent down by the Aswins.

4 We have no particulars of these except that Prisnigu is so named from his possessing brindled cows (prisnayo gâvo yasya.)

5 Paravrij is a Rîshi; so are Rijraswa and Srona. The first is named without any epithet in the text; instead of the second we have Prândha, the totally blind, and S'rona is not called a cripple, but is said to have been made to walk. The Scholiast supplies the details.

6 Varttikâ, the commentary calls a bird like a sparrow; the ordinary sense is 'quail.'

decay, gratified Vasishtha, and by which you protected Kutsa, Srutarya, and Narya;¹ with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

10. With those aids by which you enabled the opulent Vis'palâ, when she was unable to move, to go to the battle rich in a thousand spoils, and by which you protected the devout Vas'a, the son of As'wa;² with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

11. With those aids by which, beauteous donors, the cloud (was made to) shed its sweet (water), for the sake of the merchant Dirghas'ravas, the son of Us'ij, and by which you protected the devout Kakshibat;³ with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

12. With those aids by which you filled the (dry) river-bed with water, by which you drove the chariot, without horses, to victory, and by which Tris'oka⁴ recovered his (stolen) cattle; with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

13. With those aids by which you encompassed the sun, when afar off, (to extricate him from eclipse); by which you defended Mândhâtri (in the discharge of)

1 Vasishtha is well known, but in what manner he was assisted by the Aswins does not appear; of the three others named in the text, it is only said that they were Rishis.

2 The story of Vis'palâ is subsequently more fully alluded to; she was the wife of Khela, the son of Agastya. Vasa and Aswa are called Rishis.

3 Dirghasravas was the son of Dirghatamas, and therefore a Rishi; but, in a time of famine, he followed trade, to obtain a livelihood, hence he is termed a Vanik, a merchant; as the son of Usij, he should be the same as Kakshivat, but the text treats them apparently as distinct.

4 Trisoka is called a Rishi, the son of Kanwa. These holy persons were much exposed, apparently, to cattle-stealing.

his sovereign functions,¹ and by which you protected the sage Bharadwâja;² with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

14. With those aids by which you defended the mighty and hospitable Divodâsa, (when having undertaken) the death of S'ambara, he hid himself in the water (through fear of the Asuras);³ by which you protected Trasadasyu in war;⁴ with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

15. With those aids by which you preserved Vamra, praised by all around him, when drinking (the dews of the earth); by which you protected Kali when he had taken a wife, and Prithi, when he had lost his horse;⁵ with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

1 Mândhâtri is called a Rishi, but a Râjarshi, a royal sage is invented, as Mândhâtri is a celebrated prince of the solar dynasty (Vishnu purâna 363); his regal character is also evident from his office (kshaitra-patyeshu); the derivative of kshetrapati, the lord, either of fields or of the earth.

2 Here we have also a name well known in Paurânîk tradition. (Vishnu Purâna, 449, and n. 15.). He is termed in the text, Vipra, usually intending a Brâhman, but here explained medhâvin, wise.

3 Divodâsa is a king well known in the Paurânîk traditions (Vishnu Purana, 407), but no notice there occurs of his war with the Asura, Sambara, whom we have elsewhere seen destroyed by Indra in defence, it is also said of this prince, or, as he is there named, Atithigwa, the cherisher of guests (atithi), which is here employed as an epithet.

4 The son of Purukutsa, according to the Scholiast, concurring, in this respect, with the Vishnu Purana, p. 371.

5 Vamra is called a Rishi, the son of Vikhânas; the text calls him Vipîpânâman, drinking much and variously, which the Scholiast explains, drinking, especially earthly moisture, or dew, pârthivam rasam. Of Kali no more is said than that he was a Rishi, nor of Prithi than that he was a Râjarshi.

16. With those aids, leaders (of sacrifices), which you afforded to S'ayu, to Atri, and formerly to Manu, anxious (to show them) the way (to escape from evil); with those by which you shot arrows (upon the foes) of Syumaras'mi;¹ with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

17. With those aids by which Patharvan² shone with strength of form in battle, like a blazing fire piled up (with fuel); by which you defended S'aryâta in war; with them, Aswins, come willingly hither.

18. Angiras, (praise the As'wins); As'wins with those aids by which, with (gratified) minds, you delight in praise³, and thence preceded the gods to the cavern to recover the stolen cattle;⁴ by which you sustained the heroic Manu with food;⁵ with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

19. With those aids by which you gave a wife to Vimada,⁵ by which you recovered the ruddy kine, by

1 The second and third names have occurred before, the first is called a Rishi: the text has only, "You wished them to go" (gâtum ishathuk); the Scholiast adds, "out of evil or danger." Manu is here called Râjarshi, whom the Aswins extricated from want, by teaching him the art of sowing the seeds of barley and other grains. Syumaras'mi is styled a Rishi.

2 Patharvan is merely called a Râjarshi. S'aryâta is probably intended for S'aryâti, the fourth son of Vaivaswata Manu (Vishnu Purana, and the same prince is no doubt meant in a former passage by S'aryâta, which may be an epithet of yajna, sacrifice, understood.—the sacrifice of S'aryâti, rather than a patronymic, although there rendered as a proper name, upon the authority of S'ayâna. Of the race of Bhrigu, applies also to Chyavana, not to Saryati.

3 We have here attributed to the Aswins a similar feat as that usually ascribed to Indra.

4 By making him aware, according to the commentary, of the grain hidden in the earth, or teaching him, in fact, agriculture.

5 The Aswins were the means, it is said, of obtaining the daughter of Purumitra as a wife for the Rishi Vimada.

which you conferred excellent wealth upon Sudâs ; with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

20. With those aids by which you are bestowers of happiness upon the donor (of oblations), by which you have protected Bhujyu and Adhrigu, and by which you have granted delighting and nourishing (food) to Ritastubh;² with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

21. With those aids by which you defended Kris'ânu in battle,³ with which you succoured the horse of the young Purukutsa⁴ in speed, and by which you deliver the pleasant honey to the bees; with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

22. With those aids by which you succoured the worshipper contending in war for cattle, by which you assist him in the acquisition of houses and wealth, by which you preserve his chariots and horses; with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

23. With those aids by which you, who are worshipped in many rites,⁵ protected Kutsa, the son of

1 The name of a king, the son of Pijavana, both names are unknown in the Puranas, although we have more than one Sudâsa; but they are sprung from other princes. (Vishnu Pur) A prince named Paiyavana, or son of Piyavana, is noticed by Manu, 8, 110.

2 Bhujyu has been named before. Adhrigu is called a sacrificer, or immolator, along with Châpa, of the gods; as by the text, — Adhrigus Chapas cha devânâm samitârau. Ritastubh is called a Rishi.

3 Kris'ânu is enumerated by the Taittiriyas amongst a class called Somâpalas, venders or providers, apparently, of the Soma plants; as by the text, Hasta-Suhasta-Kris'ânavaḥ, te vah Somakrayânah. The term occurs also amongst the synonymes of Agni.

4 Purukutsa, in the Puranas, is the son of Mandhâtri and husband of Narmadâ, the river (Vishnu Pur.): the text has only "of the young; the comment supplies Purukutsa.

5 Satakratu, the usual epithet of Indra: he to whom many rites are addressed, or by whom many acts are performed, is here applied to the Aswins.

Arjuna, as well as Turviti, Dhabhiti, Dhwasanti, and Purushanti;¹ with them, As'wins, come willingly hither.

24. As'wins, sanctify our words with works; showerers (of benefits), subduers of foes, (invigorate) our understanding (for the sacred study); we invoke you both, in the last watch of the night,² for our preservation; be to us for increase in the provision of food.

25. Cherish us, As'wins, always, by night or day, with undiminished blessings; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this our (prayer).

1. Kutsa and Turviti have occurred before, although the affiliation of the former is new; of the other names, no account is given, except that Purushanti is that of a Rishi

2. Adyutye, in the absence of light; that is, in the last watch of the night, or that preceding the dawn, at which time, according to As'walâyana, as quoted by Sâyana, the Aswins are especially to be worshipped.

EIGHTH ADHYA'YA.

SUKTA VIII. (CXIII)

THE hymn is addressed to Ushas (the dawn), and in the second half of the three first stanzas also to Night. The Rishi is Kutsa, the metro Trishtubh.

THIS most excellent luminary of all luminaries has arrived: the wonderful and diffusive manifestor (of all things) has been born; in like manner as night is the offspring of the sun, so she becomes the birth-place of the dawn.¹

2. The white-shining dawn, the parent of the sun,² has arrived; dark night has sought her own abode; both allied to the same (sun), immortal, succeeding to each other, and mutually effacing each other's complexion, they traverse the heavens.

3. The path of the sisters is unending; they travel it alternately, guided by the radiant (sun); combined in purpose, though of different forms, night and dawn, giving birth (to all things), obstruct not each other, neither do they stand still.

4. Brilliant guide of the speakers of truth,³ the many-tinted dawn, is recognised by us; she has

1 That is, when the sun sets, the night comes on, or it is generated by the setting of the sun, and may figuratively be termed his offspring and, in like manner, as the precursor, night may be termed the parent or womb, of the dawn.

2 A like conceit to that of the preceding verse,—the dawn precedes and therefore figuratively bears, or is the parent of, the sun.

3 Upon the appearance of the dawn, the animals and birds utter their rue, or natural, cries.

opened our doors; having illuminated the world, she has made our riches manifest. Ushas gives back all the regions (that had been swallowed up by night.)

5. The opulent (dawn) arouses to exertion the man bowed down in sleep,—one man to enjoyments, another to devotion, another to (the acquirement of) wealth; she has enabled those who were almost sightless to see distinctly. The expansive Ushas has given back all the regions.

6. The dawn rouses one man to acquire wealth, another to earn food, another to achieve greatness, another to sacrifices, another to his own (pursuits), another to activity, and lights all men to their various means of maintaining life. Ushas has given back all the regions.

7. The daughter of heaven, young, white-robed, the mistress of all earthly treasure, is beheld dissipating the darkness. Auspicious Ushas, shine upon us to-day in this (hall of sacrifice.)

8. Following the path of the mornings that have passed, and first of the endless mornings that are to come, Ushas, the disperser of darkness, arouses living beings, and awakens every one (that lay) as dead.

9. Ushas, inasmuch as thou hast caused the sacred fire to be kindled,¹ inasmuch as thou hast lighted the world with the light of the sun, inasmuch as thou hast wakened men to perform sacrifice, thou hast done good service to the gods.

10. For how long a period is it that the dawns have risen? for how long a period will they rise?

still desirous to bring us light, Ushas pursues the functions of those that have gone before, and shining brightly, proceeds with the others (that are to follow.)

11. Those mortals who beheld the pristine Ushas dawning have passed away; to us she is now visible, and they approach who may behold her in after-times.

12. The beings hostile (to acts of devotion) now withdraw,¹ for she is the protectress of sacred rites, who is manifested for their performance; she is the giver of happiness, the awakener of pleasant voices, the enjoyer of felicity, and provider of food for the gods : most excellent Ushas, dawn to-day on this (sacrificial hall.)

13. The divine Ushas dawned continually in former times; the source of wealth, she still rises on this (world); so will she give light hereafter, through future days, for, exempt from decay or death, she goes on in her splendour.

14. The divine Ushas lights up with her beams the quarters of the heavens; she has thrown off her gloomy form, and, awakening (those who sleep), comes in her car, drawn by purple steeds.

15. Bringing with her life-sustaining blessings, and giving consciousness (to the unconscious), she imparts (to the world) her wonderful radiance. The similitude of the numerous dawns that have gone by, the first of the brilliant (dawns that are to come), Ushas has to-day appeared.

16. Arise; inspiring life revives; darkness has departed; light approaches. Ushas has opened the road for the sun to travel : let us repair to where they distribute food.

1. Rākshasas, and other malignant spirits, vanish with the dawn.

17. The offerer of praise, the reciter of praise, celebrating the brilliant Ushasas, repeats the well-connected words (of the Véda). Possessor of affluence, dawn to-day upon him who praiseth thee ; bestow upon us food, whence progeny may be obtained.

18. May he who has offered the libation obtain, upon the conclusion of his praises, (enunciated), like the wind, (with speed), (the favour of) those Ushasas who are givers of horses, and of cattle, and of progeny, and who shed light upon the mortal presenting to them (offerings).

19. Mother of the gods,¹ rival of Aditi, illuminator of the sacrifice, mighty Ushas, shine forth ; approving of our prayer, dawn upon us. Do thou, who art cherished by all, make us eminent among the people.

20. Whatever valuable wealth the Ushasas convey, is beneficial to the sacrificer and to the praiser. May Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth and heaven, be favourable to this our prayer.

¹ The gods are awakened at dawn by the worship they then receive, and hence, the dawn may be said figuratively to be their parent (Mátá devánám), and in that character she is the enemy, or rival, of Aditi, who is their mother.

SUKTA IX. (CXIV.)

THE deity is Rudra, the Rishi Kutsa : the tenth and eleventh verses are in the Trishtubh metre, the rest in the Jagati.

WE offer those praises to the mighty Rudra,¹ with the braided hair,² the destroyer of heroes,³ in order that health may be enjoyed by bipeds, and quadrupeds, and that all beings in this village may be (well) nourished and exempt from disease.

2. Be gracious to us, Rudra ; grant us happiness, for we worship the destroyer of heroes with oblations ; and, by thy directions, Rudra, may we obtain that freedom from disease and exemption from dangers which our progenitor, Manu, bestowed upon us, (having obtained them from the gods.)

1 We have a repetition here of the usual etymologies of Rudra, with some additions : He causes all to weep (rodhayati) at the end of the world ; or rut may signify 'pain,'—the pain of living, which he drives (away drávayati) ; or rut may mean 'word,' or 'text,' or the upanishads of the Vedas, by which he is approached, or propitiated (druyate) ; or rut may mean 'holy or divine speech,' or 'wisdom,' which he confers (rátí) upon his worshippers ; or rut may mean 'darkness,' that which invests or obstructs (runaddhi) all things and which he dissipates (vináti) ; or again, it is said, that while the gods were engaged in battle with the Asuras. Rudra, identified with Agni, came and stole their treasure ; after conquering the enemy, the gods searched for the stolen wealth, and recovered it from the thief, who wept (arudat) and Agni, was thence called Rudra.

2 Kapardine, from Kaparda, of which one meaning is, the jatā, or braided hair of Siva, whence the Scholiast gives, as its equivalent jatilāya. This looks very like a recognition of Siva in the person of Rudra ; it is not easy to suggest any other interpretation, unless the term be an interpolation.

3 Kshayad virāya in whom heroes (virā) perish (vinasyanti) ; or it may mean of whom the imperial (kshayantah prāptaiswaryāh) heroes (that is, the Maruts) are the sons. The epithet is repeated in the following verses.

3. Rudra, showerer (of benefits), may we obtain, through our worship of the gods, the favour of thee, who art the destroyer of heroes : come to our posterity, purposing to promote their happiness, while we having, our sons in safety, offer thee oblations.

4. We invoke for our preservation the illustrious Rudra, the accomplisher of sacrifices,¹ the tortuous,² the wise ; may he remove far from us his celestial wrath for we earnestly solicit his favour.

5. We invoke from heaven, with reverence, him who has excellent food,³ who is radiant, and has braided hair, who is brilliant, and is to be ascertained (by sacred study), holding in his hands excellent medicaments : may he grant us health, defensive armour, and a (secure) dwelling.

6. This praise, the sweetest of the sweet, and cause of increase (to the reciter), is addressed to Rudra, the father of the Maruts :⁴ immortal Rudra grant us food sufficient for mortals, and bestow happiness on me, my son and my grandson.

1 Yajna sadham, i. e. sādhayitāram, he who makes the sacrifice well-desired, or perfect (swishtam or su ishtam).

2 Vanku, he who goes crookedly ; what is meant by this is not explained.

3 The phrase is Varāha, literally, a boar, and one who has a hard body, like a boar's, may be intended ; but the Scholiast prefers considering it as an abbreviation of varāhāra, from vara, good, and āhāra, food.

4 The paternity of Rudra, with respect to the Maruts, is thus accounted for by the Scholiast : " After their birth from Diti, under the circumstances told in the Puranas (Vishnu Purana, p. 152), they were beheld in deep affliction by Siva and Pārvatī as they were passing sportively along ; the latter said to the former, ' If you love me, transform these lumps of flesh into boys.' Maheśa accordingly made them boys of like form, like age, and similarly accoutred, and gave them to

7. Injure not Rudra, those amongst us who are old and young, who are capable of begetting, or who are begotten, nor a father, nor a mother, nor afflict our precious persons.

8. Harm us not, Rudra, in our sons or grandsons, or other male descendants, nor in our cattle, nor in our horses; inflamed with anger, kill not our valiant men. for we, presenting clarified butter, perpetually invoke thee.

9. I restore to thee, the praises (derived from thee), as a shepherd (returns his sheep to their owner); father of the Maruts, bestow happiness upon me; thy auspicious benignity is the cause of successive delight, therefore we especially solicit thy protection.

10. Destroyer of heroes, may thy cow-killing or man-slaying (weapon) be far away, and let the felicity granted by thee be ours; favour us; speak, brilliant hero, in our behalf, and grant us, thou who art mighty over the two (realms of heaven and earth), prosperity.

11. Desirous of protection, we have said, reverence be to him; may Rudra, with the Maruts, hear our invocation; and may Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this our prayer.

Pārvatī, as her sons, whence they are called the sons of Rudra." The Nitimanjuri adds other legends; one, that Pārvatī, hearing the lamentations of Diti, entreated Śiva to give the shapeless births, forms, telling them not to weep (mzrodih): another, that he actually begot them, in the form of a bull, on Prithivī, the earth, as a cow. These stories are evidently fictions of a much later era than that of the Vedas, being borrowed, if not fabricated, from the Tantras, and may be set aside, without hesitation, as utterly failing to explain the meaning of those passages in the Vedas which call the Maruts the sons of Rudra.

SUKTĀ X. (CXV)

Kutsa is the Rishi ; the deity is Surya, the metre Trishtubh.

1. The wonderful host of rays has risen ; the eye of Mitra, Varuṇa, and Agni ;¹ the sun, the soul of all that moves or is immoveable,² has filled (with his glory) the heaven, the earth and the firmament.

2. The sun follows the divine and brilliant Ushas, as a man (follows a young and elegant) woman ; at which season, pious men perform (the ceremonies established for) ages,³ worshipping the auspicious (sun), for the sake of good (reward)

3. The auspicious, swift horses of the sun, well-limbed, road-traversing, who merit to be pleased with praise, revered by us, have ascended to the summit of the sky, and quickly circumambulate earth and heaven.

4. Such is the divinity, such is the majesty of the sun, that when he has set, he has withdrawn (into himself) the diffused (light which had been shed) upon the unfinished task ;⁴ when he has unyoked his

1 Or Chakshus may mean 'the enlightener,' Mitra; Varuṇa, and Agni are said to be typical of the world, or of the seasons, perhaps, over which they preside.

2 A'tmā jagatah, the soul of the world ; from his pervading and animating all things ; or jagatuh may be rendered, 'of what is moveable ; it is followed by tasthushah,—of that which is fixed. The sun is the cause of all effects, whether moveable or immoveable (sa hi sarvasya sthāvāra jagamātmakasya kāryavargasya kāranam).

3 Yugāni, which may also be rendered, 'yokes for ploughs ; 'for, at this season (dawn), men seeking to propitiate the gods by the profit which agriculture yields, equip their ploughs, or engage in the labours of the field.

4 Madhyākartor-vitatam, spread in the middle of the affair ; that is, the cultivator, or artisan, desists from his labour, although unfinished, upon the setting of the sun.

coursers from his car, then night extends the veiling darkness over all.

5. The sun, is the sight of Mitra and Varuna,¹ displays his form (of brightness) in the middle of the heavens, and his rays² extend, on one hand, his infinite and brilliant power, or, on the other (by their departure), bring on the blackness of night.

6. This day, gods, with the rising of the sun, deliver us from heinous sin; and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi,—ocean, earth, and heaven, be favourable to this our prayer.

¹ Mitra and Varuna are used, according to the commentary, by metonymy, for the world.

² Haritah, which may mean also his horses.

ANUVA'KA XVII.

SUKTA I. (CXVI.)

The deities are the Aswins; the Rishi is Kakshivat; the metre is Trishtubh.

1. In like manner as a worshipper strews the sacred grass for the Nâsatyas, so do I urge on their laudations, as the wind drives on the clouds: they, who gave a bride to the youthful Vimada,¹ and bore her away in their car, outstripping the rival host.

2. Nâsatyas, borne by strong and rapid (steeds) and (urged) by the encouragements of the gods, the ass² of you, thus instigated, overcame a thousand (enemies) in conflict, in the war grateful to Yama.

3. Tugra,³ verily, Aswins, sent (his son) Bhujyu to sea, as a dying man parts with his riches; but you brought him back in vessels of your own, floating over the ocean, and keeping out the waters.

¹ The story told by the Scholiast is, that Vimada, having won his bride at a Swayambara, or choice of a husband by a princess, was stopped on his way home by his unsuccessful competitors, when the Aswins came to his succour, and placed the bride in their chariot, repulsed the assailants, and carried the damsel to the residence of the prince.

² An ass (râsabha) given by Prajâpati. The chariot of the Aswins is drawn by two asses (rasabhavaswinoh)—Nighuntu, 1, 14; or it may mean, "one going swiftly," and the rest of the passage, "obtained precedence for the Aswins over other gods in the oblation, through his mastering the stanzas declared by Prajâpati."

4. Three nights and three days, Nâsatyas, have you conveyed Bhujyu in three rapid, revolving cars, having a hundred wheels, and drawn by six horses,¹ along the dry bed of the ocean to the shore of the sea.

5. This exploit you achieved, As'wins, in the ocean where there is nothing to give support, nothing to rest upon, nothing to cling to, that you brought Bhujyu, sailing in a hundred-oared ship,² to his father's house.

6. As'wins, the white horse you gave to Pedu, whose horses were indestructible, was ever to him success; that your precious gift, is always to be celebrated; the horse of Pedu, the scatterer (of enemies) is always to be invoked.³

7. You gave leaders (of sacrifice), to Kakshivat, of the race of Pajra,⁴ various knowledge; you filled from the hoof of your vigorous steed, as if from a cask, a hundred jars of wine.⁵

8. You quenched with cold (water) the blazing flames (that encompassed Atri) and supplied him with food-supported strength; you extricated him, As'wins,

1 This is a rather unintelligible account of a sea voyage, although the words of the text do not admit of any other rendering.

2 Satdritrām nâvam, a ship with a hundred, that is, with many, oars. This stanza is consistent with the first of the triad.

3 Pedu, it is said, was a certain Râjarshi, who worshipped the As'wins; they therefore gave him a white horse, through the possession of which he was always victorious over his enemies.

4 Pajras is another name for Angirasas, in which race Kukshvat was born.

5 No account of the occasion of this miracle is given.

from the dark (cavern) into which he had been thrown headlong, and restored him to every kind of welfare.¹

9. Nâsatyas, you raised up the well, and made the base, which had been turned upwards, the curved mouth so that the water issued for the beverage of the thirsty Gotama, the offerer.²

10. Nâsatyas, you stripped off from the aged Chyavana his entire skin, as if it had been a coat of mail;³ you reversed, Dasras, the life of the sage who was without kindred, and constituted him the husband of many maidens.

1 Described before.

2 This has been elsewhere related of the Maruts. The manner in which the well was presented to Gotama is somewhat obscurely described.

3 The restoration of the ascetic Chyavana to youth and beauty is related in several Purânas; following, probably, the Mahâbhârata, Vana Parv, vol. i. p. 577: he is there called the son of Bhrigu, and was engaged in penance near the Narmadâ river until the white ants constructed their nests round his body, and left only his eyes visible. Sukanyâ, the daughter of King S'aryati, having come to the place, and seeing two bright spots in what seemed to be an ant-hill, pierced them with a stick; the sage visited the offence upon S'aryati and his attendants, and was appeased only by the promise of the king to give him his daughter in marriage. Subsequently, the As'wins coming to his hermitage, compassionated Sukanya's union with so old and ugly a husband as Chyavanta, and, having made trial of her fidelity, bestowed on the sage a similar condition of youth and beauty to their own. This story does not seem to be the same, however, as that of the text, in which no allusion occurs to Sukanyâ, and the transformation of Chyavana precedes his matrimonial connection. He is termed jahita in the text; properly, abandoned; that is, according to the Scholiast, by sons, and others (putradibhih parityakta); but it may denote, perhaps, merely his solitary condition as an ascetic. In return for their friendly office, Chyavana compelled Indra to assent to the As'wins receiving at sacrifices a share of the Somâ libation, which is not noticed in the text.

11. Nâsatyus, leaders, glorious was that exploit of yours, one to be celebrated, to be adored, to be desired by us, when becoming aware (of the circumstance), you extricated Vandana, (hidden), like a concealed treasure, from the (well) that was visible (to travellers).¹

12. I proclaim, leaders (of sacrifice), for the sake of acquiring wealth, that inimitable deed which you performed, as the thunder (announces) rain, when, provided by you with the head of a horse, Dadhyanch, the son of Atharvan,² taught you the mystic science.

13. The intelligent (Vadhrimati),³ invoked you, Nâsatyas, who are the accomplisners (of desires) and the protectors of many, with a sacred hymn; her prayer was heard, like (the instructions of) a teacher, and you, ¹ For "well" we have only darsatat in the text,—that which was to be seen by thirsty travellers, according to the commentary.

² We have here rather obscure allusions to a legend which was probably afterwards modified by the Purânas, in which the name also occurs as Dadhicha. In the Mahâbhârata, Vana Parva, vol. i. p. 554, it is merely related, that the gods, being oppressed by the Kâlakeya Asuras, solicited from the sage Dadhicha his bones, which he gave them, and from which Twashtri fabricated the thunderbolt with which Indra slew Vritra and routed the As'uras. The legend of the text differs from this; Indra, having taught the sciences called Pravargya vidya and Madhuvidyâ to Dadhyanch, threatened that he would cut off his head if ever he taught them to any one else; the Aswins prevailed upon him, nevertheless, to teach them the prohibited knowledge, and, to evade Indra's threat, took off the head of the sage, replacing it by that of a horse; Indra, apprized of Dadhyanch's breach of faith, struck off his equine head with the thunderbolt; on which the Aswins restored to him his own. The Pravargya vidya is said to imply certain verses of the Rik, Yajur, and Sâma Vedas, and the Madhu-vidyâ, the Brâhmâna.

³ Vadhrimati was the wife of a certain Râjarshi who was impotent. The Aswins, propitiated by her prayers, gave her a son.

As'wins gave to the wife of an impotent husband, Hiraṇ-yahasta, her son.

14. Nâsatyas, leaders, you liberated the quail from the mouth of the dog¹ that had seized her, and you, who are benefactors of many, have granted to the sage who praises you, to behold (true wisdom).

15. The foot of (Vis'palâ, the wife of) Khela, was cut off, like the wing of a bird, in an engagement by night; immediately you gave her an iron leg, that she might walk, the hidden treasure (of the enemy being the object of the conflict.)²

16. When his father caused Rijrâs'wa,³ as he was giving to a she-wolf⁴ a hundred sheep cut up in pieces, to become blind, you, Dasras, physicians (of the gods) gave him eyes, (that had been) unable to find their way, with which he might see.

17. The daughter of the sun⁵ ascended your car,

1 Vrikâ, more usually a wolf, but here said to be synonymous with s'wân, a dog; elsewhere termed by the commentary âranya s'wan, a forest, or wild dog. Yâska interprets it figuratively, and renders Vrikâ by A'ditya, the sun, from whose grasp, or overpowering radiance, the As'wins are said to have rescued the dawn, upon her appeal to them.

2 The story is here more fully detailed in the text; it is only added in the notes, that Khela was a king, of whom Agastya was the Purohita, and it was through his prayers that the As'wins gave Vis'palâ an iron leg.

3 Rijrâs'wa was one of the sons of Vrishagîr; his blindness has been previously alluded to but here we have the story in detail.

4 The Vriki, was one of the asses of the As'wins in disguise, to test his charitable disposition; but, as he exacted the sheep from the people, his father was angry, and caused him to lose his eyesight, which the As'wins restored to him.

5 Surya, it is related, was desirous of giving his daughter Suryâ to Soma, but all the gods desired her as a wife; they agreed that he who should first reach the sun, as a goal, should wed the damsel. The As'wins were victorious, and Suryâ, well pleased by their success, rushed immediately into their chariot.

(like a runner) to a goal : when you won (the race) with your swift horse, all the gods looked on with (anxious) hearts, and you, Nâsatyas, were associated with glory.

18. When, As'wins, being invited, you went to his dwelling, (to give due rewards) to Divodâsa, offering oblations, then your helping chariot conveyed food and treasure, and the bull and the porpoise were yoked together.¹

19. Nâsatyas, bearing strength and wealth with posterity and vigour-sustaining food, you came, with one intention, to the family of Jahnu,² (provided) with (sacrificial) viands, and possessing a third portion of the daily (offerings).

20. Undecaying Nâsatyas, you bore away by night, in your foe-overwhelming car, Jâhusha,³ surrounded on every side by (enemies) through practicable roads, and went to (inaccessible) mountains.

21. You preserved Vas'a, As'wins, (that he might obtain) in a single day a thousand acceptable gifts !⁴ showerers (of benefits), associated with Indra, you destroyed the malignant enemies of Prithus'ravas.⁵

1 The Vrishabha and the Sins'umâra. The commentator calls the latter grâha, which is properly an alligator, but the S'is'umara, as it is usually read, is every where else considered to be a name of the Gange-tic porpoise : they were yoked to the car of As'wins, the comment says, to display their power.

2 Jahnâvi, not Jâhnavi ; it is here considered as an adjective to prajā, progeny (Jahnor prajām). Jahnu is called a Maharshi ; he is a prince of the lunar dynasty in the Purânas.

3 The name of a certain king ; we have nothing relating to him beyond what is stated in the text.

4 Vasa, a Rishi, it is said, received daily presents to the number of one thousand.

5 We have a Prithus'ravas amongst the Paurânîk princes, but nothing particular is recorded of him. (Vishnu Purâna)

22. You raised the waters from the bottom to the top of the well, for the drinking of S'ara, the son of Richitka,¹ and by your powers, Nâsatyas, you filled, for the sake of the weary S'ayu, the barren cow (with milk).

23. Nâsatyas, by your acts you restored to Vis'waka, the son of Krishna, soliciting your protection, adoring you, and a lover of rectitude, his son Vishnâpu,² (welcome) to his sight as an animal that had been lost.

24. As'wins, you raised up, like Soma in a ladle, Rebha, who for ten nights and nine days had lain (in a well), bound with tight bonds, wounded, immersed, and suffering distress from the water.

25. Thus, As'wins, have I declared your exploits; may I become the master (of this place), having abundant cattle and numerous progeny, and retaining my sight, and enjoying a long life: may I enter into old age as (a master enters) his house.

SUKTA II. (CXVII.)

Deities, Rishi, and metre as before.

AS'WINS, for your gratification by the pleasant Soma juice, your ancient worshipper adores you: the offering is poured upon the sacred grass, the hymn is ready (for repetition); come, Nâsatyas, with food and with vigour.

2. With that car, As'wins, which, rapid as thought, drawn by good horses, appears before men, and with which you repair to the dwelling of the virtuous, come, leaders of (sacrifices), to our abode.

¹ Of S'ara, called A'rchitka, or the son of Richitka, nothing is detailed.

3. You liberated, leaders (of rites), the sage Atri, who was venerated by the five classes of men, from the wicked prison, together with his troop (of children), destroying his enemies, and baffling, showerers (of benefits), the devices of the malignant Dasyus.

4. Leaders (of sacrifice) showerers (of benefits), you restored Rebha, cast by unassailable (enemies) into the water, and wounded, like a (sick) horse, by your (healing) skill: your ancient exploits do not fade (from recollection).

5. You extricated, Dasras, the sage Vandana, cast into a well, like a handsome and splendid ornament designed for embellishment, and (lying), As'wins, like one sleeping on the lap of the earth, or like the sun disappearing in darkness.

6. That (exploit) of yours, leaders (of sacrifice), is to be celebrated, Nâsatyas, by Kakshivat, of the race of Pajra, when you filled for the (expectant) man a hundred vases of sweet (liquors) from the hoof of your fleet horse.

7. You restored, leaders (of sacrifices), Vishnâpu (his lost son) to Vis'waka, the son of Krishna, when he praised you; you bestowed, As'wins, a husband upon Ghosâ, growing old and tarrying in her father's dwelling.¹

8. You gave, As'wins, a lovely bride to S'yâva;²

² Syâva, a Rishi had the black leprosy, but was cured of it by the As'wins, and consequently married.

you gave sight to Kanwa,¹ unable to see his way; showerers (of benefits), the deed is to be glorified by which you gave hearing to the son of Nrishada.²

9. As'wins, who assume many forms, you gave to Pedu a swift horse, the bringer of a thousand (treasures), powerful, irresistible, the destroyer of foes, the object of praise, the bearer (over dangers).

10. Liberal givers, these your exploits are to be celebrated, and the resounding prayer propitiates you while abiding in heaven and earth; when the descendants of Pajra invite you, As'wins, come with food, and grant strength to the sage (who worships you).

11. As'wins, glorified by the praise of the son (of the jar),³ and giving food, nourishers (of men), to the sage (Bharadwâja), exalted by Agastya with prayer, you restored Nâsatyas, Vis'palâ.

12. Whither were you going, sons of heaven, showerers (of benefits), when, on your way to the dwelling of Kâvya,⁴ (to receive his) adoration, you raised up (Rebha), As'wins, on the tenth day, like a buried vessel full of gold?

13. You rendered, by your power, As'wins, the aged Chyavana again young: the daughter of the sun, Nâsatyas, invested your chariot with beauty.

14. Dissipators of affliction, as you were praised with former praises by Tugra, so were you again adored

¹ The blindness of Kanwa is not adverted to in any of his hymns hitherto met with.

² The son of Nrishada is unnamed; he is termed a Rishi.

³ We have only "son" (sunu) the Scholiast adds, Kumbhât prasuta, that is, Agastya; so, again, the text gives only viprâya, which the commentary amplifies by Bharadwâjâya rishaye.

⁴ Usanas, the son of Kavi.

(by him), when you brought Bhujya safe from the tossing ocean with swift ships¹ and rapid horses.

15. The son of Tugra, brought back by you, As'wins, (to his father), glorified you when he had crossed the ocean in safety, and you bore him, showerers (of benefits), with your well-harnessed car, swift as thought, to safety.

16. The quail glorified you As'wins, when you saved her from the mouth of the wolf; you carried off (Jâhusha) to the top of the mountain in your triumphant chariot; and slew the son of Vis'wânch with a poisoned (arrow).²

17. You restored eyes to Rijrâs'wa, who, on presenting a hundred sheep to the she-wolf, had been condemned to darkness by his indignant father, and gave light to the blind, wherewith to behold all things.

18. (Desiring) that the enjoyment (arising from the perfection) of the senses (should be restored to the blind,) the she-wolf invoked you, (saying), "As'wins, showerers (of benefits,) leaders (of sacrifices), Rijrâs'wa, (lavish) as a youthful gallant, (has given me) a hundred and one sheep, cutting them into fragments."

19. As'wins, your powerful protection is the source of happiness; worthy of laudation, you have made whole the maimed; therefore, has the intelligent (Ghoshâ) called upon you: showerers (of benefits), come hither with your succours.

20. Dasras, you filled the milkless, barren, and emaciated cow of S'ayu with milk; you brought, by ¹ For swift, we have vibhîh, to which the Scholiast adds, naubhîh, ships.

² Vis'wânch is called an Asura; the text says, "whose son you killed with poison;" the commentator explains this to imply a poisoned arrow.

your powers, the daughter of Purumitra, as a wife, to Vimada.¹

21. As'wins, causing the barley to be sown (in the fields that had been prepared) by the plough; milking (the clouds) for the sake of Manu; destroying the Dasyu with the thunderbolt; you have bestowed brilliant light upon the Arya.²

22. You replaced, As'wins, with the head of a horse, (the head of) Dadhyanch, the son of Atharvan, and, true to his promise, he revealed to you the mystic knowledge which he had learned from Twashtri, and which was as a ligature of the waist to you.³

23. Sapient As'wins, I ever solicit your favour; protect all my religious duties, and grant, Nâsatyas, abundant and excellent wealth, together with offspring.

24. Liberal As'wins, leaders (of sacrifices), you gave to Vadhrimati her son Hiranyahasta; bounteous As'wins, you restore to life the triply-mutilated S'yâva.⁴

25. These, your ancient exploits, As'wins, our forefathers, have celebrated, and we offer adoration to you, showerers (of benefits) repeating your praises, accompanied by our dependants.

1 It is only said of Purumitra that he was a certain Raja.

2 A'ryâya; the Scholiast explains this vidushe, to the sage that is, to, or upon, Manu; but the previous occurrence of Dasyu appears to warrant the understanding of A'rya as its contrast, and to treat it as a national appellative. It may also be observed, that the text has Manusha, which the Scholiast says is here a synonym of Manu, but which more usually designates man.

3 Twashtri is here considered synonymous with Indra; the knowledge was kaṣṣhyam. vâṁ,—a girdle to you both; strengthening them to perform religious rites.

4 He was cut into three pieces by the Asuras, it is said, which were reunited into one by, the As'wins.

SUKTA III. (CXVIII)

The deities, the Rishi, and metre, as before.

MAY your elegant and rich car, swift as a hawk, come, As'wins, to our presence, for it is as quick as the mind of man, surmounted, showerers (of benefits), by three columns, and rapid as the wind.

2. Come to us with your tri-columnar, triangular, three-wheeled, and well-constructed car; replenish our cows (with milk), give spirit to our horses, and augment, As'wins, our posterity.

3. Dasras, (having come) with your quick-moving, well-constructed car, hear this hymn, (recited by one) who reveres you: do not the ancient sages say that you are most prompt, As'wins, (to avert) poverty from the worshipper?

4. May your quick-moving, prancing steeds, rapid as hawks, yoked to your car, bear you, As'wins, (hither), who, quick as (falling) water, like vultures flying through the air, convey you, Násatyas, to the sacrifice.

5. Leaders (of sacrifice), the youthful daughter of Surya ascended, delighted, this your car;¹ may your strong-bodied, prancing, fleet, and shining horses, bring you near us.

6. By your deeds, Dasras, you raised up Vandana, and, showerers (of benefits) Rebha; you bore the son of Tugra over the sea, and made Chyavana young.

1 In this, and most of the following verses, we have allusions to the same persons and incidents as have been previously noticed, in most instances, repeatedly, but in general, in this hymn, more summarily.

7. You (gave relief) to the imprisoned Ātri, (quenching the) scorching heat, and fed him with grateful food; solicitous of worthy praise, you gave sight to Kanwa, blinded (by darkness).

8. You filled his cow with milk, As'wins, for the ancient S'ayu, when imploring (your aid); you liberated the quail from danger; you gave a leg to Vis'palā.

9. You gave to Pedu, As'wins, the white and foe-trampling steed which you had received from Indra, loud-neighing (in battle), defying enemies, high-spirited, the acquirer of a thousand treasures, vigorous, and firm in body.

10. Earnestly we call you, leaders (of the sacrifice), such (as you have been described), and who are well-born, to our succour, soliciting, As'wins, wealth; contented with our laudations, come to us with your wealthy car, to bring us felicity.

11. Come to us, auspicious Nāsātyas, with the fresh velocity of a hawk: bearing an oblation, I invoke you, As'wins, at the rising of the ever constant dawn.

SUKTA IV. (CXIX.)

Rishi and deities the same; the metre is Ṭagātī.

DESIRING food, I invoke, (As'wins), to support my life, your wonderful car, swift as thought, drawn by fleet horses, worthy of veneration; many-bannered, bringing rain, containing wealth, abundantly yielding delight, and conferring riches.

2. Upon its moving, our minds have been raised on high in praise; our hymns reach (the As'wins). I sweeten the oblation: the assistants come high:

Urjani,¹ (the daughter of the sun), has ascended, As'wins, your car.

3. When devout and unnumbered (men), victorious in battle, mutually contending for wealth, come together, your car, Aswins, is perceived on its downward course, in which you bear excellent (treasure) to the worshipper.

4. You brought back to his ancestors Bhujyu, who, borne by his own steeds, had perished, (but that you rescued him) with your self-harnessed horses, and went, showerers (of benefits), to his distant dwelling; and great was the succour which it is known you rendered to Divodâsa.

5. As'wins, your admirable (horses) bore the car which you had harnessed, (first) to the goal, for the sake of honour, and the damsel, who was the prize, came, through affection, to you, and acknowledged your (husbandship), saying, "You are (my) lords."

6. You preserved Rebha from the violence around him; you quenched with snow, for Atri, the scorching heat; you generated milk in the cow of S'ayu; and (by you) was Vandana endowed with prolonged life.

7. Skilful Dasras, you restored Vandana, when debilitated by old age, as a (wheelwright repairs a worn-out) car; (moved) by his praises, you brought forth the sage² (Vâmadeva) from the womb: may your (glorious) deeds be (displayed) for him who in this place offers you worship.

8. You repaired to him who, afflicted by the abandonment of his own father, praised you from afar :¹ hence your prompt and wonderful succours have been wished to be at hand (by all).

² The text does not name him; the Scholiast calls him Vâmadeva, but nothing further is said of him than that he invoked the aid of the As'wins, whilst yet in his mother's womb.

9. That honey-seeking bee also murmured your praise ; the son of Us'ij invokes you to the exhilaration of the Soma juice : you conciliated the mind of Dadhyanch, so that, provided with the head of a horse, he taught you (the mystic science).

10. As'wins, you gave to Pedu the white (horse) desired by many, the breaker through of combatants, shining, unconquerable by foes in battle, fit for every work ; like Indra, the conqueror of men.

SUKTA V. (CXX).

THE Deities and Rishi are the same. Of the thirteen stanzas of the hymn, the first ten are in as many different metres ; the three last are in the Gâyatri measure.

WHAT praise may propitiate you, As'wins ? who may give satisfaction to you both ? how may any ignorant (man) pay fitting homage ?

2. Thus may an ignorant man inquire the means of worshipping the all-wise, for every (one) other (than the As'wins) is unknowing ; they, the unconquered, quickly (show favour) to the man (who worships them.)

3. We invoke you, who know all things ; may you, who are omniscient, declare to us to-day the praise that is acceptable : desirous of your {presence, I reverence you, offering (oblations).

4. I invite not the gods immature (in wisdom),

¹ This refers, it is said, to the story of Bhujyu, whom his father, Tugra, had abandoned, or rather, perhaps, was unable to succour

² Pákyā, to be ripened ; not yet mature in wisdom (paktavyapraj--ánñn).

but you, Dasras ; drink of the wonderful and strength-giving burnt-offering, and make us vigorous.

5. (Powerful is) the hymn that was repeated by the son of Ghoshâ,¹ and by Bhṛigu, and with which, hymn the Angirasas adore you : may the sage (Kâkslii-vat), desirous (of food), obtain it abundantly.

6. Hear the song of the stumbling (blind man),² for verily, As'wins, I glorify you, recovering my eyes (through you), who are protectors of good works.

7. You have been givers of great riches ; you have again caused them to disappear ; do you, who are donors of dwellings, become our preservers ; protect us from the felonious robber.

8. Deliver us not, As'wins, to our enemies ; never may our cows, who nourish us with their udders, stray from our houses, separated from their calves.

9. Those who adore you obtain (wealth) for the support of their friends : direct us to opulence, bestowing food ; direct us to food, associated with kine.

10. I have obtained, without horses, the car of the food-bestowing As'wins, and expect (to gain) by it much (wealth).

11. This (is he who has obtained thee), wealth-bearing (car) : augment (my prosperity) ; may the delightful car bear the Soma beverage of men (to the As'wins).

12. Now am I disdainful of sleep, and of the rich man who benefits not others, for both (the morning sleep and the selfish rich man) quickly perish.

ANUVAKA XVIII.

SUKTA I. (CXXI)

THE deities are Indra, or the Vis'wadevas; the Rishi is Kakshiyat, the metre Trishtubh.

WHEN will Indra, the protector of men, and granter of riches, listen to the praises thus (recited) of the Angirasas, who are devoted to the gods? When he perceives the ministers of the master of the mansion, and is to be the object of worship in the sacrifice, he greatly exults.

2. He verily upholds the heaven: he, the brilliant, the leader of the (stolen) herd, pours forth the flowing (water), for the sake of food: the mighty Indra manifests himself after his own daughter,¹ (the dawn); he made the female of the horse unnaturally the mother of the cow.²

3. May he, illuminating the purple (dawn), listen to the invocation (addressed to him) of old, daily bestowing wealth upon the race of Angiras: he has sharpened his fatal shaft; he has supported the heaven for the good of men, of quadrupeds, and bipeds.

4. In the exhilaration of this Soma juice, you have restored the celebrated herd of cattle, hidden (in the cave), for the sake of sacrifice, (to the Angirasas): when, Indra, the three fold crest³ engages in combat, he opens the doors of the tyrannical descendants of Manu;⁴—

5. When your parents, (heaven and earth), the

² Indra, in sport, is said to have made a mare bring forth a calf.

³ Elevated as a triple crest in the three worlds.

⁴ Pani, the stealer of the cattle.

protectors (of the world), brought the nutritious and invigorating oblation to thee, who art quick in act, and when they offered thee the pure and precious milk of the milch-cow.¹

6. Now is Indra manifested; may he, the overcomer (of his foes), grant us happiness, he, who shines brightly, like the sun of this dawn: may the excellent Soma, being sprinkled upon the place of sacrifice with a ladle, (exhilarate us), by whom, presenting the oblations we had prepared, it was imbibed.

7. When the bright-edged hatchet² is ready [for its work, the directing priest is able to have the victim bound in the sacrifice:³ when, Indra, you shine upon the days that are appropriated to sacred rites,⁴ then (success attends) upon the man who goes with his cart (for fuel), the driver (of cattle), or the active (shepherd).⁵

1 That is, the clarified butter of the oblations, from which the nutriment of all things proceeds, for the oblation ascends to the sun, by whom rain is engendered, from which springs corn, the support of living beings; when this has been done, Indra opens the doors of the cave, and rescues the cattle, as described in the preceding verse, with which this is connected.

2 Vanadhiti, the instrument that is to be applied to the forest, to cut down the trees.

3 Pari rodhanā goh. The phrase is rather elliptical, and there is no verb; the Scholiast interprets it, pas'o rodhanāya yupe niyojanāya, pari samartho bhavati,—the priest, the adhvaryu, is competent for the attachment of the animal to the stake; or the whole passage may be differently rendered, vanadhiti being interpreted 'a collection of water' (vana), that is, a body of clouds (meghamālā); when this is ready for its office of raining, then Indra, being in the firmament, is able to remove any impediment to the shower, goh being also rendered 'water,' or 'rain.'

4 Indra being the same with the sun.

5 The phraseology is here very elliptical and obscure, the whole being merely anarvis'e pas'wishe turāya; being literally, "to the carman, to the cattle-driver, to the quick," without any verb; the Scholiast

8. Send hither thy horses, the quaffers of the exhilarating libation; overcome, warrior, the adversary plundering us of our treasure; when they express with stones, for the increase (of thy strength), the delightful, exhilarating, invigorating (juice), to be overtaken by thee, who art swifter than the wind.

9. Thou didst hurl thy iron bolt upon the quick-moving (Asura), the swift destroyer of foes, that was brought (to you) by Ribhu from heaven;¹ when thou, who art worshipped by many, striking S'ushna, for the sake of Kutsa, didst encompass him with numberless fatal (weapons).²

10. When the sun (had emerged) from the struggle with darkness, thou didst break, wielder, of the thunder-bolt, the cloud that had been his annoyance, and didst sunder the well-fastened covering in which S'ushna had enveloped him.

11. Then the vast, powerful, and immoveable earth and heaven animated thee, Indra, to glorious deeds, and thou didst hurl down into the waters, with thy mighty thunderbolt, the everywhere-spreading and destroying Vpitra.

therefore supplies the connection, abhimatam sidhyet,—his wish may succeed, and amplifies, or translates, anarvis'e, carman, as "he who goes to fetch fuel from the wood, in his cart;" pas'wishe, the driver of cattle, and turāya, the active, or quick, gopāla, or shepherd.

1 Diva ānitam Ribhūd. The Scholiast considers the latter to be the same as Twashtrā, by Twashtri. No doubt Twashtri is most usually considered to be the fabricator of Indra's thunder-bolt; but we have had it before stated that the thunder-bolt was brought to Indra by Ribhu.

2 This is most probably allegorical, if it have any meaning at all; S'ushna is "drought," and this Indra removes, for the benefit of his worshippers, by many drops of rain.

12. Indra, friend of man, mount the horses whom you cherish, who are fleet as the wind, are easily yoked, and who bear (their burden) well; you have sharpened the foe-destroying thunderbolt, the slayer of Vṛitra, which inspiring (weapon) Us'anas, the son of Kavi, gave you.¹

13. Stop, Sura,² your yellow horses, for this Etas'a,³ Indra, drags the wheel: having driven those who offer no sacrifices to the opposite bank of the ninety rivers,⁴ you compel them (to do) what is to be done.

14. Indra, bearer of the thunderbolt, preserve us from this 'poverty', that is so difficult to be destroyed, and from misfortune in war; grant us riches, conspicuous for chariots, remarkable for horses, for the sake of food, of fame, and of truth.

15. Famous for affluence, Indra, never may thy favour be withdrawn from us; may food ever sustain us; opulent Maghavan, make us possessors of cattle, and may we, most assiduous in thy adoration, be happy, together (with our families).

1 This is an unusual attribution to Us'anas, and rather incompatible with the statement of its having been the gift of Riḥhu.

2 S'ura, that is, Indra as the sun.

3 Etas'a is said to be the name of one of the horses of the sun. The word occurs in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa as that of a Rishi.

4 Nāvyānām, of navigable rivers, or of such as must be crossed by a boat.

THE RIG-VEDA SAMHITA.

SECOND ASHTAKA.

FIRST ADHYAYA.

SUKTA II. (CXXII.)

THE deities are the Vishwadevas: the Rishi is Kakshivat: the metre is Trishtubh.

PRESENT mild-tempered¹ priests, your nourishing sacrificial viands to the reward-showering Rudra. I laud him, who with his heroic (followers), as (with shafts) from a quiver, expelled (the) Asuras² from the celestial ¹ Raghu is used for laghu, signifying light, and manyu is anger: the expression means of light or little anger.

² The Text has Devas Asurasya: here as well as elsewhere in the second Ashtaka, the word Asura signifies the Devas or the deities: In the Second Ashtaka, the word Asura has been used ten times. Mr. R. C. Dutt has given the following list:—

I. Mandala,	122	Sukta,	1	Rik	Asura	Signifies Rudra.
"	126	"	2	"	"	King Bhavayadya.
"	131	"	1	"	"	Heaven.
"	151	"	4	"	"	Mitra and Varuna.
"	174	"	1	"	"	Indra.
II. Mandala,	1	"	6	"	"	Rudra.
"	27	"	10	"	"	Varuna.
"	28	"	7	"	"	Varuna.
"	30	"	4	"	"	Vrikadvar: Asura.
III. Mandala,	3	"	4	"	"	Agni.

It thus appears that the Vedic Rishis did not use the word Asura in the same sense as we do.

region: and I (laud) the Maruts, who abide between heaven and earth.¹

2. Animated by our various laudations, hasten, Morning and Night, to attend to our first invocation, as a wife (to the first call of her husband); and may the Dawn, beautiful with the lustre of the (rising) Sun and robing, like the Sun, (her) vast expanse with golden rays, (come to our early rite.)

3. May the circumambient divinity, the wearer of manifold forms,² delight us; may the wind, the shedder of rain, enhance our joy; do you Indra and Parvata sharpen our (intellects); may all the deities feel a desire to grant us profuse food.

4. I am the son of Usij; (O ye priests) invite, on my behalf, with offerings, those two (As'wins) who eat and drink (of oblations and libations) at ‡(the approach) of the world-whitening (dawn). Do ye laud the grandson of the waters as also (the divinities of the day

1 The construction of the second half of the stanza is exceedingly elliptical: it is literally, "I have praised of the expeller from heaven with arrows as if from a quiver the Maruts of heaven and earth,"—Wilson.

2 Starikna: The former, which properly means what covers or expands, occurs in lexicons as a synonyme of 'smoke' but it is said by the scholiast here to mean, the sun invested or clothed with light or destructive of foes.—Wilson.

3 Agni, here called Vasarhan, as assuming various vestures (vasa) or forms in the Garhapatya or other fires; or as destroying the vesture of the earth,—the trees; or as causing the revolution of day and night, the sense of the appellation seems rather doubtful.—Wilson.

4 Another name of Indra, as regulating the Parvas, the joints or periods of the day or year.—Wilson.

5 The trees and shrubs spring up from moisture or the waters, and fire proceeds from timber; hence Agni may be called the grandson of the waters, or it may mean son of waters.—Wilson.

and night) the mothers of the man who repeats their praise.

5. I, the son of Usij address to you (O deities) those audible laudations as Gosha¹ lauded you, (O As'wins), for the removal of her white-tinted (skin); I praise the bountiful Pushan with you and sing the munificence of Agni.

6. Mitra and Varuna, listen to these my invocations and hear those (that are) everywhere (uttered) in the chamber of Sacrifice, and may Siñdhu, the well-known bestower of riches, hear us, (fertilizing) broad fields with water.

7. I laud you, Mitra and Varuna (with praises) in which (lies) abundant food, for your gift of renowned and numerous cattle to Pajra, being pleased with Pajra, possessed of renowned and lovely chariot, and bestowing nourishment on me, come speedily unimpeded.

8. I laud the treasures of that opulent (assembly of the deities), may we, men who (are blessed with excellent descendants, partake of them together: the assembly⁵ conferring upon the Pajras abundant food has been my benefactor, and has made me the master of horses and chariots.

² Here it means the deity presiding over water and not ocean, for the water of the ocean does not fertilize lands.

³ Refers to Kakshivat, of the family of Pajra.

⁴ Muhimaghasya radhas, the riches of that, or of him, who or which is possessed of great wealth. The scholiast explains the epithet to imply Deva-Sangha, the assembly or company of the gods — Wilson.

⁵ The text has Janoyah, the man, who—— the scholiast explains it Yáscha Deva-sangha the assembly of the gods which.

9. Mitra and Varuna, the man, who wrongs, who injures you anywise, who does not prepare draughts of Soma for you, deposits consumption in his heart; he, the performer of sacrifices, who with laudatory verses spreads draughts of Soma,—

10. He, borne by quick steeds, becomes the vanquisher of all, renowned for gifts of food amongst his compeers, and moves (like) a hero, ever undaunted in all combats (even) against mighty men.

11. O ye lords of all, O ye enhancers of delight, listen to the invocation of me, a man, singing your praises and immortal and come here, that you, who extend over the sky, may be propitiated by the greatness of the (sacrificial) wealth presented to you, by (the sacrificers) possessed of chariots, and having no other protector.

12. The deities have declared, 'we confer present strength⁵ upon the sacrificer (who invokes us) to partake of the decupled libation.⁶ May all (the deities)

1 Yakshman hridaye nidhatte, he places or deposits consumption in the heart; but Yakshma is said here to mean Vyadhi, sickness in general: the expression is understood to imply something like our phrase of sick at heart, meaning, it is said, the sense of mortification experienced by those who neglect the gods on observing the blessings which recompense devotion.—Wilson.

2 Wilson has made rājana an adjective of Mandrá and has translated the expression as "Royal bestowers of delight."

3 The text has ratha vata, which Wilson has translated as "worshipper."

4 Wilson translates "who acknowledges no other protection."

5 It may also mean food.

6 Dasatāya, a decade, meaning according to Sayana, food by which vigour of the ten senses is augmented, or Soma juice offered in ten ladles.—Wilson.

in whom brilliant food and riches abound, bestow food in most excellent sacrifices.

13. We laud (the deities) since for the satisfaction of the ten (organs of sense), the (priests) carrying the twice five (ladles of) sacrificial food, proceed (to the altar). What can Ishtâshwa, (what can) Ishatarâsmî, (what can) those who are now lords of the earth, do to the leaders of men, the conquerers of their enemies?

14. May all the gods confer on us beautiful sons decorated with golden ear-rings and jewel neck-laces; may the venerable (company of the deities) be propitiated by laudations issuing (from the mouth of the worshipper). May our offerings be acceptable to them; may they reward us in both worlds.

1 A different interpretation may be given to the latter half of the stanza—"May all the gods partake of the abundant food (or Soma) at those sacrifices in which the priests are the distributors of the riches of copious libations."—Wilson.

2 The text has again dasataya which the commentator explains as the ten organs of sense.

3 The enumeration here may refer to the ladles by which the Soma juice is thrown on the fire; or to the ten articles offered in sacrifices, as honey, butter, curd, milk, water, grain, etc., offered to the fire at the As'vamedha.—Wilson.

4 According to Sâyaṇa, what can the princes who are named, or any other princes, do against those who enjoy the protection of Mitra and Varuna: the construction, however, is obscure and the names, which are said to be those of Rajas are new and unusual."—Wilson. Rev. K. M. Banerjee, holds, in his Preface to the Rig-Vêda Samhitâ that this Ishtashwa was Vistaspas, the preacher of the Zend Religion whom the Persians called Gustaspas or Kustaspas.

5 Arnas, synonym of Rupa, form: the scholiast understands it to mean 'a son' but this does not seem indispensable.—Wilson. We have however followed the scholiast.

6 Wilson has translated it as "may they be pleased with both (our praises and offerings)."

15. The four infant sons of Masarsara, the three of the victorious king Ayavasa obstruct me,¹ may your spacious and brilliant chariot, Mitra and Varuna, blaze (before them) like the sun.

SUKTA III. (CXXIII.)

THE deity is Ushas or the Dawn; the Rishi is Kakshivat, the metre is Tristubh.

THE spacious chariot of the graceful² dawn has been harnessed; the immortal deities have got upon it; the adorable Ushas of variegated movements has risen from black darkness bringing health to human habitations.

2. First of the entire universe is she awake; vanquishing moving (darkness): the mighty, the giver (of light) from on high, she beholds (all things); ever youthful, ever reviving she comes first to the invocation.

3. Well-born and divine Ushas, thou art the protectress of mortals; whatever share⁴ of light thou givest to men to-day, may the radiant Savitri be inclined (to

1 No account is given of these two kings by the commentator.

2 Dakshindyāh, of the clever one: there is no substantive; the appellative means, according to Sáyana, she who is skilled in her own function, Swaryāpāra Kusalā.—Wilson.

3 Jayantivājam: Sáyana explains Vdja as moving, motive; the darkness that goes away with the dawn; or in its more usual meaning of 'food' it may mean 'producing food' as the reward of the morning sacrifice.—Wilson.

4 Bhāgam, a share: the comment supplies prakāshaya, of light; but he admits that it may mean a share of the offerings to the gods; for as the sacrifice is offered at dawn, the dawn may be said to be its distributress.—Wilson, confirm) the gifts and declare us free from sin on account of the sun.

4. Ahana, charged with downward bending (light), goes daily from house to house ; always spreading light, and desirous of enjoying, she comes and accepts the best portions of (the sacrificial) treasures.

5. Truthful Ushas, thou art the sister of Bhaga, the sister of Varuṇa ; be thou hymned first (of the gods) ; then let the worker of iniquity³ come ; through thy aid we shall defeat him with our chariot.

6. Let truthful words be uttered ; let wisdom flourish ; let blazing fires be lighted up ; so that the many radiant Ushas may make manifest the desirable treasure hidden by the darkness.

7. The two-fold day⁵ proceeds unseparated ; one (part going) forward, one back-ward ; one of these two alternating (periods) encompasses the concealment (of things) ; the Dawn illumines them with her radiant chariot.

8. The same to-day, the same to-morrow, the irreproachable (Dawns) precede the distant course of Varuṇa by thirty Yojanas⁶ and each successively, revolve in its appointed) office.

1 The text has Suryôya, literally, on account of the sun. The commentator has supplied the amplification and Wilson has translated the passage as "so that the sun may come to our sacrificial hall."

2 Yâska mentions Ahanâ as one of the synonyms of Ushas.

3 The text has agha : it may either mean grief or iniquity.

4 The text has Purandhis which means prajñâ, wisdom ; the scholiast also explains it as "works of wisdom" which rendering Wilson has adopted.

5 Day and night.

6 Varuna is here identified with the sun, as the remover of darkness, who, according to the Scholiast, revolves daily round Mount Meru, the centre of the earth, performing a diurnal circuit of 5,059 yojanas ;

9. Ushas knows¹ the declination of the first (part) of the day and is born white-shining out of darkness ; mixed with the radiance of the sun she does not impair it but every day aids embellishment (to his lustre).

10. Goddess, manifest in person, like a maiden, thou goest to the resplendent and munificent (sun) ; and like a youthful bride (before her husband) thou uncoverest, smiling, thy bosom in his presence.

11. Radiant like unto (a bride having her person) rubbed by her mother thou willingly displayest thy person to the view. Do thou, good Ushas, remove the investing (darkness), for other dawns than thou do not disperse it.

12. Possessor of horses, possessed of cows, existing through all time, vying with the rays of the sun (in the dawn being always 30 yojanas in advance of his rising, or first appearance from behind the mountain in the east. Sāyana adds, that the period called dawn is reckoned from the disappearance of the stars to the appearance of the sun, 'and is measured, as to the duration, by 21 ghatikas and 26 paras. Taking the ghatika at its lowest valuation of half a muhurta, or 24 minutes, and a para as 130th of a ghatika, we should have in a day of 60 ghatikas more than one-third allotted to the dawn, which is evidently erroneous. Again, if the sun travels 5,059 yojanas in 24 hours, he travels at the rate of about 84 yojanas in one ghatika ; and as the dawn is only 30 yojanas, in advance it is in time less than half a ghatika before the sun ; a more correct estimate than the 22 ghatikas of the commentary. There is some inaccuracy, therefore, in the statement. According to the Purānas, the sun travels, in a day of 30 muhurtas, or 60 ghatikas, 9,45,00,000 yojanas or 15 75,000 yojanas in 1 ghatika. The same authorities assign 1 ghatika to the Sandhyā, the morning twilight or dawn, and 3 muhurtas, or 2 hours 24 minutes, to the Prātar, or early morning. The reckoning of the sun's daily journey, cited by Sāyana, perhaps from some text of the Védas is much nearer the truth than that of the Puranas, being something more than 20,000 miles, and being in fact the equatorial circumference of the earth.—Bentley, Hindu Astronomy, p. 185.

1 The text has jānati : it may either mean 'know' or 'announce.'

dissipating darkness, auspicious Dawns, sending down benefits (on mankind), pass away and again return.

13. Co-operating with the rays of the true (sun); confer on us auspicious wisdom¹; earnestly invoked by us, to-day, disperse, Ushas, (the darkness) that wealth may come upon us, (already) rich (in sacrificial wealth).

SUKTA IV. (CXXIV.)

THE deity, Rishi, and metre are the same.

WHEN the (sacred) fire is lighted, Ushas sheds profuse light, removing (the darkness), like the rising sun; may the divine Savitri confer on us for our use² wealth of both bipeds and quadrupeds.

2. Without obstructing³ divine rites, although destroying the ages of mankind, the Dawn shines the similitude of the (mornings) that have passed, or that are to be for ever, the first of those that are to come.

3. This Ushas is the daughter of the celestial region; clothed in light she is seen in the east: she travels steadily along the path of the sun, as if knowing his intention, and injures not the quarters (of the horizon.)

4. She is seen near at hand, (radiant) as the breast

¹ The text has bhadra which literally means 'auspicious: The Scholiast supplies the ellipsis by either "wisdom or deed.

² Ityai, lit, for going; according to Sayana, for carrying on our own affairs.

³ Aminati ahinsanti, not injuring, not opposing, not unsuited to being, in fact, the fit season for their performance — Vilśn.

of the illuminator¹ (the sun), and, like Nodhas,² has displayed many pleasing (objects); like a matron³ she awakens (her) sleeping (children), and of all (females who are) stirring betimes, she, the most unvarying, repeatedly appears.

5. Born in the eastern quarter of the spacious firmament, she awakens the quarters;⁴ placed on the lap of both parents (heaven and earth), filling them (with radiance), she enjoys vast and wide-spread renown.

6. Verily, she, the wide-expanded Ushas, neglects not (to give) the joy of sight to those of her own, or of a different nature;⁵ visible in her faultless person and brightly shining she passes not by the little or the great.⁶

1 Sundhyuro na vakshas: according to the Scholiast, S'undhyu is a name of the sun, and the expression is to be understood as implying the collective solar rays. Sundhyu also means a water bird of a white colour, to whose white plumage the morning light may be compared. S'undhyuvah in the plur. may also mean waters.—Nir. 4, 16.

2 In the same manner as the Rishi Nodhas displays his wishes by his prayers and praises, so the dawn puts forth the light that is accessible to all the world: we have no further notice of Nodhas than that he was a Rishi.

3 Admasad: adma means either food or a dwelling; sad, who goes or abides; the mistress of the house literally, or one who has to cook the food of her family; and in either case, who rises with the dawn and wakes up the sleepers of the household.

4 The text has Gavam Ketum: it may either mean awakening of the quarters, or a banner of rays of light: Wilson has followed the latter interpretation of the Scholiast.

5 Ajamim na parivrinakti jamim: jami is explained by the Scholiast, sajatiya, of the same species, that is to say, divine beings, the gods; ajami then means, not of the same species; vijatiya, that is, mankind.

6 According to the commentator she lights up all things, small and great, from an atom to a mountain.

7. She goes to the west, as (a woman who has) no brother (repairs) to her male relatives;¹ and like one ascending the hall (of justice) for the recovery of property, she mounts in the sky to claim her lustre); and like a wife seeking her husband, Usha puts on a proper dress, smiling, as it were, to display her charming teeth.

8. The sister (Night) has prepared a birth-place for her elder sister (Day), and having made it known to her goes away; Ushas, dissipating the darkness with the rays of the sun, lights up the world like a mass of lightnings.

9. Of all these sisters who have gone before, a successor daily follows the one that has preceded. So may new dawns, like the old, bringing fortunate days, shine upon us blessed with affluence.

10. Awaken, affluent Ushas, those who offer sacred offerings; let the (niggard) traders, reluctant to wake (for such a purpose), sleep on. Opulent Ushas, carry wealth to the liberal (worshipper); Speaker of truth, who art the waster away (of living creatures), arise, bearing wealth to him who lauds thee.

¹ Abhrateva punsa eti pratichi, as a damsel who has no brother, averted from her own abiding-place, goes to, or relies upon, her male relatives, punsah, for support; or it may mean, according to Sâyana, that she is in such case to offer the funeral cakes to her progenitors: pratichi, with face averted, as applicable to Ushas, means looking or going to the west.

² Gartârug iva sanaye dhanânâm, like one who ascends (aruh, to mount) a house (garta-griha) for the gift or receipt of riches, the explanation and the application to the dawn are given by Sâyana, conformably to the Nirukta, 3. 5: the commentary which, however, explains Garta to be a stool or table on which dice are thrown, and alludes not very intelligibly to a practice in the South, in which a childless widow seeks to obtain support from her husband's relatives by repairing to a gambling-house: the passage is cited by Professor Muller—Preface, 2nd vol. of the Rig-veda, p. xvi.

11. This youthful Ushas approaches from the east; she harnesses her team of purple steeds;¹ surely she will dissipate darkness, a manifest sign (of day) in the sky: the sacred fire is kindled in every house.

12. At thy advent (Ushas), the various birds rise up from their nests, and men, seeking food, (quit their homes). Thou bringest, divine (Ushas), profuse wealth to the liberal mortal, who is present in the (sacrificial) chamber.

13. Ushasas, worthy of laudation, be glorified by this (my) hymn: desiring (our advancement) increase our prosperity; and may we get, goddess, through, your favour, wealth, a hundred and a thousand fold.

SUKTA V. (CXXV.)

THE hymn is supposed to be recited by Kakshivat, in acknowledgment of the liberality of Raja Swanaya² whose gift therefore is the deity of the hymn or the object of address; Kakshivat is the Rishi: the metre of the 4th and 5th stanzas is Jagati; that of the rest, Trishtubh.

HAVING come in the early morning, (Swanaya) presents jewels, knowing it (to be worthy of acceptance); and having (therefore) accepted it, Kakshivat places it (near his father), wherewith the parent of excellent sons, maintaining his progeny, passes his life in the enjoyment of affluence.

¹ The text has gavâm: The scholiast explains it as horses: Wilson has translated it literally as oxen.

² The legend which is cited by Sdyana, and which is told to the like purport in the Niti-manjari, relates that Kakshivat, having finished,

2. May he (the king) be rich in kine, in gold, in horses; may Indra grant profuse food to him who delays thee, returning home in the early morning, by rich gifts, as (a hunter arrests the) wandering (animal) by his snares.

3. Desirous of beholding¹ the performer of a sacrifice who has done a good deed I have come to-day in a prosperous car; refresh yourself with the effused juice of the exhilarating (Soma) creeper; advance the prosperity, with sweet and truthful words, of him who has many heroic sons.

4. The profusely-yielding and joy-conferring kine distil (their milk) for the celebration of the (Soma) sacrifice, and for him who has undertaken its celebration: the nutritious streams of butter converge from every quarter towards him, who both propitiates (his progenitors), and benefits (mankind).²

his course of study, and taken leave of his preceptor, was journeying homewards, when night came on, and he fell asleep by the road-side: early in the morning, Raja Swanaya, the son of Bhavyayarya, attended by his retinue, came to the spot, and disturbed the Brahman's slumbers: upon his starting up, the Raja accosted him with great cordiality, and being struck by his personal appearance, determined, if he was of suitable rank and birth, to give him his daughters in marriage. After ascertaining his fitness, he took Kakshivat home with him, and there married him to his ten daughters, presenting him at the same time with, a hundred nishkas of gold, a hundred horses, a hundred bulls, one thousand and sixty cows, and eleven chariots, one for each of his wives and one for himself, each drawn by four horses. With these presents Kakshivat returned home, and placed them at the disposal of his father, Dirghatamas, reciting this hymn in praise of the munificence of Swanaya.

¹ This and the subsequent verses are supposed to have been recited by Dirghatamas, the father of Kakshivat.

² The text has Ishteh putram, literally the son of sacrifice; but the Scholiast explains putram, upon the authority of Yaksha, to signify purutrataram, the much protecting, or simply Kartaram, performer.—Wilson.

5. He, who propitiates the deities, goes amongst the deities and sits at ease, upon the summit of the celestial region; to him the flowing waters bear their essence to him this fertile (earth)¹ ever yields abundance.

6. These variegated things² are desired for those who give sacrificial presents; the sun shines in heaven for the giver of sacrificial presents; the givers of sacrificial presents attain to immortal regions; the givers of sacrificial presents acquire longevity.

7. May those, who propitiate (the deities), never commit degrading sin; may those, who laud the deities and observe holy vows, never suffer decay; may sin visit any other save those who laud the deities; may sorrow visit those who do not propitiate the deities.

Prinayantam papurin-cha are both attributives of an agent, and therefore the agent who gives pleasure, or who gives repletion or satisfaction: the Scholiast applies the first to the Pitris, or progenitors, pitran prinayantam; the second to all living beings, praninah sarvada prinayantam purusham.

1 The text has Iyam dakshinâ: Sayana explains it as earth capable to bear crops.

2 The text has Imani Chitrâ literally these wonders; the scholiast says that these are personal decorations, garlands, sandal, jewels, pearls, etc.

3 The text has dakshina; Wilson has translated it as pious donation; it however means the money-present made to Brahmanas at the end of a sacrifice.

SŪKTA VI. (CXXVI).

OF the first five verses, the Rishi is Kakshivat, and as they are in commendation of the Rájá Bhavavya, he is considered to be in the place of the deity; the sixth stanza is ascribed to the Raja and the seventh to his wife Lomasha, the daughter of Brihaspati. The first five stanzas are in the Trishtubh metre; that of the two last is Anushtubh.

I REPEAT with a (willing) mind, the unreluctant praises of Bhavya,¹ dwelling on the banks of the Sindhu;² a prince of matchless (power), desirous of renown, who has enabled me to celebrate a thousand sacrifices.

2. From which generous king, praying for (my acceptance), I, Kakshivat, accepted, without hesitation, a hundred nikshas,³ a century of powerful horses, and a hundred bulls, by which he has spread his imperishable fame through heaven.

3. Ten chariots, given by Swanaya, drawn by bay horses and carrying my wives, came near me; and a thousand and sixty cows followed; accepting them, Kakshivat, the next day, delivered them to his father.

4. The forty bay horses, harnessed to the chariots, led the procession before the thousand cows; collecting grass (and other articles of food), the followers of Kakshivat rubbed down the ever-moving horses with their temporal juice, trickling down, and decorated with golden trappings.

5. I have accepted a previous grant (kinsmen), for

1 Bhavya here refers to Swanaya, his son.

2 The text has Sindhan adhi, literally, upon the Sindhu; it may mean either the river Indus or the Sea-shore.

3 A gold coin to the value of 108 Suvarnas.

you :¹ three and eight harnessed chariots and cattle of incalculable value,² may the kindred Pajrâs, like well-disposed relations,³ be desirous of acquiring fame by their abundant offerings.⁴

6. She,⁵ who, when her desires are assented to, clings as tenaciously as a female weasel and who is ripe for enjoyment, affords me a hundred delight.

7. Approach me, (husband); consider me not immature; I am covered with down like a ewe of the Gandhârins.⁷

1 The scholiast cannot make out the gist of the text, for as indicated in the previous hymn, all the gifts were placed at the disposal of his father by Kakshivat; it is further said that ten chariots carried his wives who could not be given away. Therefore a different sense is intended in this hymn.

2 Aridhuyaso gâh is explained aribhir—iswarair dharaniya to be held or attained by rich men i e vahumulyah of great price.—Wilson.

3 Visyâ ivâ Vrah, is a rather doubtful phrase: the scholiast explains it, like troops of people having mutual affection.

4 The text has having carts or barrows, anaswantah; the term anas, implying cart or trunk, in which the Soma plants are brought to the place where the sacrifice is to be offered.—Wilson.

5 This is said by Bhavya to his wife Lomasa.

6 Kâsika which is explained Sutavatsâ Nakulî, the female neul of Viverra, having brought forth young.

7 This is Lomasa's reply; but the verse, as well as the preceding is brought in very abruptly and has no connection with what precedes; it is also in a different metre and is probably a fragment of some old popular song: another meaning is also assigned to Gandhari —Wilson.

ANUVA'KA XIX.

SUKTA I. (CXXVII.)

THE hymn is addressed to Agni; the Rishi is called Paruchchhepa, the son of Divodāsa; the metre is Atyashṭi.¹

I VENERATE Agni, the invoker (of the deities), the munificent, the giver of dwellings, the son of strength; he, who knows all that exists, like a sage who is endowed with knowledge :² who, the divine regenerator.

1 According to Mr. Colebrooke (Sanscrit and Prākṛit Prosody, Misc Essays, II. 162), the Atyashṭi metre is a stanza of four lines, containing 68 syllables, each arranged in different feet, constituting varieties of the class; and the Scholiast quotes the chhandas or metrical system of the Vedas, for a graduated series of metres, beginning with Utkṛiti, containing 104 syllables, and descending by a diminution of four through eight classes to Atyashṭi, the ninth, which gives it the same number. In this hymn and the twelve following, however, the stanza is arranged in three lines, and the number of syllables varies from 57 to 70, being in most of the lines 65, 66, 67 : the distribution of the feet does not seem to follow any definite rule.

2 It is a peculiarity of this and the twelve succeeding Suktas, to reiterate a leading word which occurs the third or fourth from the end of the first line, and sometimes also of the third, and to repeat it as the last word of the line; thus, we have here sunum sahaso Jātavedasam, vipram na Jātavedasam; this is little else than a kind of verbal alliterative Jingle, but the Scholiast thinks it necessary to assign to the repeated word a distinct signification, agreeably indeed to the rule that prevails in respect to the various species of alliteration, termed by writers on Alankāra, or ornamental composition, Yamaka; illustrated by several celebrated writings, especially by the Nalodaya, attributed to Kalidasa, translated by the late Rev. Mr. Yates, who has also published a learned dissertation on the subject in the Bengal Asiatic Researches, vol. XIX.: the employment of this artifice, and in a still greater degree the complex construction of the stanza, render the whole series of the Paruchchhepa hymns exceedingly obscure and unintelligible: it is not pretended that their translation is free from exception, but the text has been adhered to as nearly as possible with the aid of the Scholiast, of sacrifices, through his lofty and reverential devotion, covets for the deities the blaze of the liquified butter which is offered in oblation with his flames.

2. O intelligent Agni of white flames, we, sacrificers invoke thee, who art most worthy of adoration, and the eldest of the Angirasas, with most acceptable prayers recited by the priests——thee, who, like the all-traverser (sun) art the invoker (of the deities on behalf) of men, and whom, the bright haired showerer (of blessings), many people approaching propitiate for the attainment of felicity.

3. Indeed, that Agni, far shining with brilliant vigour, is the destroyer of enemies, like a hatchet that cuts down trees; whatever is most solid and stable dissolves like water at his contact: unsparing he sports (amidst enemies), nor desists (from their destruction), like an archer who retreats not (from battle.)

4. They are making substantial (offerings of clarified butter) to him (Agni) according to the Mantram, as (they give riches) to a sage, and by resplendent means he grants us (grace) for our preservation: (the sacrificer) makes (gifts) to Agni for preservation: he pervades the many (offerings) and consumes them (as rapidly as (he consumes) forests: he matures the standing corn by his potency: he destroys all stationary things by his potency.¹

5. We place near the altar the (sacrificial) food of him who is more conspicuous by night than by day, to him who has no vigorous life through the day, hence

¹ The text has Sthirani which literally means stationary things. The Scholiast has also explained the term as pāpāni, sins or amitrani, enemies his (sacrificial) food finds prompt acceptance, like a strong and delightful residence (given by a father) to a son; discriminating between the devout and the undevout, (Agni) protects them (both), eating sacrificial offerings (they i.e., fires) are immortal.

6. That (fire) roars profusely like the winds; he is to be adored on most sacred altars sanctified with sacred rites: he is to be adored (for victory) over hosts (of enemies); he, the receiver (of oblations), the manifest of the sacrifice; he, who is worthy of adoration devours the oblations; hence all men, for their behoof, pursue the path of Agni, who affords pleasure (to his sacrificers), being pleased (himself) in like manner as men follow the path (that leads) to happiness.

7. The descendants of Bhrigu, celebrating him (Agni) in both his forms, glorifying him, and paying him homage, proclaim his praises: the descendants of Bhrigu,² rubbing (the sticks to kindle flame) for the oblation. For the radiant Agni, who is the guardian of all these treasures has power (to distribute them). He, the receiver of sacrifices, partakes to satiety of the agreeable (offerings); intelligent (as he is) he gives share (to other deities.)

8. We invoke thee, the protector of all people, the same alike to all, the preserver of the house, to enjoy (the oblation): thee who art the wafter of our infallible

1 The text has dwitâ gad im kistâsah celebrating him as two-fold. The Scholiast explains both these either as recognised in both the S'ruti and Smriti, religion and law; or as the giver of happiness both in this world and the next; or as manifold in the âkavanîyâ and other fires, two being put for many.

2 The Scholiast would explain Bhṛigavaḥ in this second place, the roasters' bhrastarah from bhraj (to fry) or consumers, either of the oblation, or of iniquity—Wilson.

prayer; to enjoy (the oblation) we invoke thee, who art the guest of men, to whom all these immortals apply for their sustenance, as (a son) to a father; thee to whom the priests offer oblations amongst the deities.

9. Thou Agni, the destroyer (of enemies) by thy strength, the possessor of great splendour, art born for the sake of sacrificing to the deities, as riches (are generated) for the sake of sacrificing to the deities indeed, thy exhilaration is highly strength-giving, thy sacrifice is most productive of renown; hence, undecaying Agni, (sacrificers) wait upon thee, like emissaries (upon a prince, upon thee) who preservest (thy votaries) from decay.¹

10. May your laudation, (O ye priests), gratify Agni, who is worthy of laudation, who is capable of vanquishing the enemies, who is awakened at the dawn; to Agni, as if to a giver of cattle, since the presenter of the oblation repairs assiduously to every altar. The invoking priest, well-skilled in (pious) praise, lauds him as the first of the deities, as a herald (recites the praise) of rich men.

11. Agni, do thou, becoming visible, close to us, and partaking with benignant intent of (the sacrificial) food along with the gods, bestow upon us abundant riches with benignant intent. O mighty Agni, confer on us profuse food, so that we may behold and enjoy (this earth); and grant greatness with excellent progeny to those who laud thee, O thou of profuse food, destroyer of enemies, like a fierce (giant) in strength.

¹ Ajara, undecaying; but here explained, not causing decay: or else one who does not praise others; one to whom alone praise is due.—Wilson.

SUKTA II. (CXXVIII.)

THE deity, Rishi and metre are the same as in the preceding Sukta.

THIS Agni, the invoker of the deities, the assiduous offerer of sacrifices, is generated of man (for the fulfilment of the) duty of those who desire (the fruit of) pious rites, as well as for (the discharge of) his own duty; he, active in all matters, is wealth to him who desires his friendship and to (him who) seeks for food; the unobstructed offerer of oblations, he sits down surrounded (by ministering priests) on the spot which contains the essence of the earth upon the foot-mark of Ilâ.¹

2. We propitiate the instrument of sacrifice by

1 Nishadâd-ilaspade parivâta ilaspade: the first term is interpreted by Sâyana, bhūmyâh pade, on a spot or site of ground, on the earth, to which the epithet dharimani, occurring in the first stanza, is said to apply, meaning that spot which contains the essence of the earth, that is to say, the altar; for different texts affirm the altar to be not only the essence of the earth, but the whole earth; as, vedim âhuk paramantam prithivyâh 'they call the altar the utmost end of the earth;' and again, etavati vai prithivîr yâvatî vederiti, so much, verily, as is the earth so much is the altar.' In the repetition, Ilâ, according to the Scholiast, refers to Ila, the daughter of Manu (see vol. i. p. 87), and pada to the spot where in the form of a cow. gorupâ, she placed her feet, pâdanyâsa pradese, alluding to the legendary account of Manu's daughter being the first institutor of sacrificial rites, and referring to some mantra or prayer addressed to her: I'dâ vai Mânavi yajnânuâ-sinyâsâ itîdâyâ pade ghritavati swâhâ. I'dâ, the daughter of Manu, was the institutor of sacrifice, glory to the butter charged foot-mark of I'dâ.

sacrificial undertakings by reverential salutation and by oblations of clarified butter, by oblations (offered) to the deities; and he accepts our offerings, and through his benignity quits not (the rite until its close), the divinity whom the wind brought from afar for the service of Manu: (may he come) from afar to our sacrifice.²

3. Agni, who is ever to be hymned, the giver of food, the showerer (of benefits), comes directly (upon our invocation), in approach to (the altar of) earth, loud-sounding, and vigorous: the rapid and divine (Agni, incited by praise, manifests himself a hundred-fold by his flames; Agni living in high places (comes quickly) to pious rites.

4. That Agni of pious deeds, the priest of the family, thinks, in every house, of the imperishable sacrifice; he knows sacrifice by its celebration: for through such pious rite, he, the bestower of (fit) rewards, accepts all the offered oblations for (the behoof of) the sacrifice; whence he has become as a guest, fed abundantly with butter; the fire being increased, the offerer of oblations comes by virtuous fruits.

5. Inasmuch as (all men) offer in holy rite (food) for his satisfaction in the blazing (flames) of Agni, like (the grains that) are to be enjoyed by the winds, and like the viands that are to be given to him who solicits them: the sacrificer presents gifts to him proportionate

1 The text has Yajnyasya mārgena.—literally, by the path of sacrifice, which Wilson has adopted. The Scholiast explains it as Yajnānusthānena i. e. sacrificial undertakings.

2 Bhāh parāvata-abhāsīt, shone or made to shine; according to Sāyana, placed suitably upon earth, having been brought from the distant sun; atiduram gatavata ādityād abhāsīt auchityena bhumaṁ sthapitavan.—Wilson.

to his opulence : and he preserves us, when oppressed (by sin), from wickedness, from overpowering malevolence and sin.

6. The universal, great and imperious (Agni) holds riches in his right hand like the sun :¹ he loosens his grasp (in favour of his worshipper) although he relaxes not from his desire of the (sacrificial) food. Indeed Agni, thou carriest the oblation of every one of the deities who desires it ; Agni grants blessings to every pious (worshipper), and opens for him the gates (of heaven).

7. He is of good service in human infirmity through the means of sacrifices : he is the protector of, and beloved unto, (people) in sacrifice, like a victorious prince ; he comes for the oblations of men placed upon the altars ; he preserves us from the malignity of Varuna ; from the malignity of the powerful deity (of sin.)²

8. They (the priests) laud Agni, the invoker, the lord of riches, the beloved and the intelligent, and they have recourse to him absolutely ; they have recourse to him as the bearer of oblations : to him who is the life (of all living beings), who knows all things, the offerer of oblations, the object of worship, the sage : the sacred (priest),

1 Tarinir na, as explained by the Scholiast tarakah surya-ira, like him who conveys across (the sea of life or the world), i. e. the sun : or the epithet may be applied to Agni, when na in the negative sense is attached to the following verb, sirathat, loosened. let go, the conveyer (across the world) has not let go, has not cast off or deserted his worshipper.

2 The expressions are rather ambiguous, trāsate Varunasya dhurtter azaho devasya dhurtteh, and the commentator seems to prefer rendering them 'preserves us from the malevolence of the obstructor of religious rites' (Varuna being explained by Vāraṇa, the impeder)—from the malevolence of the mighty deity presiding over sin, pāpa devatā desirous of affluence, repeat (his praises) to obtain his protection ; desirous of affluence they repeat (the praises) in their hymns.

SUKTA III. (CXXIX.)

THE deity is Indra ; the Rishi and metre are the same.

INDRA, frequenter of sacrifices, thou speedily enablest him to attain his desires, to whom thou reparaest in thy car to receive the oblation ; and for whom, as he is mature (in understanding) and devout, thou, who art without fault, entertainest regard ; O thou, who art without fault, hymned by us who are intelligent amongst the intelligent, thou speedily acceptest our offerings and laudations.

2. Hear our invocation Indra : thou, who in diverse battles (associated) with the Maruts,¹ art animated through their encouragement : associated with Maruts thou art, in leading battles, capable with pride, of destroying (thy enemies) ; with heroes thou thyself enjoyest the (pleasures of battle) ; when lauded by the pious (priests) thou givest food ; the priests, capable of welcoming, celebrate (Indra) as swift-moving and giver of food, like a fleet courser (eager for forage.)

3. Thou, the destroyer (of enemies), piercest every rain-confining skin ; thou overtakest, hero, every flying (mortal cloud) and abandonest (it) when exhausted (of its water) ;¹ Indra, we shall laud this deed of thine to thee, to heaven, to the illustrious Rudra,² to Mitra and Varuna, the benefactors of mankind.

4. (O priests), we desire Indra to be present at our sacrifice ; he is our friend, the frequenter of all (sacrifices), the subduer of enemies, our help-mate, the subduer of those who obstruct sacrifices, and associated (with the Maruts) ; do thou, Indra, guard our holy rite for our preservation, for in whatsoever contests (thou mayst engage) no enemy, whom thou opposest, prevails against thee ; thou prevailest over every enemy whom (thou opposest).

5. Humble the adversary of every one (thy worshipper), fierce (Indra), by thy aids, like radiant paths (to glory), by thy powerful aids, guide us here, as thou hast our fore-fathers, for thou art honored (by all). Thou (Indra), who art the sustainer (of the world, removest all (the sins) of man : present at our sacrifice, thou, the bearer (of good things).

6. May I be competent to utter (praise) for the ever-increasing Moon,³ who, abounding with food, comes to our rite as the deity (Indra) invoked, the destroyer of Rákshasas at each venerable (rite). May he, of

¹ As in the other stanzas of this hymn, the language of this is obscure ; we have yávir aruram martyam, parivrinákshi martyam, 'thou mixest with the departing mortal, thou abandonest the mortal ;' the Scholiast explains the first martyam by 'cloud,' the skin that contains the rain, vrishanam, twacham, trying to escape like an enemy, from the hero Sura ; the second martyam he also renders cloud, but it is after it has parted with its water, like an enemy who has been killed, and whom the victor abandons.

² Rudráya swayas'ase to Rudra, i. e., Agni, possessed of his own fame, swakíya-yaso-yuktáya agnaye.

³ The text has Indra which the Scholiast has translated as the Moon. Both Wilson and Langlois have translated it as Soma libation, his own accord, drive with means of destruction the malevolence of him who reviles us, let the thief fall downwards (and die), like a little (water) running down a declivity.

7. We laud thee, (Indra), with hymns describing thy glory. We enjoy, O highly rich (Indra), the wealth that gives vigour, that is agreeable, that is durable and consisting of beautiful sons, and servants. Mây we (ever) be possessed of (abundant) food, through the praises of thee, whom it is difficult adequately to honour; may we attain the adorable (Indra) by true and earnest invocations, (offering sacrificial food).

8. Indra is powerful in the discomfiture¹ of the malevolent by his self-glorifying aids, (granted) unto you and unto us; (he is) the tearer of the malevolent (to pieces); the impetuous army, that was sent against us by devouring (enemies) to destroy us, has been itself destroyed, it will not reach us, it will not do us harm.

9. Do thou, Indra, come to us with profuse riches by a path free from evil and shorn of Rákshasas, be with us when afar;² be with us when nigh; protect us, whether afar or nigh, with objects necessary for celebrating sacrifices, protect us always with articles necessary for celebrating sacrifices.

10. Do thou, Indra, (sustain us) with wealth that transports (man beyond calamity); for (enhanced) greatness accrues to thee, however mighty, (from our thanks) for (thy) protection, as it does to Mitra, for his powerful protection,¹ most powerful and immortal (Indra), our defender and preserver, (ascend) some chariot (and come hither); devourer (of enemies), repel any one assailing us; any one assailing us, devourer² (of foes).

¹ This discomfiture may be, according to the Scholiast, either in a sacrifice.

² The text has Paraka which the commentator explains as distant country which is Swarga i. e. Indra comes from the distant Swarga. It is very probable that Swarga was the name of a country—perhaps Mongolia, at least a portion of the country North of the Himalaya.

11. Beautifully lauded Indra, preserve us from suffering; for thou art indeed always the chastiser of the malevolent. Thou being gratified (with our laudation) subdue the obstructers of sacrifices; thou art the destroyer of the sinful Rákshasas and the protector of a pious (worshipper) such as I am; for refuge (of all men)³ the progenitor has begotten thee, (for this purpose) has begotten thee, refuge (of all men), the destroyer of the Rákshasas.

SUKTA IV. (CXXX)

THE deity, Rishi and metre are the same; in the last stanza the metre is changed to Trishtubh.

COME to us, Indra, from afar;⁴ not as this (fire) which is before us, (but) like the pious institutor of sacrifices,

1 Twā mahimā śākshād avase mahe mitram na avase, lit. greatness is present to thee for protection as to mitra for great protection; or mitra may be rendered friend,' as praises animate a friend with great attachment, taṁ sakhāyam yathā mahatyai prītaya sambhajante.—Wilson.

2 In both places the term is Adriṇas, voc. of Adriṇat, which usually means wielder of the thunderbolt (adri); but !Sayana here derives it from ad, to eat, and explains it s'atrunām atis'ayena bhakshaka, the eater of enemies: this is upon the authority of Yaska —Nir, iv. 4.—Wilson.

3 Twā janita Ījanad-vaso; Vasu may be used as a name of Indra; but as an attributive it implies one who is the abode of all, sarveshām nivāsabhutah, according to the Scholiast. By Ījanita, genitor, Sayana understands the first maker of the universe, the supreme being, sarvasya A'dikarṭta Parameswarah —Wilson.

4 From distant Swarga.

or like the royal lord of the constellations (when going to his setting;¹ carrying oblations we, along with (the priests), invoke thee to accept the effused (juices) as sons (invite) a father to partake of food; (we invoke) thee, who art most entitled to reverence, to (accept of) the sacrificial viands.

2. Drink, Indra, the Soma Juice, that has been expressed by the stones and sprinkled with the sacred grass, as a thirsty ox or a thirsty man hastens to a well.² (Drink) for thy exhilaration, for thy invigoration, for thy exceedingly great augmentation: let thy horses bring thee hither, as his steeds convey the sun, as they carry him (through heaven) day by day.

3. He (Indra) found the (Soma) treasure that had been brought) from *Swarga*³ and hidden like the nest-

1 The passage is obscure; there is no verbal copulative; it runs, vidathaniva satpatir astam rajeva satpatih: the first part is explained by Sayana the cherisher (pati quasi pālaka) of the good (satām), or of those who are present, the priests, or of the extant (satām) rewards of holy rites: that is, either as the Yajamāna, or in the last place, Agni, comes to or exhibits the knowledge of what is to be performed vidathāni anushtheyojnānāni; or is present in the apartments of sacrifice, vidathāni yajna-grihāni. In the reiteration of the phrase, satpati is rendered the lord of the constellations, the moon, nakshatranām patis-chandramān; who comes to his own abode at the time of setting, sa yathā swa dhamasthānam agachchhati; and in like manner Indra is invited to come to the sacrifice—Wilson.

2 Avatam na vansagas-tatrishano na vansagah: in the repetition, vansaga is explained vananiyagamana, sighra-gāmi, purushah, a man going swiftly; but it is probably a mere reiteration, like a thirsty ox to a well—like an ox.—Wilson.

3 The Soma plant is generally brought from mountainous tracts. According to the *Taittiriya*s, it was brought from Swarga by Gayatri, whatever term may be used to translate Swarga, it is clear that it was a tract of country, and that it was mountainous too. It is also clear that Soma plant was brought from Swarga to Prithivi by the Devas, chanting the Vedas in the Gayatri Chhanda.

lings of a bird in a rock, amidst (a pile of) vast rocks enclosed by bushes); desiring to partake (of the beverage), the holder of *Vajra*¹ found it), as the chief of the Angirases (discovered) the hiding-place of the cows; he opened the doors of the waters, the source of food, when shut up (in the cloud; the sources of) food, that were spread (over the earth.)²

4. Holding firmly the Vajra with both hands, Indra whetted it to hurl it (on his foes), like the water (of an imprecation):³ he whetted it for the destruction of Ahi.⁴ Indra, fully possessed of strength, energy and might, thou cuttest (our enemies) to pieces, as a wood-cutter the trees of a forest; thou cuttest them to pieces as if with a hatchet.

5. Thou hast without effort, created the rivers (that are) to flow to the sea, like chariots (bearing thee to sacrifices), as those (construct) chariots who are desirous of (going to) battle: (the streams, flowing hither have gathered together their water for a common purpose, like the cows that yielded all things to Manu, that yields all things to man.

1 A kind of weapon used by Indra for breaking down mountains.

2 Ishah parivritah is the reiterated phrase, alluding in the first place, according to Sâyana, to the rains shut up in the clouds, and in the second to the seeds shut up in the earth, germinating on the fall of the rain, and affording, in either case, 'food,' ishah.—Wilson.

3 That is, like water which is poured out for the destruction of enemies, rendered fatal by the formulæ of imprecation, udakam yatha s'atrunam nirasanâya abhimantranadisanskarena tikshnikriyate.—Sâyana.

4 The Scholiast explains it as Vitra or cloud. Very likely there was an Asurâ by the name of Vitra who was Indra's enemy. There is no use of explaining away everything as metaphorical since the Rig-Veda is also a historical record, describing the migrations of the forefathers of mankind.

6. Men, seeking riches, have recited this thy laudation as a clever and intelligent man (prepares) a chariot (for a journey): they have propitiated thee for their well-being: glorifying thee, sage Indra, as impetuous in conflicts, they have lauded thee (as men praise) a conqueror. We praise thee for the acquirement of strength, wealth and every sort of affluence as (people praise) a horse (for good qualities) in battle.

7. For Puru, the giver of offerings, for the powerful Divodasa, thou, Indra, the dancer (with delight in battle, hast destroyed ninety cities; dancer (in battle), thou hast destroyed them for the giver of offerings. For Atithigwa, the dreadful (Indra) hurled Sambara¹ from off the mountain, bestowing (upon the prince) immense treasure (acquired) by (his) prowess; all kinds of wealth (acquired) by (his) prowess.

8. Indra, the manifold protector (of his votaries) in battles, defends his *Arya*² worshipper in all conflicts; in conflicts that confer happiness in Swarga,³ he

1 We have had Indra's exploits in defence of these princes before; see vol. i. pp. 110, 120, 248: it may be added that the Sambara of the Purānas is an Asura who was engaged in hostilities with Krishna, and finally destroyed, together with his six hundred sons, by Pradyumna the grandson of Krishna. (See Harivansa, Langlois, vol. p. 169) The text of the Mahabharata, however, agrees with the Veda in representing him as the adversary of Indra.—Drona-vijaya, v. 39 Selections Mahabh. p. 39.—Wilson.

2 The text has A'rya which the Scholiast explains as amaraniyam i. e., immortal. Perhaps it is meant here that the primitive Aryans were very long-lived.

3 Again the commentator says that Indra helps his worshippers in enjoying happiness in the country of Swarga. Perhaps Indra used to help his votaries to go to the happy and blissful region of Swarga. From passages like this it is clear that there was a tract of country which was named Swarga and its denizens, who were beautiful, strong, punished for (the benefit of man the neglectors of religious rites: he tore off the black skin (of the aggressor).² as if burning (with flame) he consumes the malignant; he utterly consumes him who delights in cruelty.

9. Endowed with augmented vigour, he hurled (against the enemies) the wheel of the chariot of the sun,² and, ruddy of hue, deprived them of existence; he, the sovereign lord, deprived them of existence.³

healthy and long-lived, were called Devas. Sayana however has taken a metaphorical view of Swarga and gives reference to Parasara's proud utterance: "two descriptions of men attain the sphere of the sun, the vagrant practiser of Yoga and the hero who falls in battle." This view we however do not feel inclined to support, for Rig-Veda evidently, deals with historical events and describes the various tracts of country lying on earth.

1 The commentator has quoted the history. An Asura named Krisna (the black) went with ten thousand followers to the banks of the river Ansumati where he committed dreadful devastation, until Indra with Maruts, was sent against him by Bṛihaspati, when he was defeated by Indra and stripped of his skin. These are undoubtedly the fragments of informations regarding the fight between the Devas and, Asuras. It appears that the former were a race of more intelligent human beings and the latter were a barbarous people.

2 Suraschakram pravrihad, he threw the sun's wheel; for Suryasya rathasva chakram, the wheel of the chariot of the sun, according to the Scholiast, who cites a legend that the Asuras obtained a boon from Brahma, that they should not be destroyed by the thunderbolt of Indra, and having in consequence defied him, he cast at them the wheel of the sun's car, which was equally fatal: this has more the character of a Pauranik than a Vedik legend: another explanation is also proposed: the Sun (or Indra in that capacity) having risen, urges on his car, and Aruna (his charioteer) silences the clamour (of his enemies); the lord (of day) dissipates the gloom.

3 Vacham mushayati, lit. 'steals or takes away speech; the latter, it is said, put by metonymy for breath, i. e. life; or it may mean silences clamour, or suppresses his own exclamations: the Scholiast is evidently puzzled by the phrase — Wilson.

As thou, sage Indra, comest from afar to the succour of Usanas, so do thou come quickly, bearing all good things (to us), as thou bearest to (other) men; come quickly (to us) every day.

10. Showerer of benefits, breaker of cities, propitiated by our new songs, reward us with gratifying blessings: glorified Indra, by the descendants of Divodasa,¹ increase (in power) like the sun in (revolving) days.

SUKTA V (CXXXI.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same; the hymn is divided into three Trichas or triplets according to the different occasions on which the several portions are recited and the priests to whom the portions are respectively assigned; the first Tricha being repeated by the Maitravaruna; the second, commencing with the third stanza by the Brahmachchansi; and the third, beginning with the fifth verse, by the Achchhavaka.

THE great *Dyaus*² that excludes the wicked, has indeed bowed to Indra; the wide-spread *Prithivi*³ (has offered homage) with acceptable (praises) to Indra; with acceptable praises (the worshipper has propitiated Indra) for the sake of food: all the Devas, equally pleased, have given prudence to Indra: let all the sacrifices of men (be appropriated) to Indra; let all the offerings of men be (presented to him.)

1 Divodasebhih. by us, the Paruchchhepas, or me, Paruchchhepa, the plur. being used honorifically.

2 The region where the Devas, propularly called gods, used to live; here it means the denizens thereof.

3 Prithivi, is wrongly translated as earth: literally it means "The country of King Prithu" i.e. Bhárata-varsha,

2. Hoping to partake of thy bounties, (thy worshippers) nasten severally in every rite to (adore) thee, who art the same unto all, each severally seeking enjoyment in Swarga.¹ we shall place thee at the head of the army like a boat that carries (passengers) across (a stream); mortals meditate on Indra by sacrifices; mortals (propitiate him) with hymns.

3. The (married) couples,² anxious to satisfy thee, and presenting (oblations) perform (thy worship) for the sake of obtaining herds of cattle; presenting (thee), Indra (oblations); thou well-knowest that these two persons are desirous of cattle, are desirous of Swarga, and (thou abidest) displaying thy Vajra, the showerer (of benefits), thy constant companion, ever, Indra, associated (with thee.)

4. The ancients knew thy prowess, Indra, by which thou hadst destroyed the cities (of the Asuras) defended³ for a year by walls, ditches and the like: thou hadst destroyed them humiliating (their defenders)

² The text has chintayanta: the Scholiast explains it as "we meditate on the great Ishvara:" This shows that followers of Indra used to respect him almost like God. This is quite natural.

³ The text has Purah Sāradīh: we have followed Sāyana's interpretation. Wilson has translated it as 'perennial.' Sayana's interpretation gives an idea of the construction of cities at that time, which were Thou, O Lord of strength, didst punish the mortal, who obstructed sacrifices. Thou hadst rescued this spacious *Prithivi*¹ and these waters; exulting (thou hast recovered) these waters.

5. Therefore, for the augmentation of thy vigour, thy worshippers have scattered (libations), that in thy exhilaration, showerer (of benefits) thou mayst defend those who seek thy friend-ship; for them thou uttered a shout² to encourage them in combats; from thee they obtain many and many an enjoyment; anxious for food, they obtain it (from thee)

6. Will (Indra) be present at this our morning rite? Be apprized, (Indra), of {the oblation offered with (due) observances; offered with (due) observances for the sake of obtaining Swarga: and since wielder of Vajra, showerer (of benefits), thou knowest how to destroy the malevolent, do thou, therefore, listen to the acceptable (praise) of me, intelligent, though a novice; (hear it) from me most new.

7. Indra, endowed with many (excellences), do thou, who art exalted (by our praise), and art well disposed towards us, (kill) the mortal, who is unfriendly to us; (kill) such a man, hero, with thy Vajra; kill all walled. Asuras, who were also a powerful tribe of men, and who were always on hostile terms with the Devas, were perhaps the ancestors of latter day Assyrians.

1 Very likely Asuras, in order to torment the Devas, who had migrated from Swarga to Prithivi or Bhárata-varsha, had put a dam obstructing the source of rivers flowing to Bharata-varsha. Perhaps Indra removed this dam and saved Prithivi and all her rivers drawing water from that source.

2 Chakārtha karam. The commentator explains kāra by S'abda, sound; sinhanāda lakshanam, meaning war-cry; or the words might be rendered, thou hast done a deed, i. e. performed a service — Wilson.

him who sins against us; ever most prompt to hear, hear (us); let every ill intent¹ towards us, such as (alarms) a wearied (traveller) on the road, be counteracted; let every ill-intent be counteracted.

SUKTA VI. (CXXXII.)

THE deity, Rishi and metre are the same; but in the last stanza Indra is associated with Parvata.

MAGHAVAN, Indra, protected by thee, may we overcome those who are arrayed in hostile hosts: may we anticipate our assailants. This sacrifice, possessed of former opulence, being near, speak encouragingly to the presenter of the libation. May we bring together at this rite (suitable offerings and praises) to thee, the victor in war: worshipping thee, the victor in war.

2. In the encounter capable of securing Swarga Indra, (treading) in the proper and straight path of the active (combatant), as well as in his own appropriate and straight path,² kills (the enemy) of him, who wakes at dawn and celebrates (sacrifices): he is therefore to be adored with the head (bowed down, as respect is paid by prostration to a holy sage. May thy treasures be accumulated upon us; may the treasures of thee, who art auspicious, be auspicious to us.

² Swasminnanjasi, are the words reiterated; epithets in both places of vakman for vakmani, marge, in the road or path; the first is as usual, own, peculiar; the latter is explained honest, straight, free from fraud, kapatadirahte; or open, unconcealed, aprachchhane — Wilson.

3. Indra, as of old, highly brilliant sacrificial food shall be thine; thou art the abiding-place¹ of the sacrifice; the food with which the priests decorate the altar shall be thine; do thou declare that sacrifice that men may thence see the intermediate (firmament bright) with the rays (of the sun): for this, Indra, the searcher (of rain), is the seeker after cattle, for (the behoof of) his friendly (worshippers), and knows in due course (the season of the rain.)²

4. Thy exploits, Indra, are worthy to be glorified, now, verily, as well as in former times, when thou didst open the cloud for the Angirasas, restoring to them their cattle³—acquire victory for us, fight for us as thou

1 Ritasya varasi kshayam—yajnasya nivâsasthanam ambhaktosi, thou art [possessed of the place of the abode of the sacrifice, termed Rita, or the true, as giving unfailing reward; or Rita may mean water, when the expression, thou abidest in the dwelling of the water, is equivalent to the sender of rain, vrishtiprado asi: or another interpretation is proposed, Rita meaning the sun, and the verb having a causal power; thou causest (the sacrificer) to go to the region of the sun.—Wilson.

2 This part of the stanza requires even more than the usually necessary amplification to be rendered at all intelligible. It is sa gha vide anwindro gavesano bandhukshidbhyo gavesanah, literally, he verily knows in order, Indra, the searcher, for those who have the quality of kindred, the searcher; gavesana is explained, in the first place, by the Scholiast, udakasyanveshana silah, possessed of or practising the seeking after water, the sender of rain; in the second, it is rendered gavameshanakarttâ, the maker of search after the cows, alluding to the old legend; or it may mean, it is said, the seeker for the reward of the worshipper, yajamana phalasya mârgayatâ: the object of vide or anuvide, he knows in order, is filled up by udakapraptiprakasam, he understands the manifestation of the attainment or arrival, in due season, of the rains.—Wilson.

3 Vrajam is the word of repetition, implying, in the first instance, according to Sâyana, a cloud; in the second, the cattle of the Angirasas, stolen by Pani; the word properly, meaning a cow-pen or pasture.—Wilson.

didst for them: humble, in behalf of those who present libations, him who obstructs sacrifices; him who rages against us and celebrates no sacrifice.

5. Inasmuch as the hero (Indra) rightly judges men by their deeds, therefore do (the worshippers), desiring for food, destroy (the enemies) by the wealth attained by them; desirous of food¹ they diligently worship (him): the (sacrificial) food offered to him is the source of progeny (to the worshipper), and (men) worship him, that by their own strength they may overcome (their foes): pious² sacrificers enjoy residence in Indra's region;³ pious sacrificers are, as it were, in the presence of the Devas.

6. Indra and Parvata,³ who are foremost in battles, slay every one who is arrayed against us; slay every such (adversary) with the Vajra; (this Vajra) bent upon his destruction pursues him however far, or to whatever hiding-place he may have fled. Thou hero, cuttest our enemies into pieces in many ways; the tearer (of enemies), Vajra cuts them into pieces in many ways.

1 S'ravasyavah, plur. of S'ravasyu, derived from a nominal verb, S'ravasya, from s'ravas, food or fame, implying a wish or desire for either; the Scholiast proposes to render it, the first time, "by they, desirous of food,"—and the second, by 'desirous of offering food'—oblations to Indra; but the variation does not seem to be necessary.—Wilson.

2 The text has only Indre, in Indra; that is to say, in the abode or vicinity of Indra, agreeably to the well-known metonymy, Gangāyam ghoshah, a village in or on the Ganges, i.e., on the banks of the Ganges—Wilson.

3 The Scholiast has again explained Parvata a cloud, or the deity presiding over clouds. Very likely it appears, that this Parvata is another name of Indra, or it may mean some hero who lived in the mountainous region.

SUKTA VII. (CXXXIII.)

INDRA is the deity and the Rishi is Paruchchhepa but the metre is diversified: that of the first stanza is Trishtubh; of the next three stanzas, Anushtubh; of the fifth Gâyatri, the sixth and seventh return to the long and complex measures of Dhriti and Atyashti.

BY sacrifice I purify both the sky and the earth:¹ I burn the wide (realms of earth) that are without Indra, and are (the haunts) of the wicked: wherever the enemies have congregated they have been slain: and utterly destroyed, they sleep in a dip pit.²

2. Devourer (of enemies) having trampled on the heads of the malignant (hosts)³ crush them with thy wide-spreading foot; thy vast wide-spreading foot.

3. Crush, Maghavan, the power of malignant (hosts) hurl them into the vile pit; the vast and vile pit.

4. That thou hast destroyed, by the assaults, thrice fifty of such (hosts), is a deed that well becomes thee, although thought by thee of little moment.

1 The text has Prithivi which we have translated popularly as earth. But our readers are requested to understand that the Aryans used to mean by the word Prithivi the realm of the king Prithu i.e. Bhadratavarsha.

2. Vailasthanam as'eran, 'they have slept,' or irregularly 'they sleep,' in a place which is of the nature of a vilâ, a hole, a cavern, a pit: the Scholiast considers the expression in this and in the third stanza to be equivalent to S'mas'âna, a place where dead bodies are burned, or, as it would here seem to imply, a place where they were buried; as if it was the practice to bury the dead when this hymn was composed. Sâyana also suggests, as an alternative, the translation 'of vailasthanam by nagaloka, the Serpent-world; Patala, the regions below the earth; but this is rather Pauranik, perhaps than Vaidik.—Wilson.

3 In this and the next verse the term is yatuminâm; which may be rendered, according to the Scholiast, hinsavatânam senanam, of injury-inflicting armies, or ayudha vatânam, of those possessing weapons; or yatu may mean Râkshasas; of hosts composed of Râkshasas.—Wilson.

5 Destroy, Indra, the twany-coloured, fearfully roaring Pishâchi; annihilate all the Râkshasas.

6. Hurl headlong down, Indra, the vast (cloud); hear our supplications. Verily the Dyus (Swarga) is in sorrow like the earth, through fear (from the absence of rain O holder of Vajra, as (formerly through fear of) Twashtri;¹ most powerful with mighty energies, thou attackest, Indra, (the clouds) with terrible blows: and injuring no man, thou (marchest) invincible, heroe, by (thine) enemies, attended by twenty-one followers.²

7. Offering oblations (the worshipper) obtains a house; offering oblations, he destroys his prostrate enemies; he destroys the enemies of the Devas; having profuse food and unsubdued (by enemies), he (wo shipper) hopes to attain, when offering libation, infinite (riches), for Indra grants to him, who offers libations, whatever grows on all sides; he gives (him) accumulated wealth.

1 Ghrinan-na bhisha : ghrina is said to be a name of Twashtri, or of blazing fire personified: according to the legend, the world being enveloped by thick darkness, the gods prayed to Agni, on which he burst forth suddenly from heaven and earth, in the shape of Twashtri; to the dismay of both regions, as by the text, sa chobhe Twashtur bibhyatuh — Wilson.

2 Trisaptaih surasatwabhih; the Scholiast explains it tribhih saptabhir va anuchatain, but gives no further {interpretation: Indra's followers, the Maruts, are forty-nine, so that they cannot be intended; and Satwabhih must mean something else: perhaps an allusion is intended to the seven platters offered to Maruts repeated at the three daily rites; or, attended by the beings, i.e. the Maruts, to whom the the thrice seven offerings are presented. — Wilson.

ANUVA KA XX.

SUKTA I. (CXXXIV.)

THE deity is Vayu ; the Rishi Paruchchhepa ; the metre Atyashiti except in the last stanza, which it is Ashti.

LET thy swift coursers, Vayu, bring thee here speedily, that thou mayest be the first to drink, the first (of the Devas) to drink¹ of the Soma libation. May our up-raised, truthful and sweet (laudation) be acceptable to thy mind : come with thy steed-yoked car² for the libation) to be presented to thee ; come Vayu, for granting³ (our object).

2. May the exhilarating drops (of the libation) exhilarate thee, Vayu, being properly prepared, doing their office, administered opportunely, rendered efficacious by (our) praises : for which purpose thy docile and active steeds, the Niyuts, attending thy presence (bring thee) to the sacrificial hall to accept the offering to the sacrifice in which the pious (priests) represent their desires.

3. Vayu yokes to his car⁴ his two red horses ; Vayu (yokes) his purple steeds Vayu (yokes) his two

1 In both places the phrase is 'purvapitaye,' for the first drinking ; Sayana supplies, in the second, itara-devebhya pura, before other gods.

2 Niyutwata rathena, with the car having the Niyuts ; the horses of Vayu so denominated.

3 Davane is the expression in both places, from dav, a vaidik verb, to give ; the Scholiast explains it as in the text ; in the first instance in a passive sense, or 'come for that which is to be given by us,' dātavyaya ; in second, in an active sense, or 'for giving to us that which we solicit'—Wilson.

4 The text has dhuri, which may, according to the Scholiast, either mean the work of carrying a load or a car.

(horses) capable of moving swiftly¹ and carrying burden. Arouse Vâyu, the intelligent (sacrificer), as a gallant (awakens) his sleeping mistress, (light) profusely heaven and earth; place properly the dawn; place properly the dawn (to receive) thy sacrificial food.

4. For thee, the brilliant Ushas, from afar, spread abroad their auspicious raiment in inviting rays;² in variegated and glorious rays; for thee, the cow that yeilds ambrosia milks all kinds of treasure: thou begetteth the Maruts, of the firmament,³ for (the purpose of) showering rain; (for the purpose of replenishing) the rivers.

5. For thee, the bright, pure, quick-flowing (Soma) juices, potent for exhilaration, are eager for the (fire of oblation, are eager for the clouds (showering) waters.⁴ The timid and anxious (worshipper) lauds thee, who art

1 The text has ajîra which may mean either "Swift-coursing" or endued with a particular colour."

2 Dansu ras'mishu: the meaning of the first seems rather doubtful; dansu, the commentator says, may be used for danseshu, karnavatsu, doing their work, or dansa may mean a house, in rays investing or covering the world like a house; or it may mean the chamber of sacrifice, in which the fires may be said to offer a raiment to Vâyu; vastra, auspicious garments: the metaphor is not very obvious.—Wilson.

3 We have followed the Scholiast in the translation of the text. As a mere suggestion to our readers we may hint that anîariksha, very probably, may mean a tract of country lying between Swarga (Mongolia) and Prithivi (Hindustan). Perhaps Vâyu was the head of the Maruts who peopled that land. They are said to "replenish the rivers" for all the rivers of Bhîratavarsha have their sources from the mountains above and because people saw clouds coming from above the Himalayas they thought that Maruts must have created them and produced rain.

4 The oblations that are offered to fire are the remote cause of the rain; the text has ishananta bhurvanyapam ishantah bhurvani: in the first place, bhurvan is explained by yâga, a sacrifice; in the second, a cloud; the passage is rather obscure.—Wilson.

auspicious, for (driving away) thieves;¹ for thou defendest (us) from all beings, (as the reward) of our righteousness: thou protectest us from the fear of evil spirits (as the reward) of our righteousness.

6. Thou, Vâyu, who art preceded by none, art entitled to drink first of these our libations, thou art entitled to drink of the effused (juices), moreover, (of all) oblations and sin-offerings of men; for thee, their cattle yield milk, (for thee) they yield butter.²

SUKTA II. (CXXXV.)

THE Rishi is the same; the three first stanzas are addressed to Vâyur, the next five to Indra also; and the last to Vayu alone; the metre is the same, except in the seventh and eighth stanzas, in which it is Ashti.

O LORD of Niyuts,³ riding a thousand Niyuts, do thou come to our strewn grass to partake of the (offered) food; come on hundreds and thousands of Niyuts: the Devas hold back for thee as the Deva entitled first to drink (the libation): sweet effused juices are ready for thy exhilaration, are ready for their function.

1 Twam bhagam takkaviye; the second is considered to imply bhajaniyam, for which a precise equivalent is not easily found; that which is to be enjoyed; that which is agreeable or acceptable; the last is explained taskaranam, yajna vighatinam anyatra gamanâya, for causing to go elsewhere thieves, i.e., the obstructers of sacrifices.—Wilson.

2 A's'iram, in the first place, is explained by kshiram; in the second, by ghrita; being in either âs'rayana dravyam, an article which is the material of oblations and the like.

3 Horses of Vâyur were so named,

2. For thee this Soma juice purified by the stones (that bruise the plant),¹ and clothed with enviable (splendour)² flows to its (appropriate) receptacle;³ clothed with brilliant (splendour) the Soma is offered as thy portion amongst men and amongst Devas; (having received it), harness thy horses and depart well-pleased with us: gratified and well-disposed towards us, depart.

3. Come with hundred and thousands of thy horses to our sacrifice to have thy wished for satisfaction, to partake of the oblations, Vâyu; this is thy reasonable portion and it is radiant along with the sun;⁴ the juices, carried by the priests, are prepared; the pure juices, Vâyu, are prepared.

4. Let the chariot drawn by the Niyuts convey you

1 Pariputo adriḥhih, which the Scholiast explains by abhishava-s'odhanair apagatarijishatwena s'odhita, 'purified by the impurity which has been removed by the purifying means of the effusion;' the sense of Rijisha is doubtful; in Mahidhara's commentary on a text of the Yajur, III. 25, it is explained gatasārah Soma; Soma that has lost its strength; Sayana similarly explains it in a subsequent passage,—Asht. III. Adhy. II. S. VII. v. 10; but that could scarcely be restored by mechanical means; again, it is explained dasapavitrās'odhanena grahanena va s'odhita, purified by straining through kusa grass, or by taking hold of; but the last must have technical application.—Wilson.

2 Sparhah vasanaḥ, explained sprihaniyāni tejānsi pidhanaḥ, putting on desirable or enviable splendours.

3 Pari kos'am arshati-kosa sthāniyam graham prāpnoti, it goes to the ladle, as it were, in place of a receptacle.

4 Sarasmih surye sachā may also be understood, according to Sāyana, to imply that the offering is simultaneous with sunrise; the first part of the verse occurs in the Yajur, xxvii. 28; the latter is different, or Vayu, delight in this sacrifice, and do you, (priests) preserve us ever by auspicious rites."—Wilson.

both (Indra and Vâyu to the sacrifice) for our preservation and to partake of the consecrated viands; to partake, Vâyu, of the oblations: drink ye both the Soma juice; for the first draught is due to you both;¹ Vâyu, come with joy-bestowing wealth; Indra, come with wealth.

5. The hymns (addressed) to you have given increased (efficacy) to our sacrifices; for you (the priests) strain this quick-dropping juice as (the groom rubs down)² a fleet, quick-coursing horse;³ drink of their (libations) and come hither, well-disposed towards us, for our protection: do you both drink of the juices that have been expressed by the stones, for you are both givers of food.

6. These Soma juices, expressed in our sacrificial rites and borne by the priests, are prepared for you both: these brilliant juices are prepared for you, Vâyu; these pervading (juices) have been cleansed through the oblique filter⁴ for you both; the Soma juices intended

1 Sâyaana seems rather perplexed how to adjust precedence between Vâyu and Indra; but, upon the authority of other texts, assigns it to Vâyu, which concurs with the order of the text in this place; in which as well as in some others, we have the nominative in the singular, with the verb in the dual, thus: Vayavagatam; Indrascha-agatam; implying, therefore, that one of the two is understood: or, in the first it should be Vayu and Indra; in the second, Indra and Vâyu.—Wilson.

2 The text has no verb here; but the comparison intends the preceding verb, marmrijanta, have strained, or cleaned, or rubbed.

3 Vâjinam, âs'umatyam na vâjinam liṣ, going quick, like a quick horse going quick.

4 Abhyasrikshata tirah pavitram: the latter term is usually applied to a bundle of kusa grass, which is supposed to purify the Soma or the butter poured upon it; it is here explained the receiver of the Soma-juice placed slopingly or obliquely, or a filter or strainer made of wool.

for you both, pass through the woolly fleece ; the inexhaustible Soma juices.¹

7. Come, (Vāyu), by the many sleeping worshippers) and go (with Indra) to the house where the stone resounds : may Indra go to that dwelling : go where true and sweet laudatory verses are being sung : (go where) the butter flows ; go both with plump Niyuts (horses) to the sacrifice ; Indra (and Vāyu) go to the sacrifice.

8. Indra and Vayu carry in this sacrifice libations sweet like honey for which sacrificers go to the mountainous region ;² may they, victorious, be capable of celebrating the sacrifice ; (for you) together the cows distil (their milk) ; the (offering) barley is ready ; and never for thee (Vayu) will the cows grow meagre ; never the kine will be lost.³

9. O Vāyu, the giver of excellent objects, these thy horses, strong of limb, youthful and plump like bulls, carry thee through the space between Swarga and Prithivi ;⁴ they do not tarry in the Antarikshas ;⁵ they

1 Atiromanyavyaya Somaso atyavyaya ; in the first place, the Soma Juices having gone through (ati) the unclipped (avyayāni for achchin-nani) hairs ; or avyaya may be intended for avimayani, made from the sheep, sheep's wool ; fall into the vessel that receives them ; but in the second place, avyaya is said to bear its ordinary meaning, unexpended, unexhausted.

2 Sayana explains the text as the Soma spread through mountains and the like.

3 Na upadasyanti dhenavah-napa dasyanti dhenavah ; upadas is explained to mean infirm, or wasted by sickness ; apadas, to be carried by thieves.

4 Again it is clear here that Swarga and Prithivi mean two tracts of country.

5 Antarikshas is the region lying between Prithivi, i.e., Bhadrata-varsha and Swarga. It can never mean at least here firmament for are quick-coursing and are not retarded by reviling;¹

 difficult are they to be arrested as the beams of the sun; difficult are they to be arrested by force.²

SUKTA III. (CXXXVI.)

THE Rishi is the same; the deities are Mitra and Varuna: the metre is Atyashiti, except in the last verse, in which it is Tristubh.

OFFER most excellent and ample adoration and reverential oblations to those two deities (Mitra and Varuna) who have existed of old, who are the sources of happiness (unto their worshippers) and partake of sweet (libations); for they are both imperial (sovereigns³ in whose honor) oblations of butter are poured out and who are lauded at every sacrifice, whence their might is not in any way to be overcome; their divinity is not to be doubted.

2. The most excellent Ushas has been seen proceeding to the comprehensive (sacrifice): the path of the revolving (sun) has been lighted up by (his) rays: the eyes of men (have been opened) by the rays of it is preposterous to assume that horses can run through the sky which has, as proved by science, no material existence. From passages like these we are disposed to infer that the geography of the Rig-Veda deals with real countries lying on the north of India.

10 Agiraukasah, lit. having no dwelling by speech; according to Scholiast, they are not brought to a stop by abusive speech or the like, bhartsanadina sthitim alabhamánáh.

11 Hastayor dur-niyantavah, difficult to be checked by both hands or by physical force; they are not to be deterred by words, such as woh woh; or by pulling up the reins, from coming to the sacrifice.

1 Ta samraja: or samraja, may be rendered greatly or thoroughly shining, samyak-rajamanau.

Bhaga : the brilliant mansions of Mitra, of Aryaman, of Varuna (has been lighted up by his rays) ;¹ and therefore do you two accept the commendable and copious oblation : praiseworthy and copious oblation.

3. (Your worshipper) has prepared ground (for the altar) free from defect, radiant (with sacrificial fire) and conferring Swarga :² come to it together every day you who are vigilant ; every day (at sacrifice) receive invigorated energy (by coming here), sons of Āditi lords of munificence : of those two, Mitra is the animator³ of mankind and so is Varuna ; Aryaman is (also) the animator of mankind.

4. May this Soma libation be gratifying to Mitra and Varuna, to be enjoyed by them as they drink of it, with faces downwards ; a divine beverage, fit to be enjoyed by the Devas : may all the Devas,⁴ well-pleased today, drink of it : therefore, royal (deities) do as we request, you who are ever-truthful, do as we request.

5. Whatever individual offers service to Mitra and Varuna, do you preserve him entirely unharmed from

¹ Nothing more is meant by all this, according to the Scholias^t than that the firmament is lighted by the sun ; the several names being designations or forms of the sun, specified severally by way of multiplying his praises.

These names may also signify so many Devas whose houses had been lighted up.

² The denizens of Bhāratavarsha used to propitiate their more powerful neighbours of Swarga.

⁴ Here is another proof of the people of Bhāratavarsha inviting the Devas to their religious rites. All this can never be absolutely figurative.

sin ; (preserve) from sin the mortal, who presents you (with oblations) may Aryaman protect him, who is sincere in his service, who undertakes the worship of both with laudatory hymns and adores them with praises.

6. I sing the hymn of veneration to the powerful sun, to Swarga and Prithivi, to Mitra, to the benevolent Varuna, to the conferrer of happiness, the showerer of benefits.¹ Laud Indra, Agni, the brilliant Aryaman, and Bhaga so that enjoying long life we may be blessed with progeny, that we may be protected by Soma.

7. Adoring Indra, and favoured by the Maruts, may we depend upon the protection of the Devas, and may we, affluent (through their bounty), enjoy the happiness which Agni, Mitra, and Varuna are bestowing (upon us.)

1. Varunāya milhushe sumrilikāya milhushe : the Scholiast separates the first attributive from Varuna, and considers it to be an epithet of Rudra, the showerer of desired benefits, abhimataphalasektre ; the two next words he applies equally to Mitra, Varuna, and Rudra ; but it does not seem to be necessary to associate Rudra with the other two, especially as it is not so directed in the Anukramani.

SECOND ADHYĀYA.

SUKTA IV. (CXXXVII.)

The deities are Mitra and Varuna; the Rishi Paruchchhepa; the metre Atisakkarā.

COME, (Mitra and Varuna, to our sacrifice); where we express (the Soma juice) with stones: these juices mixed with milk are exhilarating; these (juices) are exhilarating:¹ come to us, royal divinities, dwellers in heaven, and our protectors; these juices are mixed with milk for you, Mitra and Varuna; they are pure, mixed with milk.

2. Come, for these dripping Soma juices are mixed with curds; they are expressed and mixed with curds; whether they be prepared for you at the awaking of the dawn, or (be associated) with the rays of the sun: the juice is effused for Mitra and for Varuna, for their drinking the grateful (libation); for their drinking at the sacrifice.

3. They milk for you two with stones, that succulent creeper, like a productive milch cow; they milk the Soma plant with stones; come to us as our protectors; be present with us to drink Soma juice: this Soma juice has been effused, Mitra and Varuna, for you both; effused for your drinking.

1 Matsaráh: in the repetition Sayana suggests also the usual sense of 'envious;' the Soma juices offered on this occasion being envious or emulous of those presented at other ceremonies.—Wilson.

SUKTA V. (CXXXVIII.)

THE deity is Pushan; the Rishi and metre are the same:

THE greatness of the strength of the many-worshipper Pushan is universally lauded; no one detracts (from his praise); his praise displeases no one. Desirous of happiness, I adore him, whose protection is ever nigh; who is the source of felicity; who, when devoutly worshipped, blends with the thoughts of all (his worshippers): who, (though) a deity, is united with the sacrifice.¹

2. I exalt thee, Pushan, with praises, that thou mayest hasten (to the sacrifice), like a rapid (courser) to the battle: that thou mayest bear us across the combat, like a camel;² therefore do I, a mortal, invoke thee, the divine bestower of happiness, for thy friendship; and do thou render our invocations productive³ (of benefit); render them productive (of success) in battles.

1 Mana ayuyave makho, deva ayuyave makha are the words of the text, intending, no doubt, although obscurely, to identify Pushan, spiritually or mystically, with the performer and the performance of the worship: the Scholiast gives a rather different interpretation: in the first instance, makha is rendered yajna-van, having or receiving sacrifice, who thereupon confers the boon the sacrificer solicits, thus 'mixing with' or assenting to his thoughts or mind (mana ayuyave samantaḥ mis'rayati-s'ighra vara pradānat): in the reiteration makha is considered to be put for makham, objective case, the sacrifice, with which Pushan mixes, or is present at, until completed, sampurttiparyantam mis'rayati. Another rendering is also proposed, but it is not more satisfactory — Wilson.

2 Ushtro na, like a camel; as a camel bears a burthen, is the explanation of the commentary.—Wilson.

3 Dyumninaskridhi, make them possessed of wealth; dyumna having that meaning: the commentator renders it in the first instance brilliant, dyotanavatah; or having fame or food, yasovatah or annavatah; in the reiteration he proposes the latter as the result of conquests;—Wilson.

3. Through thy praise, and assiduous in thy worship they enjoy (abundance), through thy protection; by (assiduous) worship they enjoy (abundance); as consequent upon thy recent favour, we solicit infinite riches. Free from anger, and entitled to ample praise, be ever accessible to us; be our leader in every encounter.

4. Free from anger, and liberal of gifts, be nigh to us, Ajas'wa,² for the acceptance of this our (offering); be nigh to those, Ajas'wa, who solicit food: we have recourse to thee, destroyer of enemies, with pious hymns. I never cease, Pushan, acceptor of offerings, to think of thee; I never disregard thy friendship.

SUKTA VI. (CXXXIX.)

THE Rishi is the same; the deities are various, under the collective designation of Viswadevas. The first verse is addressed to Agni, Indra, and Vayu; the second to Mitra and Varuna; the three next to the As'wins; in the sixth, Indra is again addressed, Agni in the seventh, and the Maruts in the eighth; Indra and Agni are associated in the ninth; Brihaspati is hymned in the tenth, all together in the eleventh. The metre also varies; that of the fifth verse is Brihati, and of the eleventh Trishtubh; in the rest it is Atyashti; after which we take leave for the present of this long, complicated, and embarrassing construction.

MAY our prayers be heard.² I place before (me) Agni with reverence; we have recourse to his celestial might;

1 He, who is drawn by goats, or has goats for horses, according to Yāska.

2 Astu S'raushat, which the Scholiast explains asyah stuter s'ravanam bhavatu, may there be a hearing of this hymn; or s'rotā bhavatu, may Agni or other deity be a hearer. In ordinary use s'raushat is an exclamation uttered when the butter is poured upon the fire, on the altar, as an offering to the gods, and it is not impossible that it may have some such signification here.

we have recourse to Indra and to Vayu : which doing a new (hymn) has been addressed (by us) to the radiant navel (of the earth);¹ and thereupon may our pious rites attain the gods; may our pious rites attain the presence of the gods.

2. Mitra and Varuna, bestow (upon us) abundantly that unenduring water which you obtain from the sun, through your own energy ; through the inherent energy of the vigorous : may we thus behold your golden (forms) in our halls of sacrifice, (brought thither) by our sacred rites, and by our thoughts and senses (intent upon you) ; by our senses (intent upon offering) the Soma libation.

3. As'wins, men who desire to glorify you with (their) hymns, cause, as it were, their praises to be heard, propitiating you with oblations ; for, from you, who are possessed of all opulence, (they obtain) every kind of wealth and abundant food. Dasras, the fellows (of the wheels) of your honey-laden car drop honey (carried in your golden car).²

1 We have had occasion to notice the expression before, as intending the altar ; or it may mean, according to Sayana, the sacrifice, agreeably to the text, yajnam ahur bhuvanasya nābhim, they have called the sacrifice the navel of the world ; the text adds vivaswati, explained by the commentator diptamati, shining ; the stanza occurs in the Sama, 1. 461, where Professor Benfey considers that Vivaswat, the Sun-god is intended as identified with Vāyu and Indra — Wilson.

2 Hiranyaye rathe Dasra hiranyaye : the epithet usually means golden :¹ but Sayana interprets it, in the first place, by madhu-purna, and consistently with that interpretation explains prushayante pavayah, the circumferences of the wheel distil (ksharanti sravanti), or scatter honey, as they revolve ; in the reiteration he proposes to render it by 'pleasing, heart-delighting,' hridayaramana ; and to supply a supposed ellipse, by havir-vahatam, 'convey the oblation in your delightful chariot,' but this does not seem to be necessary. — Wilson.

4. Dasras, your purpose is known : you would repair to heaven : your charioteers harness (your steeds) for your heavenward journey ; the horses that injure not (the car) on your journey to heaven. We have placed you, Dasras, in your golden three-shafted chariot, going by an (easy) road to heaven. humiliators (of enemies), and principal regulators of the rain.

5. Enriched by holy rites, grant us, by day and night, (all good things), on account of our pious acts : never may your donations, never may our (donations), be withheld.

6. Indra, showerer (of blessings), these effused juices, (expressed) by stones, and which have sprung (from mountain plants), are for thy drinking ; these libations have burst forth for thee : may they satisfy thee as an offering presented (in the hope of receiving) great and wonderful riches. Acceptor of laudations, come to us, glorified by our hymns ; come to us well pleased.

7. Agni, listen attentively when thou art praised by us, and repeat (those praises) to the gods who are entitled to worship ; to the royal (deities) entitled to worship : on which account the gods gave to the Angirasas the milch cow which Aryaman milked for (thee),² the maker (of all), together with the gods ;

¹ Anjasa s'āsata rajas ; the latter Sayana interprets by udakam, water ; vrishti-lakshanam, metonymy for rain.

² The Scholiast quotes a legend, stating that the Angirasas, having propitiated the gods, solicited the gift of a cow ; the gods gave them the cow of plenty, but they were unable to milk her, and applied to Aryaman, who drew from the cow milk convertible to butter for oblations to fire.

that cow (the nature of which thou hast said), he along with me, comprehends.¹

8. Never, Maruts, may your glorious energies be exerted against us; may our (riches) never diminish; never may our towns decay: and may whatever is wonderful, admirable, immortal, or (whatever is recognized to be living), from its sound,² that has been yours from age to age, (devolve) upon us; whatever is most difficult (of attainment) bestow upon us; whatever is most difficult (to be attained).

9. The ancient Dadhyanch, Angiras, Priyamedha, Kanwa, Atri, Manu,³ have known my birth;⁴ they who were of old and Manu have known (my progenitors);⁵ for of them is long life amongst the gods, and in them is our existence;⁶ for the sake of their high station,

1 Esha tam Veda me sacha, he knows her along with me; explained by the Scholiast Aryamaham api Janami, either I, Aryama, or I and Aryamā know her: in what way or to what effect is not specified: the addition to the text is conjectural —Wilson.

2 The text has only ghoshah, put for ghosháh, plur. sounds, noises; according to the comment and by metonymy, those who utter them, either cattle or people.—Wilson.

3 These ancient Rishis have all been named before. See index to the first Ashtaka.

4 The birth of me, Paruchchhepas, the Rishi of the hymn; he is subsequent to them, or of more recent date.—Wilson.

5 Te me purve manor viduh; the scholiast supplies pitradin fathers, etc., he also proposes Manavah in the plur. for Manu, but that is scarcely necessary, unless purve be considered as the adjective of Manavah, implying former Manus, and involving a recognition of the system of Manwantara, the Vaidik origin of which is yet to be determined; Sayana, however, disconnects the terms, and applies purve to those previously named, Dadhyanch and the rest; manavas-cha and the Manus.—Wilson.

6 Asmakam teshu nábhayah. in them are our 'navels,' a rather unintelligible phrase; Sayana would explain it by vital airs, in connection with life, jivena saha sambandhavantah pranah; or by sacrifices

I adore (the gods) with praise; I worship Indra and Agni with praise.

10. Let the invoker (of the gods) offer sacrifice, and may they, desirous of the offering, (partake of) the acceptable (libation); Brihaspati himself, desiring (libation), celebrates worship with libations; with copious and excellent libations. We catch from a distant quarter the sound of the stones, whereby the performer of pious acts has of himself secured the waters (of the clouds);¹ the performer of pious acts² (has secured) many habitations.

11. Gods who are eleven in heaven; who are eleven on earth; and who are eleven dwelling with glory in mid-air may ye be pleased with this our sacrifice.

in relation to their rewards, phalena sambaddhāh yagah. There are various readings of the commentary; on this verse, of which none are quite satisfactory; they are specified by Prof. Muller, vol. ii. p. xx. and he proposes a version somewhat differing from that above given; it is not easy to say which is most correct.—Wilson.

1 Tmāna adharayad avarindanani, explained vrishti lakshananyudakani atmana dharayati, he sustains by himself the waters that is, the rains; or it may be rendered, he produces such waters by his sacrifices, tadris'anyudakani yagena utpādayati, rain being the result of worship.—Wilson.

2 Sukratu, which is repeated, may indicate either the Yajamāna or Brihaspati, as the adhwarya, or ministering priest.—Wilson.

3 The verse [is repeated in the Yajush, vii. 19. No explanation is given of the powers of these three classes, nor are their names specified they seem to be something different from the thirty-three deities of the Puranas.—Wilson.

ANÜVA'KA XXI.

SUKTA I (CXL.)

THE deity is Agni; the Rishi is Dirghatamas, the son of Uchatthyakî the metre is Jagatî, except in the two last stanzas, in which it is Trishtubh.

PREPARE a (fit) place, as it were an offering for the radiant Agni, who is seated on the altar, and fond of his station: strew the sacred, light-bearing, bright and gloom-dispelling (spot), with agreeable (Kus'a grass), as with a garment.

2. (Agni), the two-fold generated,² devours the triple (sacrificial) food,³ and when the year expires renovates what has been eaten;⁴ the showerer (of benefits is invigorated (in one form) by eating with the tongue of another; in a different form the restrained (of all) consumes the forest trees.⁵

3. Both his associated mothers, blackened (by combustion), are in movement and give birth to an infant, whose tongue (of flame glows) in the east: (who) dissipates darkness; (who) rapidly issues forth; (who) is

1 The reading of the Puranas is invariably Uttathya, but this is the reading of the several MSS. of the text and of the Anûkramanika.

2 Either as produced by attrition from the two sticks, or in the first instance by attrition, and in the second from consecration for sacrificial use — Wilson.

3 Trivrid-annam.—1 Clarified butter; 2 Purodas'a, butter, with other articles or cakes fried in butter; and 3 Soma juice.

4 That is, the same articles are offered annually.

5 Some of this is obscure; anyasya-asa jihvaya jényo vrishanyanyena-mrishta, lit. the victorious showerer by the mouth-tongue of another; by another consumes. Sayana explains asa by asyena, with the mouth; anyasya, of the oblation; or with the mouth in one form (or sacrificial, fire) he receives the oblation through the tongue of another; that is the ladle of the ministering priests; in another form, that is, the fire that burns forests, davagni, he consumes the trees.—Wilson.

readily developed; (who) is (ever) to be cherished, and is the augments (of the prosperity) of his parent, (the institutor of the rite).

4. The (flames of Agni),¹ light-moving, dark-tracked, quick (consuming), capricious, restless, lambent, fanned by the wind, wide-spreading, and ensuring liberation (to the devout), are kindled for (the benefit of) the pious reverencer of (holy) priests.

5. Thereupon those (flames of Agni) extend together on all sides, destroying darkness and spreading great light along the dark roadway, when (Agni) lights up repeatedly the entire earth and proceeds panting, thundering, and roaring aloud.

6. He (Agni) gets down amongst the tawny-colored bushes,² and rushes roaring like a bull among (a herd of) cows;³ thence increasing in intensity, he is lighting up his form: assuming a form incapable of being arrested, he brandishes his form like a formidable animal.

7. Now hidden, now displayed, he spreads himself (on the plants); as if understanding (the intention of the sacrificer), he reposes amidst conscious (flames):

1 This is inserted by the Scholiast, for the stanza is made up of epithets only: they are not easily provided with equivalents, as raghu-druvâh, going lightly; Krishnasitasâh, black-pathed; juvâh, quick; asamâna, not same minded—some going east, some west; or it may mean of different colours; ajirasâh, moving; raghushpadâh, light-gliding; vatajutâh, wind impelled; as'avâh, pervading; mumukshvâh, giving liberation.

2 The text has Vabhrushu which the Scholiast explains either as Vabhruvârna i. e. twany-colored or bharana Kushala capable of embellishing: Wilson has followed the latter interpretation.

3 Vrisheva patnir abhyeti: Sayana renders, patnih, by palayitrih, those who cherish him, Agni, that is, bushes, timber; but this would not be a comparison, as is implied by iva; patni is ordinarily a wife, and may here be applicable to a cow; the translation, however, is in some respects conjectural.—Wilson.

again they break forth, and repair to the divine (fire of sacrifice), blending with which they give a different (luminous) form to their parents (heaven and earth).

8. (The flames) that are in front like tresses¹ embrace him (Agni); and even when on the point of extinction (they) spring aloft again to (greet) their coming (lord); rescuing them from decrepitude, he comes sounding aloud, generating (in them) intenser animation and unimpaired vitality.

9. Licking up the (verdant) vesture of the mother (of all things, earth), rapid (Agni) goes variously with living beings, sounding loudly,² affording food to (every) footed creature:³ ever consuming (fuel) so that a blackened track follows (his path).

10. Shine, Agni, in our opulent (abodes) breathing, showering (blessings), bounteous, casting off infantine (glimmerings); burn (fiercely), repelling repeatedly, like a coat of mail, (our enemies) in combats.

11. May this oblation, Agni, carefully placed upon the rugged but agreeable (pile of fuel), be most acceptable to thee, so that, along with the pure radiance coming out of thy brilliant person, thou mayst grant us gems.

12. Bestow, Agni, upon our excellent patron,⁴ a

² The text has Tubigrevih which may mean either sounding loudly or going quickly.

³ Bipeds or quadrupeds.

boat ever fitted with oars and feet¹ (one that may render) our posterity prosperous, and may bear mankind across (the ocean of life) to felicity.

13. Agni, do thou increase the excitement of our laudatory verses : may heaven and earth and the spontaneously-flowing (streams) provide for us the produce of the herd and of the field ; and may the purple coursers (of the dawn) bestow upon us abundant food through a length of days.

SUKTA II. (CXLI.)

The deity, Rishi and metre the same.

INDEED that visible radiance of that brilliant (Agni) has been so apprehended (by all that it may be) for (the support of) the body for which it has been created by (bodily) strength ; my mind resorts to that radiance and attains to (wished-for objects) ; they address the sacred prayers associated with oblations (to Agni.)

2. First he lives (on the earth) as the digester of food,² the cause of the growth of the body,³ and eternal ; secondly (he lives) among the seven auspicious mothers (of fertility) ;⁴ thirdly the associated (regions)

1 Navam nityaritam padvatim : the boat is explained by Yajna the sacrifice, the oars are the priests, the materials are the fuel and apparatus, and the feet are the divinities, the prayers, and offerings.—Wilson.

2 Prikshah, explained by Sayana, anna sadhaka, the perfecter or digester of food.—Wilson.

3 Vapuh, explained vapushmat, having body ; but the Scholiast interprets it s'arirabhivridhi hetuh, the cause of the growth of the body.—Wilson.

4 Saptasivashu matrishu, the rains fertilizing the seven Lokas, or worlds.—Wilson.

generate him, delighting in the ten (quarters) of space for the sake of milking this showerer (of rain)¹

3. As priests, capable of performing their own functions, extract by force (of prayer)² this Agni from his primitive seat (for the evolvment) of his mighty form; as the wind arouses him lurking in the hiding-place (of the altar), for offering oblations now as of old.

4. As for securing the perfection of food (Agni) is engendered and the consumable branches rise amidst (the flames) and as both (the sacrificer and the priest combine for his generation, therefore has he been generated, pure, youthful, and radiant.

5. Therefore has the radiant Agni entered the mother-like (quarters of space) amidst which pure and

¹ Asya vrishabhasya dohase is the vague phrase of the text: accord- to Sayana, allusion is intended to the rays of the sun: in the preceding sentence, Agni is said to be represented as the terrestrial, maturative, or digestive fire, and as the electrical or ethereal element, or, lightning in the antariksha, or firmament; here he is identified with solar fire, or the sun in heaven, or as the solar rays, which in the hot season milk, as it were, the earth by the evaporation of its moisture, which is thus conveyed to the solar region, whence it is transferred to the clouds, and in due season descends again in rain.—Wilson.

² Or by bodily strength, applied to attrition as producing fire.

unseathed he had increased in magnitude so that he mounted (the bushes) placed before him as he had consumed others) prior to them and runs rapidly among the more recent and inferior branches.

6. The sacrificers who laud with hymns, adore the invoker (of the Devas) for (the propitiation) of the denizens of Dyus (Swarga), as men adore a powerful prince,¹ for the greatly-lauded and all-sustaining (Agni) knows how by (sacred) rite and (physical) strength to bring together the Devas and their mortal worshippers² for the sake of obtaining mutual sustenance.

7. Since the worshipful (Agni), impelled by the wind, spreads on all sides, like an insincere and unrestrained chatterer (who utters indiscriminate) praises,³ therefore the world is assiduous in the worship of him, the consumer of all, whose way is dark, who is pure of birth, and follows various paths.

8. Like a chariot drawn by ropes, Agni, moved by his own revolving members,⁵ proceeds to Swarga ;

1 Bhagam, the Scholiast explains Bhaga, a great prince ; the more usual sense were Aditya, or the sun.—Wilson.

2 The Devas who resided in Swarga were long-lived and hence they are describe as immortal ; whereas their descendents, when they migrated to Prithivi or India, became short-lived and are called mortal.

3 Hvaro n vakva jarana anakritah : hvarah is explained by kutila, crooked ; vakva by bahu-vakta, a much-speaker ; anakritah is unrestrained, anivaritah ; the verb is understood ; jarunah implies stutih, praises.—Wilson.

4 If the text is literally translated it means :—"In whose way i. e. Sacrifice, men, who are capable of pleasing by laudation, exist." Some has translated it as "in whose way antariksha exists" meaning that Agni in his passage from Swarga to Prithvi, passes through Antariksha, (a tract of country lying between both).

5 Literally limbs. In the Rig-Veda we find two Agnis—one the element and the other a powerful Devatâ coming from Swarga. Here evidently Agni is a powerful Devatâ returning from Prithivi to Swarga destroying the enemies and their countries on his way.

the paths he traverses are blackened by smoke, as he consumes (the forest), and beasts and birds fly from his radiance as (enemies fly from the prowess) of a hero.

9. By thee Agni, Varuna, observant of his duties, and Mitra and Aryaman, bountiful divinities are animated, so that thou hast been born comprehending them all universally in all (their) functions, and encompassing (them all) as the circumference (encompasses) the spokes (of a wheel).

10. Most useful Agni for the behoof of him who lauds thee and offers thee libations, thou makest the precious (offering) acceptable to the Devas : O youthful and rich son of Bala, we glorify thee, who art to be lauded, to whom rich offerings (are to be presented) in hymn, as (men) do unto a powerful prince.

11. In like manner as thou conferrest upon us riches, (so thou bestowest upon us) a well-disposed, docile, and energetic (son), the receptacle (of learning and other merits),¹ one who is the performer of holy rites, Agni, who regulates, as it were, his own rays, and the condition of) both (his) births, or heaven and earth) he regulates at (our) sacrifice the adoration of the gods.

12. May he who is one with light, who has fleet horses, the invoker (of the gods), full of joy, and borne in a golden chariot, listen to us : may that irresistible, yet placable Agni, conduct us, by the most efficacious (means), to that desirable and accessible (heaven).

¹ Rayim na swartham bhagam daksham na dharnasim : the commentary supplies putram, a son but the passage is obscure : daksham na might mean like Daksha, and bhaga might be a substantive ; but the former is explained utsahavantam, having energy, and the latter sarvair bhajaniyam, to be enjoyed, or approved of by all ; dharnasim is explained vidyader dhârana kusalam, skilful in containing knowledge, &c.

13. Agni, possessing eminent (fitness) for supreme sovereignty, has been glorified by us with holy rites, and with hymns: Let all who are present, as well as we ourselves, enriched (by his favour), shout aloud (the praise of Agni, as loudly as the sun (causes) the rain-cloud (to thunder).

SUKTA III. (CXIII.)

THE Rishi is Dirghatamas; the hymn is addressed to the Apris or Agnī in their personifications, being the same as those specified in the 13th Sukta; many of the expressions are identical, and the differences arise chiefly from the difference of metre, which in the earlier hymn is Gayatri, and in the present Anushtubh.

1. Agni, who art Samiddha, bring the gods today (to the worshipper), whose ladle is uplifted: extend (the merit of) former sacrifice to the giver (of the offering), by whom the Soma libation is poured forth.

2. Tanunapât, be present at this well-flavoured and butter-fed sacrifice, (the offering) of a pious offerer (of oblations); glorifying thee.

3. The pure, purifying, wonderful Narâs'ansa,¹ an adorable god among gods, (having come) from heaven, thrice² mixes the sacrifice with the sweet (juice of the Soma).

4. Agni, who art Ilita, bring hither Indra, the wonderful, the beloved: this my praise is recited, bright-tongued, before thee.

¹ Naras'ansa, according to the Kâtthakas, is especially the deity presiding over sacrifice,—Yajnaśhmani devah.—Iti so.

² He comes thrice, or he thrice bestows rewards, is all the explanation given in the commentary: probably allusion is intended to the three daily sacrifices.

5. The priests, bearing ladles, are strewing the sacred grass in this holy sacrifice, to prepare a god-frequented and well-spread abode for Indra.

6. Let the bright, separable doors,¹ the augmenters of sacrifice, the purifiers of rites, the desired of many, be set open for the gods to enter.

7. Beautiful night and morning, ever hymned, ever associated, progeny (of time), parents of sacrifice, sit down of your own good will on the sacred grass.

8. May the two pleasing-tongued receivers of praise, the divine and sage invokers (of the gods), officiate to-day at this our sacrifice, which confers (rewards) and attains heaven.²

9. May the pure Hotra,³ placed among the gods, and Bhârati, among the Maruts, and may the adorable Ila, Saraswati, and Mahi,⁴ sit down upon the sacred grass.

1 According to the Scholiast, the verse is addressed to the divinities presiding over the doors of the chamber of sacrifice: the phraseology is much the same as in the former hymn, vol. i. i. p. 32, with some additional epithets; asas'chata, there explained unentered, is here interpreted not adhering together, mutually separable; asajyamanaparapara viprakrishta, as if intending folding-doors but perhaps nothing more is meant than wide or open.

2 See note on the corresponding stanza, Hymn XIII. v. 8. The Scholiast here adds nothing to his former imperfect explanation: the epithet mandra-jihva he applies to Agni the two flames that give delight to the gods.

3 Hotra is explained homa-nishpadika, the presenter of the 'oblation; deveshu arpita, delivered amongst the gods; or the praisers or priests: the latter being expressed by Marutsu, with which, however, Bharati seems more naturally connected,—marutsu-bharati; the term is explained by vach, situated in heaven, dyusthana, and connected with Bharata, an Aditya, or name of the sun.

4 These the Scholiast considers as sound, vach, or the goddesses presiding over it in the three regions, severally of earth, firmament, and heaven.

10. May Twashtri, favourably disposed towards us, send to us, for our nourishment and prosperity, the quick (falling), wonderful, abundant (water),¹ in the centre (of the cloud, effecting) of itself much (good).

11. Vanaspati,² here {present of your own accord, convey our offerings to the gods; the divine and intelligent Agni accepts (the oblations) for the deities.

12. (Priests), present the oblation with Swāhā to Indra, in the form of the Gāyatri,³ along with Pushan and the Maruts;⁴ also to the assembled gods, and to Vāyu.

13. Approach, Indra, to partake of the oblations consecrated with Swāhā; approach and hear the invocation, as they invoke thee to the sacrifice.

1 The text has epithets only; turiyam adbhutam puru varam puru tmanā; the Scholiast supplies udakam, water.

2 Nābhā-nabhau meghasya avasthitam udakam, that is, rain; Twashtri is here said to be the personified electric fire, or lightning, in which capacity he is the sender of rain, vrishyādeh kartta.

3 The fire, or Agni of the sacrificial post, or yupa, from its being of timber.

4 Gayatra-vepase: gayatra is said to be put for the Itara-sama: vepas is the same as rupa; gayatram-rupam yasya; is Gāyatravepas, a name or form of Indra.

5 It is literally having or possessed of Pushan or the Maruts,—Pushanvate-marutwate: viswadevaya in the sing, is explained by the commentator viswadeva sanghāya, the assemblage of all the gods; but it may be intended, like the other epithets, to identify Indra with all the deities: the personification of Agni, however, is Swāhā, as one of the A'pris.

6 This stanza is one in addition to the former hymn, and seems superfluous.

SUKTA IV. (CXLIII.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi Dirghatamas; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishtubh.

I OFFER devoutly to Agni, the son of strength, an in vigorating and most new sacrifice, with words of adoration; (that Agni), the grandson of the waters,¹ who, (present) in due season, the friend and ministering priest (of the sacrificer), sits upon the altar,² with (many) good things.

2. As soon as born, was that (Agni) manifested to Mâtâriswan³ in the highest atmosphere, and his radiance, kindled by vigorous effort, spread through heaven and earth.

3. His radiance is undecaying; the rays of him who is of pleasing aspect, are everywhere visible and bright: the intensely shining, all-pervading, unceasing, undecaying (rays) of Agni, desist not⁴ (from their functions)

4. Bring to his own abode with hymns that Agni, the possessor of all riches, whom the descendants of Bhrigu placed by the strength of all beings upon the navel of the earth: for, like Varuna, he reigns sole (monarch) over (all) treasure.

1 Apam-napat is here explained as in the text; vegetable substances, it is said, are the progeny of rain, and fire is the progeny of vegetable substances, timber, or fuel.

2 Prithivyam, literally on the earth, on the mound of earth constituting the altar.

3 To the wind, to be fanned into flame; according to another text, twam Agne prathamam matarîsvane avîrbhava, be first manifest, Agni, to the wind; or mâtârisvan may imply the Yajamana, or sacrificer.

4 Na rejante, do not tremble; they do not move, or are moved in burning, maturing, and the like; dahapakadishu na châlanti, na châlanti va anyaih or na may imply comparison, when bhâtvakshasor-na sindhavah will mean, like the rays of the sun.

5. Agni, who, like the roaring of the winds, like a victorious host, like the thunder-bolt in heaven, is not to be arrested, devours and destroys (our foes) with sharpened teeth, and, as a warrior (annihilates his enemies), he, (Agni), lays waste the woods.

6. May Agni be ever desirous of our praise; may the giver of wealth satisfy our utmost expectation with riches; may the inspirer (of our devotion) hasten our rites to fruition. I glorify him, the radiant-limbed (Agni) with this laudation.

7. The kindler (of the sacrificial fire) propitiates Agni of glistening form; the upholder of your ceremony, like a friend; well kindled and well supplied (with fuel);¹ blazing brightly at holy rites, he illumines our pure and pious observances.

8. Agni, never heedless (of us), guard us with never needless, auspicious, and joy-bestowing cares; do thou, who art desired (by all), protect us, and those born of us, with unobstructed, unovercome, and never-slumbering (vigilance).

SUKTA V. (CXLIV.)

THE ministering priest (qualified) by experience, and possessing exalted and graceful devotion, proceeds (to celebrate) his, (Agni's), worship, having circumambulated (the altar), he takes up the ladles which are first to present the oblations.

¹ Akrah, which is derived from kram, to go, and is explained by akranta or anukranta, surpassed, or exceeded by; Jwala samidadibhih, flame, fuel, and the like: the exact sense is not very obvious.

² Ya asya dhama prathamam ha ninsate, literally, which first liss his dwelling, agneh sthanam chumbanti.

2. The drops of rain, enveloped (by the solar rays), are renewed in the dwelling of the divine (sun), their birth-place: when he, (Agni), abides cherished on the lap of the waters, then (the world) drinks the nectareous (rain), with which he, (as the lightning), associates.

3. The two¹ (priests, the Hotri and Adhwaryu), of equal honour, and alike assiduous, labouring mutually for a common object, combine the form of Agni (with their respective functions); whereupon he, to whom the oblation is to be offered, collects the drops (of clarified butter), as Bhaga (accepts the worship of all), or as a charioteer (gathers the reins of the horses) that draw (the car).²

4. He, whom the two, a pair of equal power, dwelling in the same ceremony, worship night and day: he, whether old or young, has been engendered for the sake of mortal couples, accepting many (oblations), and exempt from decay.

5. The ten fingers intertwined propitiate that divine (Agni), whom we mortals invoke for protection: he darts (his rays) like swift (arrows) from a bow, and accepts the new praises (uttered) by those who crowd round (the altar).

6. Thou, Agni, reignest over (the dwellers in) heaven, and over those of earth, according to thine own (will), as a herdsman over his (herd), and those two, (heaven and earth), bright, vast, adorable, beneficent, and sounding (agreeably) partake of the oblation.

1 Or the two, in both this and the next verse may refer to the husband and wife associated in the performance of the sacrifice.

2 The comparisons seem to have been suggested by the various meanings of ras'min, rays of light or reins, and here, also, streams of butter, spreading like rays; according to the Scholiast.

7. Agni, who conferrest happiness, who acceptest oblations, who was born for sacrifice, and art the performer of good works, be pleased (with this rite, attend to this prayer: for thou art in presence of all (the world), art visible (to all) art, please it in their sight, and art their refuge, like a (bountiful) distributor of food.

SUKTA VI. (CXLV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

ASK (of Agni what you desire), for he goes (every where), he knows (all things): possessed of intelligence, he proceeds¹ (to ascertain what is to be done), and is had recourse to (by his worshippers); for in him is the power of restraining (unreasonable desire), in him (is the power of granting) enjoyment;² he is the giver of food and of strength; the protector of the mighty.

2. They ask of Agni, but no one asks improperly; for a sensible man (replies to solicitation) as he has determined to his own mind; Agni tolerates not a speech that anticipates (his reply), nor endures a rejoinder ; he who is devoid of arrogance is favoured by his protection.

¹ The text has only iyate and nviyate. he goes, and goes quickly, or is gone to or worshipped, sevyate; the verb, having a passive signification; the amplification in both cases is the Scholiast's.

² Tasmin-t-santi pras'ishah tasminnishtayah: pras'isha is explained by pras'as'anani or niyamanasamarthyam, powers of restraining; that is, having restrained what is not to be accomplished, he is able to accomplish what may be effected; ishti is usually sacrifice; it is here put for bhogah, enjoyments; or it may mean those acts of worship which confer rewards.

3. To him the (sacrificial) ladles are directed ; to him (our) praises are addressed : he alone hears all my prayers ; he is the instigator of many, the transporter (across the world), the instrument of sacrifice, the unintermitting preserver (of mankind), and (gentle as) an infant : provided with the preparations (of sacrifice), he accepts the oblation.

4. When (the priest) proceeds to effect his development, he is (at once) manifested ; and as soon as engendered is associated with his object :¹ he provides for the gratification (of his worshipper), placidly engaged in the agreeable (rite), when the (oblations) that desire (his acceptance) reach him present (at the sacrifice.)

5. He the searcher, the accessible, the dweller in woods, has been placed (amidst the fuel), as in the similitude of (an enveloping) skin : the wise Agni, the appreciator of sacrifice, the veracious, has declared to mortals (the knowledge of their religious duties.

1 Na mrishyate prathamam naparam vachas : literally, he does not bear a first or a subsequent speech : the explanation is from the comment.

2 Tatsâra yujyebhih : the verb is tsara, to go ; yujya is that which may be joined with : the expression is vague, and the Scholiast offers different explanations : as being joined with abilities, that may be associated with their objects, or with energies (tejobhih) fit to be connected with their consequences, or with his horses joined to his car.

SUKTA VII. (CXLVI.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same

GLORIFY the three-headed, seven-rayed Agni;¹ who is subject to no diminution, seated on the lap of his parents, (heaven and earth); and gratifying all (desires); as the universal radiance of the divine (Agni,) whether moving or stationary, (spreads around).

2. The great showerer (of benefits) has pervaded these two (worlds); undecaying and adorable, he is (ever) present, bestowing protection: he places his foot on the summit of the earth, and his radiant (flames) lack the udder (of the firmament).

3. (There are) [two well-disposed milch cows² together approaching their common progeny, and fully nourishing (him; pointing out the paths that are free from all that is to be avoided, and possessing more than the great intelligence (necessary for his development.³

4. Experienced sages bring the invincible (Agni) to his station (on the altar); cherishing him in manifold (ways) in their hearts: desirous of propitiating him, they worship the (boon-) shedding (Agni); and to those men he is manifest as the Sun.

1 The three heads may be the three daily sacrifices, or the three household fires, or the three regions, heaven, earth, and mid-air. The seven rays are the seven flames of fire; or ras'mi, ordinarily a ray, may be used in the sense of rein or rule, when it may allude to the seven metres of the Vedas.

2 Either the institutor of the rite and the ministrant priest, or the sacrificer and his wife; the vatsa calf, or offspring, is Agni.

3 Vis'wan ketan adhi maho dadhane: keta is always rendered knowledge: so Sayana explains the phrase here sarvāni prajñāni pravardhana vishayāni, having for their object the augmentation of all sorts of wisdom of the highest description.

5. He is willing to be seen in the (ten) regions (of space); the victorious, the adorable, the source of life to great and small: inasmuch as in many places the opulent (possessor of sacrificial food) who is visible to all, is the parent of that (pious progeny).¹

SUKTA VIII. (CXLVII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

How have thy shining and evaporating (rays), Agni, supported life (and supplied) food; so that, enjoying both, the devout (worshippers), possessing sons and grandsons, may repeat the hymns of the sacrifice.

2. Youthful (Agni), to whom oblations are due, appreciate this my reverential and earnest praise: one man reviles (thee), another propitiates (thee); I, thy worshipper, glorify thy person.²

3. Thy fostering (rays), Agni, beholding the blind son of Mamatâ,³ relieved him of the affliction: he, who knows knows all things, protects the pious, and (their) malevolent enemies are unable to do them harm.

4. When a wicked (man), with two fold (malignity of thought and speech), obstructing our offerings, and

1 That is, the priests alluded to in the preceding stanza may be considered as the offspring of Agni, as they derive their character from the performance of his worship.

2 The verse occurs in the Yajush, xii. 42, and is explained by the Scholiast much to the same purport.

3 The Scholiast repeats the Pauranik legend of the birth of Dirghatamas from Mamata, the wife of Utatthya, but there is nothing in the text to warrant the application: the persons are obviously allegorical; Dirghatamas, long-darkness, being the blindness or ignorance which is the natural offspring of Mamatâ, mine-ness, or selfishness.

refraining from gifts (himself), reviles us, may his prayer be heavy on him, and involve his person (in the consequences of) his evil words.¹

5. When, Son of Strength, a man skilful (in deception) assails another man with a doubly (malignant prayer). do thou, Agni, duly propitiated, protect him who worships thee (from its effects) ; consign us not to misfortune

SUKTA IX. (CXLVIII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

THE wind, penetrating (amidst the fuel), has excited (Agni), the invoker (of the gods), the multiform, the minister of all the deities, whom they have established amongst mortal worshippers for the accomplishment of sacrifice,² like the wonderful and variously radiant sun.

2. Let not (my enemies) prevail against me, when presenting acceptable (oblations), for (Agni) is desirous of my so offered adoration, and all they (the gods) are gratified by the (pious) acts of me, the reciter of their praise and the celebrator (of the sacrifice).

3. Him, whom the worshippers lay hold of in his perpetual abode, they detain by their praises, and the holders convey him¹ diligently to the sacrifice, as rapid coursers, harnessed to a car, (bear the rider to his destination).

¹ There is some indistinctness of construction in this stanza, and it is not very clear whether the epithets aghayu, &c., should be referred to mantra, or to asmai, to him, the individual who utters it. Sayana leans to the latter, but the former seems most natural : in either case we have here an allusion to the use of maledictory prayers or imprecations.

² Vapushe is explained yajna siddhaye, for the fulfilment of the sacrifice, or of its object.

4. The destroyer, (Agni), consumes numerous (tress) by his flames, and shines with manifold radiance in the forest: the favouring wind blows (the flames) onwards day by day, like the swift arrows of an archer.

5. The blind (of intellect), or those who see not (physically), detract not from his glory, whom no enemies, no malevolent adversaries, harm, even whilst yet in (his) embryo (condition); for his constant encouragers defend him.

SUKTA X. (CXLIX.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Vairaja.

AGNI, the lord of great wealth, the (granter of desires), comes (to the place of sacrifice); he, the lord of lords; comes to the place of affluence, (the altar); the stones prepare (the libation for him) as he approaches.

2. He, who is, as it were, the generator of men as well as of heaven and earth, of whom creation has imbibed life, abides with his glories: he it is who, entering into the womb (of being), procreates (all living creatures).²

¹ Pranayanta alludes to an especial part of the usual ceremony; the solemn conveyance of fire from the Gârhapatya, or household, to the A'havaniya, or sacrificial fire.

² This is also another version of a familiar notion. Agni presents to the Sun the oblations offered with fire, and thence, becoming identified with the solar rays, engenders rain, on which the food and consequent existence of all living beings depends; of whom, therefore, Agni may be said to be the begotter.

3. He, who is wise, and goes (wheresoever he will), like the rapid ethereal (wind), has lighted up the delightful spot, (the altar), and, identical with many forms, is radiant as the sun.

4. He, the twofold-born,¹ illuminating the three bright (regions),² and shining over all the lustrous spheres, the adorable invoker of the gods, is present at the place where the waters are collected.³

5. He is the offerer of oblations, who is of twofold birth; and through desire for (sacrificial) food, has in his keeping all good things: the man who presents offerings to him is the parent of excellent offspring.

1. Devī-janma, as born either from the two pieces of sticks, or, in the first instance, from attrition; and in the second, from oblation: or it may be, born of earth and heaven, commonly termed the parents of Agni.

2. Trih rochanani, either, heaven, earth, and mid-air, or the three fires.

3. Apam sadasthe, according to Sayana, is the place of sacrifice where water is collected for the different purificatory sprinklings required: or it might be thought to refer to the antariksha, or firmament, in which Agni exists as lightning: this and the preceding verse occur in the Sama Veda, Benfey's edition, p. 152, l. 4. Professor Benfey's version differs, in some respects, from that of the text. "He, who illumines the place, the cheerful, (who is) the wise, the swift, like a horse, springing in the air like a bright sun, full of life;"—"The twofold-born abides, illuming with his radiance the three bright regions, all the world, the most sacred priest in the realm of the waters."

SUKTA XI. (CL.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Ushnik.

PRESENTING many offerings, I address thee, Agni, ever coming into thy presence (like a servant)¹ in the dwelling of a mighty master.²

2. (I ask thee also to withhold thy favour) from (those) two godless (persons), from the rich man, who, acknowledging thee not as his lord, is chary of gifts at sacred rites, and from him who rarely praises (the gods).

3. Sage Agni, the mortal (who propitiates thee) becomes a moon in heaven,³ the most eminent of the great (deities) : may we, therefore, ever be in an especial manner thy worshippers.

1 Arir-agne tava swidā : ari, in its ordinary sense of 'enemy,' would be rather unmeaning in this place; although Yāska countenance the interpretation, rendering it by Amitra, unfriend.—Nir. v. 7. But Sāyana explains it Artā, a servant, in the character of bringing oblations and the like before Agni,—Yato aham Agne tava swit tavaiva a abhimu khyena arir-arta havirādi prāpanena sevako-aham, 'Since I, Agni, going verily into thy presence for the purpose of conveying oblations, I am a servant.' The verse occurs in the Sāma, p. 11, l. 6. Benfey renders ari by Besturmer, an assailant.

2 Todasya, governor, a master; sikshakasya swaminah; literally, a tormentor; whence Benfey renders it Zwingherr, a tyrant.

3 Sa chandro martyah : the commentator explains it, he becomes like the moon, the rejoicer of all, āhlādakah sarvesham; or becomes even the moon, chandra eva bhavati, according to the Chhandogas : chandratwapraptim chhandoga amananti; the Chhandogas are authority for the obtaining of the condition of the moon : pitrilokad-akas'am, akas'ach-chandramasam esha Soma raja, from the region of the Pitris. to the A'kās'a, from the A'kas'a to the moon, this is Soma, the king. The Mundaka Upanishad is also quoted for the attainment of heaven; dyuloka praptih.

SUKTĀNĪTĪ (CLI.)

The deities are Mitra and Varuna the Rishi 'is the same'; the metre Yagati.

HEAVEN and earth have been terrified by the strength and the noise (of him), whom pious worshippers, desirous of acquiring cattle, have generated by their (sacred) acts, amidst the waters (of the firmament), at the sacrifice, as a friend¹ for the preservation of living beings, the benefactor (of man), and entitled to adoration.

2. Since they, (the priests), like friends, have prepared for you both, (Mitra and Varuna, a libation) of the abundantly-flowing and spontaneous Soma juices,² therefore do you consent to come to the rite of the worshipper, and listen, showerers (of blessings), to the (prayers of the) house-holder.

3. For the sake (of obtaining) great vigour, showerers (of benefits), men glorify your birth from heaven and earth,³ which is to be extolled, inasmuch as you bestow (his desires) upon the worshipper (as the reward) of his sacrifice, and accept the rite (that is solemnized) with praise and oblation.

4. Powerful divinities, most acceptable to you both is that spot, (where you are worshipped): acceptors of sacrifice, proclaim the great ceremony (as duly performed); for you two connect the efficacious and

1 Mitram na, although implying a comparison of Agni to a friend, conveys also, with reference to the hymn's being partly addressed to Mitra, the notion of his identification with Agni, especially as the Agni of the firmament, or lightning.

2 Purumilhasya sominah may be also rendered, of the Soma offering Purumilha; the name of a prince:

3 Vam janma rodasyoh is explained yuvayoh sambandhi janma, jananam-utpattim, dyavaprithivyoh sakás'át, the birth connected with you two from heaven and earth comprehensive rite with the vast¹heaven, like a cow with a burthen.¹

5. You bring the cattle upon the earth to their favourite (pasture, whence), protected from harm by your power, the milch kine, yielders of milk, return to their stalls; they cry aloud to the sun (in heaven) above.

6. You bring (the cattle) to their acceptable (pasture) upon earth, whence the milk-yielding cows, protected by your power, return unharmed to their stalls: they cry to the sun (in heaven) above, both at evening and at dawn, as one (cries aloud) who detects a thief.

7. The tresses of Agni minister, Mitra and Varuna, to your sacrifice, when you honour (with your presence) the sacrificial chamber: send down of your own accord (the rain), and prosper our offerings, for you have command over the praises of the pious men.

8. Come to the devout (worshipper), who glorifying you, and providing (all that is) acceptable, presents you with oblations; (to him), the sage, the invoker, who offers you worship: accept this sacrifice; favourably disposed towards us, (accept) our praises.

9. Accepters of sacrifices, you are the first whom (worshippers) propitiate with offerings, the produce of the cow; like (the application) of the mind (in the first in-ance) to the results (of the senses) : hymns (prompted) by thoughts wholly intent upon you, celebrate (your praise) : do you, with humble minds, bestow upon us wealth.

1 Divo brihato daksham abhuvam gam na dhuri upayunjathe apas, you two join the work (opus), able (to support the burthen) of heaven, and applying to all creatures, as a cow to a load: the sense is not very obvious, although it is clear that the adequacy of worship or sacrifice to effect its objects, or realize its rewards, is intended, as the cow is able to bear a burden suited to her bodily strength: dhuri-s'arirabalasya. nirvahe tad-artham gam na dhenum iva; or it may allude to her ability to give milk and the rest, kshiradikam iva.

10. You distribute food, accompanied by riches ; you bestow upon us, leaders (of sacrifice), wealth, ample, and defended by your wise provisions : the days with the nights¹ have not attained your divinity : neither have the rivers, nor have the Asuras, and they have not obtained (your) wealth.²

SUKTA XIII. (CLII.)

Divinities, Rishi and metre, the same.

ROBUST³ Mitra and Varuna, you wear vestments (of light ; your natures are to be regarded as without defect ; you annihilate all untruths ; you associate (us) with sacrifice.

1 Dyāvo ahabhir na : according to the Scholiast, these words are employed in an unusual acceptation ; dyāvah meaning days, an ahan, night.

2 Nanasur-magham ; anasuh-prapnuvanti applies to all the substantives, each of which also is provided with a negative separately ; na-vam dyāvo, etc. : the connection of the negative with the verb in the last place requires, therefore a new nominative, they, or something like it, being understood : the purport of the whole is, according to the comment that there is no one in the three worlds more powerful than Mitra and Varuna ; Lokatrāye yuvayoh parābhavitāro na ke api santi.

3 Pivasa may mean pinau, fat, stout, when it will be the epithet of Mitravaruna ; or achhinnani, untorn ; vastrani, garments : or it may be in the third case, sing, with great or intense radiance, tejasa, understood.

2. He amongst those (who are your followers)¹ who observes truth, who is considerate, who is commended by the wise, who is able to (inflict) harm, carefully weighs (the means whereby), fierce and well-armed, he slays (a foe) less efficiently accoutred,² and (by which) the revilers of the gods, however mighty, may perish.

3. Who knows, Mitra and Varuṇa, that it is your doing, that the footless dawn is the precursor of footed beings;³ and that your infant (progeny, the sun), sustains the burthen of this world: he defuses (the) truth (of light), and disperses the falsehood (of darkness).

4. We behold the lover of the maiden (dawns)⁴ ever in movement, never resting for an instant, wearing inseparable and diffusive (radiance), the beloved abode of Mitra and Varuṇa.

5. Without steeds, without stay, (he is nevertheless) borne swift-moving and loud-sounding; he travels, ascending higher and higher, connecting the inconceivable

1 Etachchana twa leśham is resolved by the Scholiast into éyayor 'madhye twas'chana ekah, one of you two, the plural being used honorifically; implying, if one of you, Mitra or Varuṇa, can do such things (etad) how much more irresistible must you be together: or eśham may mean tad-anucharā, their followers or worshippers.

2 Trirāśrim-hanti chaturāśrih, literally, he who has a quadrangular weapon kills him who has triangular one; meaning merely that he who has most arms, adhikāyudhavan, is more than a match for one who has fewer or inferior.

3 Mitra and Varuṇa are respectively divinities presiding over day and night, consequently the break of day, and the course of the sun, may be considered as their work: the dawn is termed apād or footless, or not moving by its own feet or steps, but as depending upon the motion of the sun.

The Sun,

mystery¹ (of sacred rites) with the radiance (abiding) in Mitra and Varuṇa, (which men) eulogising, glorify.

6. May the milch kine, propitious to the devout son of Mamata, be possessed of well-filled udders;² knowing the rites (necessary to be performed), let him beg³ (the residue) of the offerings for his eating, and worshipping (you both) complete the perfect (ceremony).

7. Divine Mitra and Varuṇa, may I render the oblation acceptable to you with reverence and prayer; may the sacred rite enable us (to overcome) in battles, and may the heavenly rain⁴ be to us the means of satisfying our wants.

SUKTA XIV. (CLIII).

Divinities, Rishi, and metre, the same.

MIGHTY Mitra and Varuṇa, dispensers of butter, we worship you, rejoicing, with oblations; with reverential homage, and with (offerings of) water; so that our ministrant priests may propitiate you by (our) devotions.

2. The purpose of worshipping you, Mitra and Varuṇa, is not the performance, but (even by so much)

1 Ackittam brahma yuvanah : achittam is explained chittavisahyam, not an object of the mind or thought; brahma is interpreted parivridham ukta-rupam karma, the act of which the nature is declared very great : the expressions are obscure.

2 For the purpose of supplying appropriate offerings to Mitra and Varuṇa, which are said by another text to be the products of milk : Mitra-varuṇa-bhyam payasyeti s'ruteh.

3 Pitwo bhiksheta, let him beg of or for food; that is, for what is not consumed in oblations.

4 Let the rain be supara, carrying us well across, or to the completion of our duties, by causing the growth of grain which is to be offered in sacrifice.

I may attain to your glory, and there is acquittance (of my duty);¹ for when the priest offers you oblations in sacrifices, the pious man, showerers (of benefits) being desirous of worshipping you, (obtains) felicity.

3. Let the productive milch cow, Mitra and Varuna, furnish abundant nutriment to the pious man who presents you with oblations, as when Râtaḥavya,² glorifying you, propitiates you in the solemnity, like the ministrant priest of a man (who institutes the rite).

4. May the divine cows, and the waters, supply you with (sacrificial) food, for the prosperity of the people whom you favour; or may (Agni), the former protector of this (our patron), be the donor (of the oblation): eat (of the butter and curds), drink of the milk of the kine.³

SUKTA XV. (CLIV.)

The Rishi and metre are the same; but the deity is Vishnu.

EARNESTLY I glorify the exploits of Vishnu, who made the three worlds; who sustained the lofty aggregate

¹ Prastutih vām dhāma na prayuktir-ayāmi, suvriktih, lit. the previous purpose of praising you is not the fulfilment, but I come to your abode well detached; suvriktih-sobhana kṣarjako yushmat parigraha, the meaning of which is not very obvious.

² The name of Raja, according to the Scholiast.

³ Vitam patam payasa usriyayāh, eat drink, of the milk, of the cow; the eating implies the coagulation of the milk, or curds, butter, or the like.

⁴ Prathivani vimame rajansi, lit. he made the earthly regions: but according to Sayana, prithivi is used here in the sense of the three worlds,—atra trayo loka api prithivi s'abdavachya; as in the text, in which Indra and Agni are said to abide in the lower, middle and upper prithivi, or world,—yad-Indragani avamasyam prithiviam madhymasyam one (of the spheres);¹ thrice traversing² (the whole);

who is praised by the exalted.

2. Vishnu is therefore glorified, that by his prowess he is like a fearful, ravenous, and mountain-haunting wild beast, and because that in his three paces all worlds abide.

3. May acceptable vigour attend Vishnu, who abides in prayer, the hymned of many, the showerer (of benefits), who alone made, by three steps, this spacious and durable aggregate (of the three worlds.)

paramasyam uta stha; the stanza occurs in the Yajush, v. 18, where Mahidhara explains prithivi in a similar manner; he also suggests that parthivani rajansi may mean atoms of earth,—parthiva paramanun; Sayana also proposes to extend the meaning still further and include the seven lower lokas; or to limit it to the three regions addressed in prayer, Bhuh, Bhuvar, Swar; but these alternatives are superfluous.

1 Uttaram sadastham askabhayaḥ : Sadhastha, 'according to Sayana, is the firmament, as the asylum of the three regions,—lokatrayas'rayabhutam antariksham : or it may be, the seven regions above the earth; or the highest region of all, whence there is no return; or the abode of the righteous, the Satya-loka. Mahidhara makes it heaven, the region where the gods dwell together. Askabhayaḥ Sayana considers equivalent to nirmityavan, created; Mahidhara explains it, propped it up so that should not fall. Some of these notions of the commentator are rather pantheistic than vaidik.

2 Vishvakramanaś tredha : traversing in various ways his own created worlds in Sayana's explanation; Mahidhara says, going in the three regions, as Agni, Vayu, A'ditya, or fire in the earth, air in the firmament, and the Sun in heaven.

3 Mriga, or, as Sayana renders it, Sinha, a lion, as applicable to Vishnu: it is said to mean one who seeks for his enemies to inflict punishment on them, and is therefore fearful and fierce: giri-sthah may imply either he who dwells on high, or who abides in prayer, and the like,—mantradirupayam vaci varttamanah.

4 Giri-kshīt, who dwells in speech, as before explained, or who abides in high places,

4. Whose three imperishable paces, filled with ambrosia, delight, (mankind) with sacred food; who verily alone upholds three elements,¹ and earth and heaven.

5. May I attain his favourite path,² in which god-seeking men delight; (the path) of that wide-stepping Vishnu, in whose exalted station there is a (perpetual) flow of felicity; for to such a degree is he the friend (of the pious).

6. We pray (to Vishnu) that you may both³ go to those regions where the many-pointed and wide-spreading rays (of light expand); for here the supreme station of the many-hymned, the showerer (of benefits), shines (with) great (splendour.)

¹ Tridhâtu, the aggregate of the three elements, earth, water light: prithivyaptejorupadhatutravavisishtham; or it may imply the three periods of time, or the three qualities; the first seems preferable, although the enumeration differs from that of the philosophical schools.

² The firmament,—patho antariksham.—Yaska Ni, vi. 7.

³ The sacrificer and his wife. This stanza occurs in the Yajush, vi. 3, with some difference of reading and of sense: instead of tâ vâm vâstunus'masi gamadhyai, it begins yâ te dhamanyus'masi gamadhyai: those places to which we desire your going; the hymn being addressed, it is said, to the Yupa, or post of sacrifice, at the time of trimming it into shape; the rest of the verse is the same, except at the end, where we have avabhari for avabhati; r, it is said, being sometimes substituted for t in the Veda.

SUKTA XVI. (CLV.)

THE deities are Vishnu and Indra, the first triplet being addressed to the latter ; the Rishi is the same ; the metre is Jagati.

OFFER your nutritious viands to the great hero, (Indra), who is pleased by praise, and to Vishnu, the two invincible deities who ride upon the radiant summit of the clouds, as upon a well-trained steed.

2. Indra and Vishnu, the devout worshipper glorifies the radiant approach of you two, who are the granters of desires, and who bestow upon the mortal who worships you an immediately-receivable (reward), through the distribution of that fire which is the scatterer (of desired blessings).¹

3. These (oblations) augment his, (Indra's), mighty manhood, by which he fits the parents (of all creatures heaven and earth), for generation and enjoyment ; whereby, in the upper region of the sky, the son has an inferior and superior appellation, and a third (name) of a father.²

4. Therefore, verily, we celebrate the manhood of that lord (of all), the preserver, the innocuous, the vigorous, who traversed the three regions with three wide steps, in different directions, for the many praised (preservation of) existence.

¹ Kris'ânor astuh, of fire, which is the scatterer (of good things : or, in a different sense, the disperser of enemies—nirasitâ satrunâm.

² Dadhâti putro avaram param pitur náma trityam : the phrase is very obscure ; Sáyana explains it, the son of the father has an inferior name, or that of grandson ; a superior, or that of son ; and a third, which, with respect to them, is that of father ; the meaning is, that oblations, ascending to the solar region, nourish Indra and Vishnu, as two of the A'dityas, or forms of the Sun ; who thereupon sends down rain, whereby the earth is rendered fruitful, and the generations of man are sustained ; whence fathers, sons and grandsons are successively engendered.

5. Man, glorifying (Vishnu), tracks two steps of that heaven-beholding (deity), but he apprehends not the third;¹ nor can the soaring-winged birds (pursue it).²

6. He causes, by his gyrations, ninety and four periodical revolutions,³ like a circular wheel, vast of body, and evolving in many forms, through the praises (addressed to him); ever young, though not infantine, he comes at our invocations.

SUKTA XVII. (CLVI).

The deity is Vishnu; the Rishi and the metre are as before.

BE (to us), Vishnu, like a friend, the giver of happiness, the accepter of oblations, abounding with food, the granter of protection, and every way accessible; on which account thy praise is to be repeatedly recited by the wise, and thy worship to be celebrated by the offerer of oblations.

2. He who presents (offerings) to Vishnu, the ancient, the creator, the recent, the self-born; he who ¹ His path on earth and in the firmament is within mortal observation; not so that in heaven.

² Vayas'chana patayanta patatrinah; Sâyana distinguishes these, making the two first, the everywhere going Maruts; Patatrina may mean Garuda, and other birds, or the winds.

³ Vishnu is here identified with Time, comprising ninety-four periods: the year, two solstices, five seasons, twelve months, twenty-four half-months, thirty days, eight watches, and twelve zodiacal signs.

⁴ Yuvâ akumârah, young, not a boy. Sayana renders the latter analpah, not little.

celebrates the great birth of that mighty one ; he, verily possessed of abundance, attains (the station) that is to be sought (by all).

3. Hymners, propitiate of your own accord¹ that ancient Vishnu, since you know him as the germ of sacrifice ; cognizant of his greatness, celebrate his name ; may we, Vishnu, enjoy thy favour.

4. The royal Varuṇa associates (himself) with the the sacrifice of the pious worshipper, assisted by the company of the priests ; the As'wins (unite with it) : Vishnu, with his friend (Indra), possesses supreme heaven-conferring power,⁵ and sits upon the clouds.

¹ Sravobhir yujyam chidabhyasat, by food, or by fame, he attains whatsoever is to be joined with. Sayana does not make the meaning much clearer, although he supplies what he thinks necessary for completing the ellipse ; annair-yuktah san sarvair gantavyam tat padam gachchhati.

² Janushâ piparttana ; literally, please or propitiate (him) by your birth, is explained swata eva, of yourself, or spontaneously, not, as, Sayana adds from any interested motive na kenachidvara-lâbhâdinâ.

⁵ Dadhara daksham uttamam aharvidam, he has the best power cognizant of day : Sayana explains the last, generative of Swarga, Swargotpâdakam.

⁶ Or sends down rain.

5. The divine Vishnu, the best of the doers of good deeds, who came to the pious institutor of the rite,⁷ to assist (at the celebration) knowing (the desires of the worshipper), and present at the three connected periods (of worship)⁸ shows favour to the A'rya, and admits the author of the ceremony to a share of the sacrifice.⁹

7 Sachathâya Indrâya : the first is explained, for giving assistance at the ceremony ; the second, to the Yajamana, or sacrificer : upon the strength of one of Yaska's various etymologies of Indra, irâm dravayati, who pours out the sacrificial food or oblation.—Ni, x. 8.

8 Trisadhastham may allude to the three daily celebrations of worship, or to the three worlds.

9 Ritasys bhage may also mean the share that follows the rite ; the blessing granted as a reward.

ANUVAKA XXII.

SUKTA I. (CLVII)

THE deities are the As'wins ; the Rishi is Dirghatamas ; the metre of the first four stanzas, Jagati ; of the two last, Trishtubh.

AGNI is awakened upon earth : the Sun rises : the spreading dawn, exhilarating (all) by her radiance, has dispersed (the darkness) ; harness, (therefore), As'wins, your chariot, to come (to the sacrifice), that the divine Savitri may animate all beings to (the performance of) their several (duties).

2. When, As'wins, you harness your bounty-shedding chariot, refresh our strength with trickling honey :¹ bestow (abundant) food upon our people :² may we acquire riches in the strife of heroes.

3. May the three-wheeled car of the As'wins drawn by swift horses, laden with honey, three-canopied, filled with treasure, and every way auspicious, come to our presence, and bring prosperity to our people and our cattle.³

1 Madhunā ghritena is variously explained : madhu may be an adjective for madhura, sweet, with sweet water ; or it may be a substantive for Amrita, ambrosia, with trickling nectar ; or it may have the usual meaning of honey, especially with reference to the next verse, where the chariot of the Aswins is termed Madhuvāhana, honey-bearing.

2 Asmakam brahma pritanāsu : Pritana is a synonyme of Manushya, in the Nighantu of Yaska ; that is according to Sayana children and dependants. Brahma is, amongst other senses, a synonyme of anna, food, which is the interpretation here preferred by the commentator.

3 Dwipade-chatushpade, literally, to our bipeds and quadrupeds : this and the two preceding stanzas occur in the second part of the Sama, v 1108-1110.

THIRD ADHYAYA.

SUKTA II. (CLVII.)

THE deities are the Aswins; the Rishi Dirghatamas; the metre Trishtubh, except in the last stanza, in which it is Jagati.

DASRAS, showerers (of benefits), granters of dwellings,¹ dispellers of sin,² cognizant of many (things), increasing (through praise), and fulfillers (of desires), inasmuch as Auchatthya offers you (sacrificial) wealth, and you protect (your worshippers) with unobjectionable aids, bestow upon us (our prayers).

2. Granters of dwellings, who may make you offerings so propitiatory of that your good will, that (invoked) by our adoration, to the site [of the altar,³ you may entertain (favourable intentions towards us), and grant us kine rich in milk,⁴ coming with minds made up to grant the desires (of the worshipper).

3. In like manner, As'wins, as your strong-drawn (car), able to cross (the sea), was placed, harnessed, in

1 Vasus-vasayitarau prajanam, causers of the habitations of man kind; or it may mean possessors of Vasu, wealth.

2 The term in the text is simply Rudras, from rut, which may mean pain, or its cause, sin; and dru, what drives away; or if derived from rut, to sound, it may import those who shout in battle; but in this, as in the case of Vasus, it may be intended to apply them to the As'wins, as identical with the classes of demi gods so denominated.

3 Pade goh, lit. to the place of the earth, which, as has been already noticed, often designates the Vedi, or altar, as it is here explained to signify.

4 Revatih purandih, lit. wealth-possessing, sustainers of the body which the Scholiast explains to mean, cows abounding in milk.

the middle of the water, for (the rescue of) the son of Turga,¹ so may I attain to your preserving protection (with the same alacrity) as a victorious hero (returns home) with bounding steeds.

4. May the praise addressed to you, As'wins, preserve the son of Uchatthya: let not these revolving (days and nights) exhaust me: let not the ten times kindled fire consume me: let [it not be, that one who is your (dependant), bound (with bonds), should of himself bite the earth.²

5. Let not the maternal waters swallow me, since the slaves hurled down this decrepit (old man); in the manner as Traitana wounded his head, so has the slave wounded his own, and has struck his breast and shoulders.³

6. Dirghatamas, the son of Mamatâ, has grown old after the tenth yuga (has passed):⁴ he is the

² Tmani khadate ksham, lit. by himself he eats the earth; according to Sayana, being unable, from age and infirmity, to walk, he crawls or rolls on the ground.

Brahmâ of those who seek to obtain the object of their (pious) works : he is their charioteer.¹

SUKTA III. (CLIX.)

THE deities are Heaven and Earth ; the Riski is the same the metre is Jagati.

I GLORIFY with sacred rites the mighty Heaven and Earth, the augmenters of sacrifice, who (are to be contemplated) with devotion at holy ceremonies ; those two, who, cherishing their worshippers as children,² are venerated by the devout, and therefore with favour bestow (upon us) desirable blessings.

2. Verily I propitiate, by my invocations, the mind of the benevolent father, and the great and spontaneous (affection) of the mother (of all beings).³ The parents, with kindness, have secured, by their excellent protections, the vast and manifold immortality of their progeny.

1 Apam artham yatinam brahma bhavati sarathih : he is the Brahma like Brahma, the great, the chief ; parivridha, the progenitor, or creator of people, Apam is explained apkaryanam, of those by whom offerings of water, obsequial libations to the Manes are to be made ; or it may be put for Apasam, of works, religious rites in general. Sarathi, lit. a charioteer, is explained a conveyer, i. e. to heaven, a deity.

2 Devebhir ye devaput্রে sudansasa might be rendered, who having the gods for children, are revered by the gods ; but Sayana explains deva in both terms by yajamana.

3 Heaven, Dyuloka, is said here to be the father, and Earth, Prithivi, the mother, agreeably to the text,—Dyaur voh pitâ, prithivi, mata. Mata is explained by Yâska to denote the Antariksha, the firmament.—Nir. II, 8.

3. These, your children, the performers of good works, and of goodly appearance, recognize you as their great parents, through experience of former (kindness): preserve uninterrupted stability in the functions of your progeny, whether stationary or moving (depending for existence) on none other than you.¹

4. Those provident and intelligent sisters, (the rays of light), conceived of the same womb, (ever) united (with each other), and dwelling in the same abode, mete out (all things): knowing (their functions), and bright-shining, they spread in ever new (directions throughout the radiant firmament).²

5. We solicit to-day of the divine sun, his favour being propitiated, that wealth which is desirable. Benignant Heaven and Earth, bestow upon us riches, (consisting of) habitations and hundreds (of cattle and the like).

¹ Adwayavinah, having no second parent or protector, no other to depend upon for subsistence.

² The construction of this stanza is very irregular: the epithets should agree with te, they two; but some are in the plural, not the dual, as te mayinah suprachetasah, kavayah, suditayah, along with others in the dual, sayoni, samokasa: the Scholiast seems to understand the plurals to imply another substantive understood, or rasmayah, rays of light, as he explains suprachetasah by prakarshena chetitum saktâ rasmayah, rays able distinctly to apprehend; and again, suditayah, udyotanah, ras'mayah, rising rays; but he does not show how they can be connected with the duals, which he refers consistently enough to 'heaven and earth;' as in his interpretation of samohasa, both dwelling together in the same space,—dyuprithivyor-ekasminanevavakasarupe âkâse-avasthânat. In this and the text stanza there seems to have arisen some confusion of ideas, some relating to the Sun and others to the acknowledged objects of the hymn, Heaven and Earth.

SUKTA IV (CLX.)

The deities, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

THOSE two, the divine Heaven and Earth, are the diffusers of happiness on all, encouragers of truth, able to sustain the water (of the rains), auspicious of birth, and energetic (in action): in the interval between whom proceeds the pure and divine Sun for (the discharge of his) duties.

2. Wide-spreading, vast, unconnected, the father and mother (of all beings), they two preserve the worlds. Resolute, as if (for the good) of embodied (beings), are Heaven and Earth, and the father has invested every thing with (visible) forms.

3. The pure and the resolute son of (these) parents, the bearer (of rewards);¹ sanctifies the worlds by his intelligence; as well as the milch cow (the earth), and the vigorous bull (the heaven), and daily milk (of the sky).

4. He it is, amongst gods (the most divine), amongst (pious) works the most pious, who gave birth to the all-delighting heaven and earth: who measured them both, and, for the sake of holy rites, propped them up with undecaying pillars.

5. Glorified by us, grant to us, Heaven and Earth, abundant food and great strength; whereby we may daily multiply mankind: bestow upon us commendable vigour.

¹ Sa vahni putrah pitroh; the term Vahni might suggest that Fire, or Agni, was here alluded to; but the affiliation intended in this and the preceding verse is that of A'ditya, the Sun, and Vahni is an epithet only; the bearer of the rewards of pious rites, phalasya bodhâ.

SUKTA V. (CLXI.)

THE Ribhus are the deities; Dirghatamas is still the Rishi; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishtubh.

Is this our senior or our junior who has come (to us); has he come upon a message (from the gods); what is it we should say? Agni, brother, we revile not the ladle which is of exalted race; verily we assert the dignity of the wooden (implement).¹

2. Make fourfold the single laddle; so the gods command you; and for that purpose am I come, sons of Sudhanwan: if you accomplish this you will be entitled to sacrifice along with the gods.

3. Then said they, in answer to Agni, the messenger (of the gods), Whatever is to be done, whether a horse is to be made, or a car is to be done, or a cow is to be made, or the two (old parents) are (to be made young,²—having done all these (acts), Brother Agni, we are then ready to do (what you desire) to be done.

4. So doing Ribhus, you inquired, Where, indeed, is he who came to us as a messenger? When Twashtri

According to the legend cited by the commentator, the three Ribhus being engaged in a sacrifice, and about to drink the Soma juice, the gods sent Agni to see what they were doing: observing that they exactly resembled each other, Agni assumed the like form, and it is to this that the stanza refers in calling him brother, and questioning his comparative age; one purpose of Agni's visit is stated in the next verse to be the order to convert the one spoon or ladle, Chamasa, used for drinking the Soma juice, or for libations, into four.

² These marvels have been related in the preceding hymns of the Ribhus See Suktas xx. cx, cxi.

5. (The Maruts), obtain food, strong decorating our persons, are ready, with our docile and high-standing steeds, (to attend thee) with all our splendour, to those rites ; verily, Indra, thou appropriatest our (sacrificial) food.³

6. (Indra),—Where, Maruts, has that (sacrificial) food been assigned to you, which, for the destruction of Ahi, was appropriated to me alone : for I indeed am fierce, and strong, and mighty, and have bowed down all mine enemies with death-dealing shafts.

7. (Maruts),—Showerer (of benefits), thou hast done much ; but it has been with our united equal energies ; for we, too, most powerful Indra, have done many things, and by our deeds (we are, as) we desire to be, Maruts.

8. (Indra),—By my own prowess, Maruts, I, mighty in my wrath, slew Vitrâ : armed with my thunder-bolt, created all these pellucid gently-flowing waters for a good of) man.

9. (Maruts),—Verily, Maghavat, nothing (done)

1 Yajush, xxxiii. 78, the interpretation is much the same.

2 Swadham anu hi no babhutha, thou hast been upon or after our food ; or, as Sâyana proposes, either strength, balam ; or water, udakam ; that is, thou seekest after the oblations generated either by our strength, or the water we have created.

by thee is unavailing:¹ there is no divinity as wise as thou : no one being born, or that has been born, ever surpasses the glorious deeds, which thou the metre a), hast achieved. ...ishtubh.

10. (Indra),—May the who has come (to us) alone be irresistible : may I ^{message (from the gods)} ever I contemplate in ^{say?} Agni, brother ⁻⁻⁻, Maruts, I am fierce and sage ⁻⁻⁻, and to whatever (objects) I direct (my thoughts), of them I am the lord, and rule (over them.)

11. Maruts, on this occasion praise delights me ; that praise which is to be heard (by all), which men have offered me. To Indra, the showerer (of benefits), the object of pious sacrifice : to me, (endowed) with many forms, (do you) my friends (offer sacrifices) for (the nourishment of my) person.

12. Maruts, verily, glorifying me, and enjoying boundless fame and food (through my favour), do you, of golden colour, and invested with glory, cover me in requital, verily, (with renown).

13. (Agastya),—What mortal, Maruts, worships you in this world : hasten, friends, to the presence of your friends : wonderful (divinities), be to them the means of acquiring riches, and be not uncognisant of my merits.²

14. Since the experienced intellect of a venerable (sage) competent to bestow praise upon (you, who deserve praise, has been exerted for us ; do you,

1 Anuttama te Maghavan nakir na : according to Sayana, it is equivalent to whatever is said by thee, Indra, is true ; á is an exclamation, implying assent or remembrance ; anuttam is, that which is not sent or driven away ; or, according to Mahidhara, na kena nás'itam, not destroyed or frustrated by any one.—Yajush, xxxiii. 79.

2 Esham bhuta naveda me ritanam, be cognizant of these my truths is Sayana's interpretation, madiyanam, avitathānam jñatāro bhavata.

Maruts, come to the presence of the devout (worshipper), who glorifying (you), worships you with these holy rites.

15 This praise, Maruts, is for you: this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author, capable of conferring delight (by his laudations). May the praise reach you for (the good of your) persons, so that we may (thence) obtain food, strength, and long life.

1 Mandaryasya karoh: Sayana explains the epithet, stutiviseshair mandayituh: or stutibhir madasya prerayituh, causer of pleasure by praises: Mahidhara, on the same verse, Yaj. xxxiv. 48, has a variety of meanings; as, mām darayati, one who has command of himself, who is vitaraga, devoid of passion; or one who grants all desires, deriving mandārya from mandāra, the tree of heaven, &c.

2 Isham vrijanam jiradānum in this place, Sāyana renders the last term, jayasila danam, donation connected with victory; but in the repetition of the stanza, at the end of the next Sukta, he explains it, chirakāla jivanam, long life: Mahidhara makes it an epithet of food, and strength-conferring life, deriving it from ji for jiva, and radānu; Unadi aff.—Pan. vi. 1, 66.

FOURTH ADHYAYA.

SUKTA II. (CLXVI).

THE deities are the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre Tristubh.

WE announce speedily, Maruts, your ancient greatness for your prompt appearance¹ as the sign of (the advent of) the showerer (of benefits)² O ye, loud-roaring Maruts, capable of doing all works, like unto sacrificial fuels (burning mightily)³ on your being ready to go to a sacrifice, do ye exert your vigorous energies to their highest pitch as if it was to battle.⁴

2. Ever carrying the sweet (libation) like unto (one's) own begotten son, they, the destroyers (of intruders) sport delightedly at sacrifice: the *Rudras*⁵ come to the offerer of salutations and oblations for (affording him) protection: they, who have sole control over their own strength,⁶ do him no harm.

1 The text has rabhasāya janmane: Max Muller has translated "for the robust host." We have however followed Sāyana.

2 The text has Vrishabhasya ketave: We have followed Sāyana in the translation. It may mean also for performing sacrifice. Max Muller has translated "for the herald of the powerful Indra." The passage conveys two-fold meaning. It may mean either "as an indication of the approach of the sacrifice which showers benefits," or "an indication of the approach of clouds for as the Scholiast observes that a strong wind is the surest indication of a rising cloud.

3 Text is Edha eva: Max Muller has translated "As with a trowel."

4 Max Muller has translated Yudtra eva "As with a sword."

5 The Rudras: It is said in the Puranas that the Maruts by dint of their asceticism, became the sons of Parvati and Siva.

6 The text is Svāyattwa valā: Wilson has translated it as "powerful as they are." We have given a literal rendering.

3. To him the presenter (of offerings) the all protecting and immortal Maruts, (gratified) by the oblation, have given profuse riches: they, the bestowers of happiness, becoming, as it were, the friends (of the sacrificers), sprinkle the regions plentifully with water.

4. These your horses, which traverse the quarters in their own strength,¹ proceed self guided:² all worlds and all dwellings are alarmed for marvellous is your advent (as people are terrorised) when spears are uplifted (in a battle.)

5. When your brilliant coursers make the mountains echo and traverse the summit of the firmament for the behoof of mankind; then all the forest lords³ are alarmed at your approach, and the bushes wave to and fro, as a woman in a chariot.

6. Fierce Maruts, endued with a good understanding, and in a hand shorn of malevolence, you confer on us good understanding; when your moving lightning, having teeth, rends (the cloud) as a well-hurled weapon strikes the deer.⁴

1 The Scholiast explains the text as follows:—When the Maruts cover all the quarters by pouring down rain: he explains Tavishibih as "with their own strength in the shape of pouring down rain." Max Muller has translated: "you have stirred up the clouds with might." We have however followed the Scholiast faithfully.

2 The text has Swayatasah i. e., "of themselves" i. e. without being guided by a charioteer.

3 The text has Vanashpati: literally 'forest lord': Trees are alarmed at the approach of a mighty wind.

4 Pas'wah sudhiteva barhanā: Sayana connects Pas'un with krivir-dati, the missile of the winds; because, he, says, when the wind blows, animals are withered or chilled; but it seems more naturally related to what follows, as a well-placed weapon strikes animals.—Wilson.

We have however followed the text literally.

7. Continuous givers, possessors of inexhaustible wealth, shorn of malevolence,¹ well-glorified at sacrifices, they worship the adorable (Indra) for (the sake of) drinking the Soma wine; for they know the first manly exploits of the hero.

8. Maruts gratify, with infinite and complete enjoyments, him, whom you protect from evil-disposed sin; the man whom, fierce, mighty and great (as you are) you defend from calumny, by (providing for) the nourishment of his sons.²

9. Maruts, all things that encompass well-being, are in your chariots; on your shoulders are weapons emulating one another's strength;³ at your resting places on the road refreshments are ready;⁴ the axles of your (chariot) wheels roll near them.⁵

10. Maruts, in your arms doing good to man, are many good things: on your breasts are golden (ornaments) brilliant and conspicuous: white garlands⁶ (hang) on your shoulders; razor-like (edges) are in your adamantine weapons: the Maruts have various decorations as birds have (many-coloured) wings.

¹ The text has anatrinasâ, âtardanarahita, shorn of violence. The Scholiast also explains it as "who strike their enemies profusely."

² Literally 'a son': but the proper meaning "descendants."

³ We have followed the text literally: Wilson has translated "on your shoulders abides emulous strength."

⁵ We have followed the commentator: Wilson renders "the axle of your wheels holds them firmly together."

⁶ MaxMuller has translated "deer skins."

11. Maruts, great, mighty, all pervading, endued with lordly powers, manifest, afar off as the deities (are made manifest) by the constellations; exhilarating, beautiful-tongued, making sound with your mouths, associated with Indra, lauded, (come to our sacrifice.)

12. Such, well-born Maruts, is your greatness; your munificence is continuous like the function of Aditi;¹ Indra deos not exceed by his own liberality what you confer upon the devout sacrificer.

13. Your friendship with us, Maruts, is well known and of long duration, for which, immortals (as you are, you) accept our ample laudation; having accepted our praise through this (your) favourable disposition towards mankind and having agreed to be their leaders, know all through acts.

14. Quick-moving Maruts, we multiply the long (offered ceremony) upon your mighty (approach), by which men acquire victory in war,² may we by those sacrifices obtain your wished-for (presence).

15. This praise, Maruts, is for you; this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author, capable of giving delight; may the praise reach you (for the good of your) persons so that we may by it acquire food, strength and longevity.³

1 Aditer-iva vratam, the act or obligation of Aditi, either the mother of the gods, or the earth; in what respects the comparison exists is not specified, except that the duration of both is the same, Aditi being identifiable with the universe, as by v 10 of Hymn LXXXV, VOL. I. p 230.

2 Max Muller has translated 'in the camp'

3 The text has jivadannum, which the Scholiast has rendered 'longevity.'

SUKTA III (CLXVII)

THE first stanza is addressed to Indra; the rest to the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. May thy thousand benefits, Indra, come to us; may a thousand sorts of abundant food come to us, O master of Hari horses: may a thousand (sorts) of wealth come to exhilarate us: may thousands of quadrupeds be ours.

2. May Maruts with (means of) protection come to us; may they endued with most excellent knowledge, (come) with most praiseworthy and brilliant treasures, since their most excellent steeds the Niyuts, carry wealth even on the farther shore of the sea.¹

3. In whom the water-shedding, golden-hued lightning, is fitly deposited like a chaplet (of clouds) moving in the firmament like the (splendidly-attired) wife of a man (of rank)² and distinguished in assemblies like a sacrificial hymn.³

1 Samudrasya chid dhanayanta pâra, bearing or collecting wealth, even on the farther shore of the sea; parasmin tire, on the other bank; however this may be, more correctly, only metaphorical, meaning, the winds bring wealth, that is, rain, from the skirts of the horizon, or firmament.

2 Guhâ charanti manusho na yosha, going in the darkness of the sky, as if it was in privacy or in secret, like the wife of a man, who, although, according to the commentator, is brilliantly attired, remains in the privacy of the female apartments; suveshântahpura eva madhye charati.

3 Sabhavati vidatheva sam vâk: the Scholiast refers the first to the lightning, which at times, shows itself, as if in an assembly, sabha; it may also, perhaps, refer to Yosha, a woman who is not always restricted to the private chambers, but appears occasionally in public, as she certainly was accustomed to do in the days of the Veda, at least at religious ceremonials, like the hymn or prayer, which, on such occasions, is recited aloud.

4. Maruts, through fear of that violent Indra, I fly, trembling, (from his presence): ' oblations that had been prepared for you have been set away: nevertheless, have patience with us.

5. The rays of the ever- recurring mornings, favoured, Indra, by thy vigour, confer consciousness as they shine: showerer of benefits, ancient (of days), bestower of strength; fierce, (and attended) by the fierce, Maruts, grant us (abundant) food.

6. Do thou, Indra, cherish the vigorous leaders (of the rains), be free from displeasure against the Maruts: overcoming (our) enemies along with the intelligent (Maruts), support us (so that) we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA VIII (CLXXII).

THE deities and Rishi are the same; the metre is Gayatri.

MARUTS, of inseparable splendour, may your coming be marvellous, liberal benefactors, for our protection.

2. Maruts, liberal benefactors, may your bright destructive (shaft) be far from us: may the stone which you hurl be far from us.

3. Maruts, liberal benefactors, protect my people, (although I be) as insignificant as grass: lift us up that we may live.

—————

SUKTA IX. (CLXXIII).

THE deity is Indra; the Rishi *Agastya*¹; the metre Trishtubh.

THE priests chant the heaven-ascending Sāma,¹ as thou knowest (it), for such (praise) do we venerate as the cause of increase and conferrer of heaven, whence the kine, unimpeded,¹ do honour to the divine (Indra) who is seated on the sacred grass.

2. The showerer (of the oblation, the offerer of the sacrifice, assisted) by (the priests), presenting the oblations which have been provided by himself, adores (Indra), in order that he may hasten (to the rite), as a (thirsty) deer to the water. The mortal invoker (of the gods),² O mighty (Indra), whilst glorifying them who are desirous of praise, presents a twofold offering (to thee).³

3. The invoker (of the gods, Agni,) pervades the measured stations (of the altars), and accepts that (oblation), which is the germ of the year and of the earth; as a horse neighs when bringing (the offering to Indra), as a bull bellows like a messenger proclaiming (his message) between heaven and earth.⁴

4. We offer to him, (Indra), the most pious (oblations): the worshippers of the gods present to him substantial (adorations):⁵ may he, of conspicuous lustre, standing in his car, and light-moving like the A'swins, be gratified (by our worship).

5. Glorify that Indra who is mighty, who is a hero, possessing abundant wealth, standing in his car, a

¹ Gavo dhenavah: the latter is interpreted adabdha, unimpeded, unharmed; the cows may be the rains.

² The priest, or the institutor of the sacrifice.

³ Either of praise and oblation, or in the capacity of the institutor of the ceremony and his wife.

⁴ The application of the similes is not very obvious but they may be intended to illustrate the roaring of the sacrificial fire.

⁵ Chyautnani is, properly, causing to fall down; but Sayana explains it by dridhani, firm, hard.

valiant combatant against adversaries, the wielder of the thunderbolt, the disperser of all-enveloping gloom.

6. Heaven and earth are insufficient for the girth of that Indra, who, with his greatness, rules over the leaders (of sacrifice): as the atmosphere encompasses the earth, so he encompasses (the three worlds), and, being the master of the rain, he upholds the sky as well as the firmament and the earth.⁷

7. Those people, who jointly worshipping Indra, diligently endeavour, O hero, to propitiate thee, the invigorator in combats, the guide in the right way: provide, for his gratification, with sacrificial viands.

8. The libations (offered) to thee are, verily, the cause of happiness, since the divine waters (effused) in the firmament for the benefit of mankind afford thee satisfaction. All praise, Indra, is acceptable to thee, and thou rewardest with understanding those who praise thee.

9. May we be, as it were, thy valued friends, O Lord, and obtain our desires, like those (who gain their objects) by the praise of princes. May Indra, propitiated by our eulogiums, be brought to the sacrifice by our hymns.

10. Emulous in commendation, like (those contending for the favour) of men, may Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, be equally (a friend) to us: like those who, desirous of his friendship, (conciliate) the lord of a city¹ (ruling) with good government, so do our intermediate (representatives) propitiate (Indra) with sacrifices.

11. One man propitiates Indra, augmenting (his vigour) by sacrifice; another, who is insincere, worships (him), with mind averted (to worldly thoughts) (to the first he is) like a lake to a thirsty (pilgrim) near a sacred spot; (to the other) like a long road, which retards the end (of the journey).²

12. Indra, associated with the Maruts in battles (with the clouds), abandon us not;³ for a share of the offering is set apart, mighty one, for thee, for whom, the shedder of rain and accepter of oblations, the worship is offered with oblations, whilst the hymn glorifies the Maruts.

13. This hymn, Indra, is addressed to thee. Lord of steeds, learn by it the way to our sacrifice, and come hither for our good, that we may thence obtain food strength, and long life.

² The application of these comparisons is not very distinct, and it might be thought that they refer to the individuals mentioned in the first half of the stanza; but they are rather more intelligible as applied to Indra.

³ This stanza occurs in the Yajush, III. 46; the explanation is much the same, except the Mahidhara supplies the ellipse by ~nás'aya instead of tyákshih, do not destroy us.

⁴ This hymn is in general elliptical and obscure.

SUKTA X. (CLXXIV.)

THE deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same

THOU, Indra, art king : they who are gods (are subject) to thee : therefore, scatterer (of foes), do thou protect and cherish us men : thou art the protector of the good, the possessor of wealth, the extricator of us (from sin) thou art true, the investor (of all with thy lustre), the giver of strength.

2. Thou hast humbled the people, suing for pardon,¹ when thou hadst destroyed their seven new cities : thou, irreproachable, hast dispersed the flowing waters : thou hast destroyed Vritra for the sake of the youthful Purukutsa.²

3. Go to the cities inhabited by the Rakshasas,³ and thence to heaven (attended), receiver of many sacrifices, by those who (attend thee). Defend, like a lion,⁴ the untamed, quick-moving Agni, that he may abide in his dwelling, fulfilling his functions.

4. Let (thy foes, Indra,) humbled by the might of thy thunderbolt, rest in their own station,⁵ for

1 Dano vis'a Indra mridhravāchas is translated by Yāska, make liberal men soft-spoken, dānamanaso manushyān Indra mriduvāchah kuru.

2 The verse admits, according to the commentator, of a different explanation, more consistent with current acceptation, rurhi; viz., thou hast made the subject (rain) soliciting forbearance, descend, (in showers): when thou hadst rent asunder the gliding, world-filling (clouds), then, irreproachable one, thou didst make the waters flow in channels, and didst open the chief cloud for young Purukutsa.

3 Vritah s'ura patnih, Sāyana explains, rakshobhih palayitā vritah purih.

4 As a lion protects the forest, in which his lair is, from the depredations of other animals.

5 In the firmament, the enemies are the clouds.

thy glory: when thou movest, (armed) with thy weapon, thou sendest down the waters: arresting thy horses, increase, by thy power, (the abundance of) food.

5. Bear, Indra, with thy obedient horses, as swift as the wind, (the sage) Kutsa, to that ceremony (to which) thou desirest (to convey him): let the sun bring near the wheel of his chariot, and let the thunder-armed advance against his opponents.

6. Indra, lord of steeds, invigorated by our animating praise, thou hast slain those who make thee no offerings, and disturb thy worshippers; but they who look upon thee as (their) protector, and are associated for (the presentation of sacrificial) food, obtain from thee posterity.

7. The sage praises thee, Indra, for the grant of desirable (food), since thou hast made the earth the bed of the Asura: Maghavan has made the three (regions)¹ marvellous by his gifts, and has destroyed for (the prince) Duryoni (the Asura,) Kuyavācha,² in combat.

8. The sages have celebrated thy everlasting (as well as thy) recent (exploits, in achieving which) thou hast endured many injuries in putting an end to war: verily, thou hast demolished the hostile and undivine cities; thou hast bowed down the thunderbolt of the undivine Asura.

¹ The text has only tisrah, to which the Scholiast adds bhumih either earth in three-respects, as identical with the three rituals of the Darsa, or lunar periods; the Pasu, or victim; and Soma, or libation; or as implying earth, firmament, and heaven.

² We have a Kuyava in the first book, vol. i, p. 268, but not in connection with Duryoni.

i) Thou, Indra, art the terrifier (of thy foes): thou hast made the trembling waters overspread (the earth) like flowing rivers but, hero, when thou fillest the ocean, thou hast protected in their well-being Turvas'a and Yadu.²

10. Be thou, Indra, at all times our especial defender; the preserver of our people, the bestower of strength upon all these our emulous (followers); that we may obtain food, strength and long life.

SUKTA XI (CLXXV.)

THE deity is Indra; the Rishi Agastya; the metre of the first verse is a kind of Brihati; of the last, Trishtubh; of the rest Anushtubh.

1. Lord of steeds, thou art exhilarated when the sacred (Soma juice) has been imbibed by thee as by its (appropriate) vessel; for to thee, showerer (of benefits), it is exhilarating, inebriating, invigorating, the yielder of delight, (satisfying as) food, and the giver of a thousand (pleasures)

2. May our Soma libation reach you, (for it is) exhilarating, invigorating, inebriating, most precious: it is companionable, Indra, enjoyable, the over-thrower of hosts, immortal.

3. Thou art a hero, a benefactor, accelerate the vehicle of man (that bears him to heaven); consume

1 Sirah na sravanti: the commentator says Sira may be the name of a certain river; one put for many.

2 Paraya Turvasam Padum swasti: Sáyana explains paraya by apalayah, thou hast protected; and swasti by avinás'am, without loss or detriment; or paraya might mean, bear across, convey over in safety.

mighty one, the irreligious Dasyu, as a (wooden) vessel is burnt by fire.

4. Sage Indra, who art the lord, thou hast carried off by thy strength one wheel of (the chariot of) the sun. Take up thy bolt for the death of Sushna, and proceed with thy horses, swift as the wind, to Kutsa.¹

5. Thy inebriety is most intense; nevertheless, thy acts (for our good) are most beneficent. Thou desirest, bountiful giver of horses, that (both thy inebriety and thy beneficence should be the means of) destroying enemies and distributing riches.²

6. Inasmuch, Indra, as thou hast been the (giver of happiness to thine ancient economiasts, like water to one who is thirsty, therefore I constantly repeat this thy praise, that I may thence obtain food, strength and long life.

SUKTA XII (CLXXVI.)

THE deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Anustubh, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. Soma, exhilarate Indra (at the sacrifice we offer), for the sake of obtaining wealth: pervade him, showerer (of benefits), for when imbibed thou art the annihilator (of enemies), and sufferest not a foe to be nigh.

2. Pervade with our praise him who is the sole sustainer of men, to whom the oblation is presented, and

¹ Or kutsa may mean the thunderbolt; but the defence of the Rajarshi against Sushna, or of mankind against drought, has been before alluded to.—See vol. i. pp. 29, 137, 171.

² The epithets, being in the dual number, refer, according to the commentator, to the mada, intoxication; and kratu, the acts of Indra,

Who, the showerer (of benefits), causes (every desire) to bud like barley.

3. In whose hands are all the treasures (that are desired by) the five classes of beings destroy, Indra, him who oppresses us ; slay him, (as if thou wast thyself) the heavenly thunderbolt.

4. Slay every one who offers not libations, however, difficult to be destroyed : slay every one who is no delight to thee : bestow upon us, his wealth, for the pious (worshipper) deserves it.

5. Soma, thou protectest him in whose prayers, doubly devout, there is the combination (of praise and oblation) : protect, especially, Indra in war ; protect the vigorous Indra in battles.

6. Inasmuch, Indra, as thou hast been the giver of happiness to thine ancient encomiasts, like water to one who is thirsty, therefore I constantly repeat this thy praise, that I may thence obtain food, strength and long life.

ŚUKTA XIII (CLXXVII.)

THE deity and Riski are the same ; the metre is Anustubh, except in the last verse, in which it is Tristubh.

MAY Indra, who is the cherisher of men, the benefactor of mankind, the lord of men, the adored of many, (come to us Indra, who art praised (by us), and art desirous of the oblation, harness thy vigorous steeds, and come down to me for (my) preservation.

2. Mount, Indra, thy steeds, who are young and vigorous,¹ tractable to prayer, and harnessed to a bounty-shedding car: come down with them to us. We invoke thee, Indra, the libation being poured out.

3. Ascend thy bounty-shedding car, for thee the Soma, the showerer of benefits, is effused, the sweet libations are prepared. Bounty-shedding Indra, having harnessed them, come with thy vigorous steeds for the good of mankind; come with thy rapid (car) to my presence.

4. This is the sacrifice offered to the gods: this is the offering of the victim;¹ these are the prayers: this Indra, is the Soma juice: the sacred grass is ready strewn: come, therefore, Indra, quickly, sit down, drink (the libation): here let loose thy steeds.

5. Glorified by us, Indra, come to (our) presence to accept the prayers of the venerable offerer (of the oblation); so that, we may ever enjoy prosperity through thy protection, and thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA XIV (CLXXVIII.)

THE deities, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

INASMUCH, Indra, as the praise by which thou art (induced to bestow) protection on thine adorers is heard (by all), therefore disappoint not the desire (that would raise us) to greatness: may I obtain through thy (favour), all things that are obtainable by men.

the Soma is vrishan; and so on, showing poverty both of ideas and expressions.

1 Ayam miyedha: the latter is explained as an epithet of Yajna, derived from medha, which, according to a text cited by the commentator, is the same as pas'u, a victim.

2. Let not the royal Indra frustrate those our actions, which the sisters, (Day and Night,)¹ are directing to their object. May these invigorating offerings propitiate him, so that he may bestow upon us friendly (regard), and (abundant) food.

3. Indra, the hero, the victor in battles, along with the leaders (of his hosts, the Maruts,) will hear the invocation of his supplicating worshipper, and when disposed to accept his praises, will, of his own accord, drive his chariot close to the donor (of the oblation).

4. Verily, Indra, through desire (of sacrificial) food, is the devourer (of that which is presented) by (his) worshippers, and overcomes (the adversaries) of his friend: in the many-voiced assembly (of men), Indra, the faithful (performer of his promise), commending the (piety) of his worshipper, approves of the (offered) food.

5. By thee, opulent Indra, may we overcome our mighty and formidable enemies: thou art our protector: mayest thou be propitious to our prosperity, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA XV (CLXXIX.)

THERE is no deity, properly speaking, to this Sukta; but Rati, the goddess of pleasure, is suggested by the Scholiast as taking the place of one; the Rishis are the supposed interlocutors, Agastya, his wife, Lopamudra, and certain disciples of the sage who have overheard the conversation; the metre is Trishtubh.

(LOPAMUDRA'),—Many years have I been serving thee diligently, both day and night, and through mornings,

1 Swasara, lit. sisters, may mean as explained in the text; or it may imply the associated institutor of the rite and the officiating priest; or it may mean the fingers which are employed in ritual manipulations.

bringing on old age : decay now impairs the beauty of my limbs : what, therefore, is now (to be done) : let husbands approach their wives.

2. The ancient sages, disseminators of truth, verily, conversed of truths with the gods, begot (progeny), nor thereby violated (their vow of continence,) therefore should wives be approached by their husbands.

3. (Agastya) —Penance has not been practised in vain : since the gods protect us, we may indulge all our desires : in this world we may triumph in many conflicts, if we exert ourselves mutually together.

4. Desire either from this cause or from that, has come upon me whilst engaged in prayer and suppressing (passion) : let Lopamudra approach her husband :—the unsteady female beguiles the firm and resolute man.

5. (Pupil),—I beseech the Soma juice, which has been drunk in my heart,² that it may fully expiate the sin we have committed,³ man is subject to many desires.

6. Agastya, a venerable sage, working with (fit) implements, desiring progeny offspring, and strength,² practised both classes (of obligations),³ and received true benedictions from the gods.

1 Khanamanah khanitrah, lit, digging with tools; that is, effecting his objects by appropriate means, earning his reward by sacrifice and hymns.

2 Prajam apatyam balam ichchhamanah: praja is distinguished by the Scholiast as implying repeated successions, descendants, and; apatya as signifying more immediate descent, sons, grandsons; or praja may mean descendants.

3 Kama and tapas, desire and devotion; the duties of domestic as well as ascetic life.

ANUVA KA XXIV.

SUKTA I (CLXXX).

THE deities are the As'wins; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre is: Trishtubh.

A'swin, your horses are traversers of the (three) regions, when your chariot proceeds to (its desired) quarters; the golden fellies of your wheels grant (whatever is wished for): drinking the Soma juice, you participate in the morning (rite).

2. Direct downwards the course) of your (car). swift moving, variously going, friendly to man, and to be especially venerated, when, all adorable, your sister (dawn prepares (for your approach), and (the institutor of the ceremony) worships you, drinkers of (the Soma juice, for the sake (of obtaining) strength and food.

3. You have restored milk to the cow: you have (brought) down the prior meture (secretion) into the unripe (or barren udder) of the cow: the devout offerer of the oblation worships you, whose forms are truth, (as vigilant in the midst of the ceremony), as a thief (in the midst) of a thicket.

4. You rendered the heat as soothing as sweet butter to Atri; wishing (for relief), and invested it with coolness, like water: therefore, for you, As'wins, leaders (of rites) the fire-offering (is made);¹ to you the Soma juices ran like chariot wheels (down a declivity).

5. Dasras, may I bring you, by the vehicle of my prayers (hither), to bestow (upon me your aid), like the infirm son of Tugra: heaven and earth combine

¹ Tad vâm pas'wa ishti: Pas'u is interpreted by the commentator 'fire,' agreeably to the text, Agnih pas'ur-âsit, Agni was the victim; and the phrase implies that the oblations are presented through fire to the As'wins.

(to worship you) through your greatness: may this, your aged (worshipper), adorable (As'wins), enjoy long life (exempt) from sin.

6. Bountiful givers, when you yoke your horses you replenish the earth with viands: may this your worshipper be (swift) as the wind to propitiate and please you, that, through your great (favour), he may, like a pious man, obtain food.

7. Your sincere adorers, we verily praise you in various ways. The pitcher has been placed (ready for the Soma-juice).¹ Irreproachable As'wins, showerers (of benefits), drink freely of the juice in the presence of the gods.

8. As'wins, Āgastya, eminent amongst the leaders of men, arouses you daily with numerous (invocations), like an instrument of sound,² for the sake of obtaining a manifold (flow) of a torrent (of rain).

9. When, by the virtue of your chariot, you come (to the sacrifice), and when, like the ministering priest, (after discharging his function), you depart, gliding away, you give to the devout (worshippers a reward), though it be store of good horses: may we be enriched, Násatyas, (by your favour).

1 Vi panir-hitāvan: Sayana proposes first, to explain pani by drona-kalasa, the jar or vessel into which the Soma-juice, after expression, is strained through a filter; but he then suggests that pani may have its more usual sense of a merchant or trader, and hitavān, instead of 'being placed,' may mean opulent; in which case vi will have the force of viyujyatam, let him be separated; implying, let the niggardly rich man who does not offer worship be cast off: the Nitimanjari appears to have had a different, but scarcely correct reading, ahaviḥ pani, a niggard offering, no oblation.

2 *Karadhuni*va, from kara, sound, s'abda; and dhuni, generating, utpadayita, such as the conch shell and the like, s'ankhādī sa iva.

10. We invoke to-day, As'wins, with hymns, for the sake of good things, your praise-worthy chariot of undamaged wheels, and traversing the sky, that we may obtain (from it) food, strength and long life.

SUKTA II. (CLXXXI.)

WHEN, beloved (As'wins), do you bear aloft (the materials) of food and riches, that, desirous of the sacrifice, you may send down the rain: this sacrifice offers you adoration, givers of riches, protectors of men.

2. As'wins, may your horses, pure, rain-drinking, swift as the wind, heaven-born, quick-moving; fleet as thought, vigorous, well-backed, and self-irradiating, bring you hither.

3. As'wins, excellent and steady, may your chariot, vast as the earth, broad-fronted, rapid as the rain, (fleet) as thought, emulative¹ and adorable, come hither for (our) good.

4. Born here (in the middle region) and here (in the the upper region),² you are glorified together, as faultless in your forms and (perfect in your own many excellences):³ one (of you), the victorious son (of the firmament). the devout (promoter) of sacred sacrifices, the other, the auspicious son of heaven, (each) upholds (the world).

¹ Ahampurvah, I first, is usually applied to a warrior, one who would be first in battle: Sayana would explain it here intelligent, manaswin; or very generous, atyudarah.

² Iheha jātā, literally, born here and here, iha and iha: the Scholiast supplies the amplification, identifying the As'wins with the Sun and Moon.

5. As'wins, may the golden-coloured (car of one of you), traversing at will the quarters of space,² come to our dwellings; may mankind encourage the horse of the other by food, by friction and by shouts.

6. (One of you), the disperser (of the clouds)³ like Indra, the annihilator (of his foes desirous of the oblations proceeds, (bestowing) abundant food. (Devout, worshippers) cherish with the (sacrificial) viands (the faculties) of the other for the sake of favours, which flow upon as like swelling rivers.⁴

7. As'wins, creators, the perpetual threefold hymn, addressed to you, has been uttered (to secure) your steady (favour): thus glorified, protect him who solicits (your bounty), and whether moving or resting, hear his invocation.

9. The wise offerer of oblations, like Pushan, praises you, As'wins as (he would praise) Agni and

1 As the same with the moon and sun, one As'win may be termed the son of the middle region or firmament; the other, the son of the upper region, heaven or sky.

2 Nicheruh kakuhō vasam anu: kakuhā may be an epithet of ratha, signifying best, s'reshtha; but it seems unnecessary to depart from its more usual meaning of points of the horizon.

3 S'aradwan, which is variously interpreted: it may be synonymous with s'aranavan, blighting, withering as leaves; or many-yearred, old, eternal, bahu-samvatsarah; or autumnal, with reference to one of the As'wins as the moon. s'arat-kala van.

4 This and the preceding stanza are not very explicit in the comparison which is imitated between the functions of the two As'wins, for the use of anyasya, of the other, in the second half of the verse, is all that intimates that ekasya, of the one, is understood in the first half.

Ushas,¹ (at the season) at which I invoke you, praising with devotion, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

SŪKTA III (CLXXXII.)

THE deities, Rishi, and metre, as before .

THE information, sage (priests), has been received : be ready with your praises, for the (benefit-showering car of the As'wins has arrived) : propitiate (the divinities, for they show favour to the doer of good works : they are entitled to praise, rich in benevolence to mankind,² the grandsons of heaven, and observers of holy rites.

2. Dasras, in truth most imperial,³ adorable, swifter than the winds, and eminent in good works, riders in a car, and most distinguished charioteers, bring hither your car, full heaped up with ambrosia, and with it come, As'wins, to the donor (of the offering).

3 What make you here, As'wins ; why do you tarry, (where) any man who makes no oblation is respected : humble him ; take away the life of the niggard ; grant light to the pious man striving to speak your praise.

¹ Alluding to the time at which it is especially proper to worship the As'wins, the morning sacrifice.

² Vis'palavasū, having wealth, vasu, which is cherishing pala for pala ; mankind, viz ; or the compound may refer to the legend of the iron or golden leg given to Vis'pala.—See vol. i. p. 311,

³ Indratama, superlatively Indra : so presently, Maruttama, superlatively Maruts ; the latter may also mean, according to Sayana, of moderated passions, mild, gentle, mitarāginau ; or not noisy mitaravinau.

4. Annihilate, As'wins, the dogs who bark at us : slay them warring (against us) : you know their (means of harm) : render every word of him who praises you affluent in precious (reward) : accept Nâsatyas, both of you, my praise.

5. You constructed a pleasant, substantial, winged bark,¹ borne on the ocean waters for the son of Tugra, by which, with mind devoted to the gods, you bore him up, and quickly descending (from the sky,) you made a path for him across the great waters.

6. Four ships² landed into the midst of the receptacle (of the waters), sent by the As'wins, brought safe to shore the son of Tugra, who had been cast headlong into the waters (by his foes), and plunged in inextricable darkness.

1. Plava, a raft; a float.

2 Chatasro navah, four boats or ships: in this and all the other expressions in this hymn, referring to the legend; it is impossible to dispute the applicability of the text to the story: the authenticity of the narrative, depending solely upon tradition, may be questionable enough, but its purport is fully borne out by the expressions of the text, in this and half a dozen other places, in which the incidents are alluded to. Professor Roth has not merely questioned the accuracy of the translation but has confidently asserted that there is no mention of the 'sea' in the text: grounding his assertion, apparently, upon 'Samudra,' meaning the antariksha, or mid-heaven, as well as the ocean; how Bhujyu should have fallen into jeopardy in the sky, how he should have got there at all, might have induced a cautious critic to hesitate before he would restrict the meaning of Samudra to antariksha; but in this place, and in several others, there is no room for an equivocal meaning: sindhu, kshodas, arnas, are none of them included amongst the synonymes of antariksha; in one place, indeed; the text seems to have made a provision against mis-apprehension, by placing the scene of the adventure, arnasi samudre, in the water—samudra: however, if any further proof were necessary, the specification of nâvah, in this verse, is decisive of the sense in which the whole is to be understood.

7. What was the tree that was stationed in the midst of the ocean, to which the supplicating son of Tugra clung :: as leaves (are caught hold of) for the support of a falling animal :¹ you, As'wins, bore him up to safety, to your great renown.

8. May the praise which your devout adorers have uttered be acceptable to you, Nasatyas ; leaders (in pious rites) : be propitiated to-day by the libations of our assembly, that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA IV (CLXXXIII.)

THE deities, Rishi, and metre, are continued:

SHOWERS of benefits, harness the car which has three benches, three wheels, and is as quick as thought ; with which, embellished with three metals,² you come to the dwelling of the pious (worshipper), and in which you travel like a bird with wings.

2. Your easy-rolling car alights upon the earth, where, favourable to the sacred rite, you stop for the sake of the (sacrificial) food : may this hymn, promotive of your personal (welfare), be associated with your forms, and do you unite with the dawn the daughter of heaven.

¹ Parna mrigasya pataror-ivārabhe : the passage is not very clear, and Sayana's explanation does not remove the difficulty ; he explains mriga by mṛjayitri sōdhayitri, a sweeper, a cleaner ; and renders the whole, like leaves for the support or prop in the occurrence of injury, and the like, of a sweeper when falling, patanas'ilasya, mṛjayituh s'odhayitur-himsader-arabhe ālambasya parnanīva, as they are sufficient for support tani yathālabhānāya prabhavanti-tad-vat.

² Gold, silver, and copper according to Sayana.

३ Ascend your rolling car, which approaches the sacred rite of the offerer of the oblation; the car in which Nāsatyas, leaders, you purpose to come to the sacrifice, and to proceed to the dwelling (of the worshipper) for (bestowing upon him) offspring, and for his own (good).

4. Let not the wolf, let not the she-wolf, harm me, safe (in your protection); abandon me not, nor deliver me (to another.) This your share (of the offering) is prepared; this prayer, Dasras, (is addressed) to you; these treasures of Soma juice are for you.

5. Gotama, Purumilha, Atri, (each), offering oblations, invokes you for his protection: like unto a wayfarer, who (makes for his intended direction) by a straight (path), do you, Dasras, come (direct) to my invocation.¹

6. (Through your aid), As'wins, we cross over this (limit of) darkness; to you this (our) hymn has been addressed; come hither by the paths traversed by the gods that we may obtain food, and strength, and long life.

FIFTH ADHYA YA.

SUKTA V. (CLXXXIV.)

THE deities, Rishi, and metre as before.

WE invoke you two, (As'wins), to-day ; the same two on any other day ; when the morning dawns. Násatyas grandsons of heaven, wherever you may be, the pious reciter (of the hymn) invokes you with praises on behalf of the liberal donor (of the offering).

2. Showerers (of benefits), rejoicing in (our) libations, make us happy, and destroy the niggard (withholder) of offerings ; hear, leaders, with your ears, my praises addressed to you with pure words, for you are seekers (after praise), you are retentive (of laudation),

3. Divine As'wins,¹ in whom is no untruth, (darting) like arrows to acquire glory, and to carry off Suryâ,² to you are addressed the prayers that are recited at holy rites, for (the completion of the uninterrupted, sin removing (sacrifice),³ as ancient ages (offered them).

1 The text has simply Pushan, which is, properly, an appellation of a form of the sun : it is here said, by the Scholiast, to indicate both the As'wins, the one as the sun and the other, understood as the moon.

2 The commentator adds to the legend, that besides Surya, a prize was offered of a hymn of a thousand stanzas, which the As'wins also won ; but at the request of Agni and other competitors, they gave to them portions of the hymn.

3 Varunasya bhureh is interpreted by the Scholiast ; avichchinnasya varunasya phalapráptibandhaka papanivarakasya yagasya, of the uninterrupted-sacrifice which is obstructive of the sin that intercepts the reward the expression is unusual.

4. Receivers of the oblation, may your liberality be displayed towards us : be pleased with the hymn of the venerable author, so that men may honour the institutor of the ceremony, as (they honour) you, liberal donors, for the sake of renown.

5. As'wins, possessors of wealth, this sin-removing hymn has been addressed to you, together with respectful (oblations): Nâsatyas, be favourable to Agastya ; come to his dwelling for conferring on him) progeny and for his own (good).

6. (Through your aid), As'wins, we cross over the limit of darkness: to you this (our hymn) has been addressed: come hither by the path traversed by the gods, that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA VI. (CLXXXVI).

The deities are Heaven and Earth ; the Rishi and metre as in the last. WHICH of these two, (Heaven and Earth), is prior, which posterior ; how were they engendered ; (declare), sages, who knows this ? verily, you uphold the universe of itself, and the days and nights)¹ revolve as if they had wheels.

2. Footless and motionless, they sustain numerous moving and footed races, as a son is even (nursed) on the lap of his parents : defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger)¹

¹ Ahani chakriyeva, two days as if wheeled ; that is, the succession of day and night each of which may be considered in turn as preceding or following the other, like the rotation of a wheel. See also Yâshka, III. 22.

3. I solicit of Aditi² wealth, without pain or decay, like heaven (in its fullness of enjoyment,) exempt from injury, and abounding in food : grant, Heaven and Earth, such wealth to him who praises you : defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger).

4. May we ever be (devoted to) that Heaven and Earth, who are not subject to annoyance, who satisfy (all beings) with food, who have the gods (and men) for sons, and who are both endowed with the double (condition) of the divine days (and nights) :³ defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger)

5. Going always together, equally young, and of the like termination, sisters, and kindred, and scenting the navel of the world, placed on their lap as its parents :⁴ defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

6. I invoke to the sacrifice, for the preservation of gods (and men), the two vast, all-supporting, and mighty parents (of the rain and corn) ; who, beautiful in form, sustain ambrosial (showers) ; defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

1 Rakshatam no abhvat : .bhwa means merely great—the substantive has to be supplied : according to Sayana, it is, from sin as the cause of great danger,—mahato bhayahetoh papât.

2 Aditi is here said to mean the firmament.

3 Ubhe devanâm ubhayebhîr-ahnâm : aham, according to the Scholiast, implies night as well as day.

4 Abhijighranti bhuvanasya nabhim pitror-upasthe : the meaning is not very obvious : nabhi, according to Sayana, here means 'water' udakam, as the binding of all beings,—bhutajatasya bandhakam ; and which may be regarded as the child of heaven and earth, as they both contribute to its production,—ubhayor udakapradattvam : or the two here mentioned may imply water and the oblation, which are also connected

3. Adhwaryu, let us two offer praise: do thou concur with me:¹ let us address pleasing praise to Indra: sit down, Indra, on the sacred grass (prepared by) the institutor of the rite; and may our commendations be most acceptable to Indra.

4. A man's wife, Maghavan, is his dwelling; verily she is his place of birth:² thither let thy horses, harnessed (to thy car), convey thee: we prepare the Soma juice at the fit season: may Agni come as our messenger before thee.

5. Depart, Maghavan; come Indra: both ways,³ protector,⁴ there is a motive for thee, whether it be standing in thy vast chariot, or liberating thy neighing steed.

1 Prati me grini hi; the Hotri is supposed to speak to the Adhwaryu to direct their joint performance of some part of the ceremony.

2 Jaya id astam sed u yonih, the apropos of this is not very evident: astam the commentator explains by griham, and he quotes the Smṛiti for the identity of house and housewife, grihini griham uchyate iti smṛiteḥ: the notion that a man is born of his wife evidently originates in the fanciful etymology of Jaya, a wife, form jan, to be born, as it is first found in the Brāhmaṇa.

Tasyam punar navo bhūṭwa dasame māsi jāyate,

Tad jaya jaya bhavati, yad asyam jāyate punaḥ.

Again, in her being renewed (as a son) he is born in the tenth month,

And a wife therefore becomes jaya, because he is again born in her:

from this, passing probably through the Sūtras, we have the same in Manu ix. 18,

Pati-bharyam sampravis'ya garbho bhūṭweaṇ jāyate

Jāyatas-taddhi jāyātwam yad asyam jāyate punaḥ.

3 Ubhayatrā te artham, according to the Scholiast, Indra's wife awaits his return, the Soma libation invites his stay.

4 Bhratar, lit. brother, but here explained peshaka, nourisher

6. When thou hast drunk the Soma, then, Indra, go home : an auspicious life (abides) pleasantly in thy dwelling : in either (case) there is the standing in thy car or liberating the steeds for provender.

7. These sacrificers are the (Bhojas), of whom the diversified Angirases (are the priests):¹ and the heroic sons of the expeller of the foes of the gods from heaven,² bestowing riches upon Vis'wamitra at the sacrifice of a thousand (victims),³ prolong (his) life.

8. Maghavan becomes repeatedly (manifest) in various forms, practising delusions with respect to his own peculiar person ; and invoked by his appropriate prayers, he comes in a moment from heaven to the three (daily rites), and, although observant of seasons, is the drinker (of the Soma) irrespective of season.

9. The great Rishi, the generator of the gods,⁴ the attracted by the deities, the overlooker of the leaders (at holy rites), Vis'wamitra arrested the watery

1 The text is merely Ime Bhoja angiraso virupa : the scholiast explains the former, Kshatriya descendants of Sudas : Saudasah kshatriya yajma kurvanah, instituting the sacrifice at which the latter, Medhatithi and the rest of the race of Angiras, were their Yajakas, or officiating priests.

2 Rudra : his sons are the Maruts.

3 Sahasrasave, according to the comment, the as'wamedha.

4 Devajah is explained by Sayana, the generator of radiance or energies, tejasam janavithi : the compound is [not devaja god-born, nor was Viswamitra of divine parentage : Deva-juta, which follows, is explained taistejobair-akrishta, drawn or attracted by those energies.

stream¹ when he sacrificed for Sudas ; Indra, with the Kusikas was pleased.²

10. Sages and saints, overlookers of the leaders (of sacred rites) Kusikas, when the Soma is expressed with stones at the sacrifice, then exhilarating (the god) with praises, sing the holy strain (aloud) like (screaming) swans, and, together with the gods, drink the sweet juice of the Soma.

11. Approach, Kusikas, the steed of Sudas ; animate (him), and let him, loose to (win) riches (for the raja) ; for the king (of the gods) has slain Vritra in the East, in the West, in the North, therefore let (Sudás) worship him in the best (regions) of the earth.

12. I have made Indra glorified³ by these two, heaven and earth, and this prayer of Vis'wamitra protects the race of Bharata.⁴

13. The Vis'wamitras have addressed the prayer to Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt ; may he therefore render us very opulent.⁵

1 Astabhnat sindhum arnavam · he is said to have stopped the current of the confluence of the Vipâsa and Satudri rivers.

2 Apriyayata kusikebhir Indra : Sâyana explains this, [Kusikagotrot-pannair-rishibhih saha, with the Rishis of the race of Kushika, or it might be rendered, pleased by the Kusikas.

3 Indram atushtavam : the verb is the third preterite of the causal, I have caused to be praised ; or if taken in place of the present tense by Vaidik licence, it may be, according to the commentator, I praise Indra, abiding between heaven and earth, i.e. in the firmament.

4 The verses to this, from verse 9, inclusive, are translated by Professor Roth : Liter. und Gesch. der Veda. 105.

5 The Bhâratas, or descendants of Bharata, are in one sense the descendants of Viswamitra, Bharata being the son of Sakuntalâ, the daughter of the sage. Mâha. Adi P. the same authority. however, makes Vasishtha the family priest of the Bharatas, and their restorer to dominion from which they had been expelled by the Panchâlas.—Ibid. 3735.

14. What do the cattle for thee among the Kikatas;¹ they yield no milk to mix with the Soma, they need not the vessel (for the libation);² bring them to us; (bring also) the wealth of the son of the usurer,³ and give us, Maghavan, (the possession) of the low branches. (of the community).⁴

15. The daughter of Surya given by Jamadagni,⁵ gilding everywhere, and dissipating ignorance, has emitted a mighty (sound),⁶ and has diffused ambrosial imperishable food amongst the gods.

16. May she, gliding everywhere, quickly bring us

1 The Kikatas are said by Sáyana, following Yáska, Nir. vi, 32, to, be countries inhabited by Anáryas, people who do not perform worship. who are infidels, nástikas: Kikata is usually identified with Soute-Bahar, shewing, apparently, that Vaidik Hinduism had not reached the province when this was said or as Kikata was the fountain-head, o, Buddhism, it might be asserted that the Buddhists were here alluded, to, if it were not wholly incompatible with all received notions of the earlier date of the Vedas.

2 Na tapanti gharmaní: Yáska explains the last harmyam, a house; but Sayana calls it a vessel termed Mahavira, used at the rite called, Pragrihya, pragrihyákyakarmopayuktam mahávirapatram, which the cattle do not warm by yielding their milk to it.

3 Abhara pramagandasya vedas: maganda is explained by both scholiasts, kusidin, or usurer, one who says to himself, the money that goes from me will come back doubled, and pra, prefixed, is equivalent to a patronymic.

4 Naichasakham, that which belongs to a low (nicha) branch,⁶ or class (sákhá); the posterity born of Sudras and the like.

5 Jamadagni-dattá, according to Sáyana, may mean, given by the Rishis, those who maintain a blazing jamat-jwalat, fire, Agni; a sense confirmed by the use of the plural in the next verse: the daughter of Surya, so given, is said to be speech, or its personification, vák-devatá.

6 The sound of thunder or the like in the sky.

7 As the prayer or exclamation, which accompanies the burnt offering.

food: (suited) to the five races of men :¹ may she, the daughter of the sun whom the grey-haired Jamadagnis, gave to me, (be) the bestower of new life.²

17. May the horses³ be steady, the axle be strong, the pole be not defective, the yoke not be rotten; may Indra preserve the two yoke-pins from decay : car with uninjured felloes, be ready for us.⁴

18. Give strength, Indra, to our bodies; give strength to our vehicles; (give) strength to our sons and grandsons; that they may live (long); for thou art the giver of strength.

19. Fix firmly the substance of the Khayur (axle), give solidity to the sisu (floor) of the car:⁵ strong axle, strongly fixed by us, be strong; cast us not from out of our conveyance.

20. May this lord of the forest⁷ never desert us, nor do us harm : may we travel prosperously home until the stopping (of the car), until the unharnessing (of the steeds.)

1 Pāñchajanyāsu hrishtishu : here, therefore, the five distinctions are restricted to human beings, confirming the scholiast's notion that the four castes and barbarians are intended.

2 Pakshya, the daughter of Paksha : pakshanirvāhakasya, the distributor of the parts (of the year ?), that is, suryasya, of the sun.

3 Navyam ayur ſdadhāna, having new life or food: the scholiast adds, mama kurvāna bhavantu.

4 Gavau-gachchhata, iti, gāvau aswau: gāva implies, those who go, or, in this place, horses.

5 Visvāmītra, says the commentator, being about to depart from, the sacrifice of Sudas, invokes good fortune for his conveyance.

6 Khadīrasya saram is the text, the essence of the khadira, mimosa catechu, of which the scholiast says the bolt of the axle is made, whilst the Sinsapā, Dalbergia-sisu, furnishes wood for the floor: these are still timber-trees in common use.

7 Vanaspati, that is, here, the timber of which the car is made.

21. Indra, possessor of wealth, protect us this day against our foes with many and excellent defences : may the vile wretch who hates us fall (before us), may the breath of life depart from him whom we hate.

22. As (the tree) suffers pain from the axe, as the Simal flower is (easily) cut off, as the injured cauldron leaking scatters foam, so may mine enemy perish.¹

23. Men, (the might) of the destroyer is not known to you : regarding him as a mere animal, they lead him away desirous (silently to complete his devotions) : the wise condescend not to turn the foolish into ridicule, they do not lead the ass before the horse.²

1 The construction is elliptical : the ellipse is supplied by the scholiast, and the tree is cut down by the axe, so may the enemy be cut down : as one cuts off without difficulty the flower of the Simbala, so may he be destroyed : as the cauldron (ukha) when struck (prahatā), and thence leaking (yeshant, sravanti), scatters foam, or breath from its mouth, so (dweshta madiya, mantrasamarthyena parhata san, phenam, mukhad udgiratu) may that hater, struck by the power of my prayer, vomit foam from his mouth.

2 According to Sayana, the passage alludes to a legend of Vis'wamitra having been seized and bound by the followers of Vasishtha, when, observing a vow of silence these were his reflections on the occasion ; disparaging the rivalry of Vasishtha with himself, as if between an ass and a horse : some of the terms are unusual ; sayakasya, commonly, with an arrow, is explained agreeably to its etymology from so, to destroy, ahsanakarinah, of the finisher or destroyer, that is, of Viswamitra : Loḍham nayanti, they lead the sage, deriving loḍha from lubh-dham, desirous that his penance might not be frustrated, tapasah kshayomā bhud iti, lophena tushnim sthitam Rishim pasum manyamana, thinking the Rishi silent through his desire to be an animal i.e., stupid. Yāska interprets the phrase in the same manner, Lūḍham rishim nayanti pasum manyamanah, they take away the desiring Rishi, thinking him an animal : in the second half the words are also of unusual application : na avajinam vājinaḥ hasayanti : Sāyana derives vajina from vach, speed, with ina affix, and interprets it sarvajna, all-knowing ; the contrary, avajina, by murkha a fool.

24. These sons of Bharata,¹ Indra, understand severance (from the Vasishthas), not association (with them); they urge their steeds (against them) as against a constant foe; they bear a stout bow (for their destruction) in battle.²

1 The sons of Bharata are the descendants of Viswamitra whose enmity to the race of Vasishtha is here decidedly expressed: this and the preceeding stanzas are regarded as imprecations denounced by Viswamitra against Vasishtha, with whom he had quarrelled on account of his disciple the Raja Sūdas.

2 The Anukramanika observes the last verse of this hymn have the sense of imprecations: they are inimical to the Vasishtha, and the Vasishthas hear them not, antya abhisaparthas ta vasishthadweshinyoh na vasishthah sriṇwanti: the commentator of the Index cites this verse of the Brihad-devata in confirmation: satadha bhidyate murddha kirtanena srutena vā, teshām bālāḥ pramiyante tasmāt tasmāt tāś tu nā kirttayet, the head is split a hundred times by reciting or listening to them, and his children perish; therefore let not a man repeat them: lōdham rishim nayanti, passes it by without animadversion, expressly because he says the verses are inimical to the Vasishthas, and he is of the race of Vasishtha, of the Kāpishthala branch, Sa Vasishthadweshirik-ahamcha kāpishthalo Vasishthah, atas tā na nirbravimi: it is not unusual for transcribers to omit these passages altogether, as noticed by Professor Roth, and by Professor Muller: see the various readings of the latter, Rig-Veda, vol. II. Introduction, p. 56.

ANUVA KA V.

SUKTA I. (LIV.)

THE deities are the Viswadevas; the Rishi is Prajapati, the son of either Vishwamitra or Vach; the metre is Trishtubh.

THEY recite repeatedly this gratifying praise to the great product of sacrifice (Agni): may he who (is endowed) with domestic radiance hear us: may the imperishable Agni, (endowed) with divine radiance, hear us.

2. Knowing their greatness, offer worship to the vast heaven and to the earth: my desire, wishing (for felicity) proceeds¹ (to them), in whose praise the gods desirous of adoration, delight together with their worshippers at the sacrifice.

3. Heaven and earth, may your truth be ever inviolable: be propitious to us for the due completion of the rite: this adoration (Agni) is offered to heaven and earth: I worship (them) (with sacrificial) food; I solicit of them precious (wealth.)

4. Heaven and earth, endowed with truth, they who are the ancient declarers of the truth, have obtained from you (what they desired); and so, earth, men cognizant (of the greatness of you both) have worshipped you for the sake of triumphing over (hostile) heroes in battle.

5. Who knows what is the truth, or who may here declare it? What is the proper path that leads to the gods? their inferior abiding places are beheld,² as breath and blood, but where is the soul;¹ who may repair to the sage to ask this?

5. Immature² (in understanding), undiscerning in mind, I inquire of those things which are hidden (even) from the gods: (what are) the seven threads³ which the sages have spread to envelop the sun,⁴ in whom all abide?

6. Ignorant, I inquire of the sages who know (the truth); not as one knowing (do I inquire), for the sake of (gaining) knowledge: what is that One alone, who has upheld these six spheres in the form of the unborn?⁵

7. Let him who knows this (truth) quickly declare it; the mysterious condition of the beautiful ever-

1 Bhumya asur-asrig-atma kwa swit: Bhumi, according to Sayana, implies the sthula s'arira, gross body; asuh, breath; the sukshma s'arira, or subtle body; and asrij, blood, the aggregate elements of which the body is formed; atma, or chetana, the thinking principle, although connected with gross and subtle form, is nowhere perceptible as a separate object, and not to be apprehended, either by pupil or teacher.

2 Pâkah, properly ripening, being or making mature; but it is here and elsewhere explained by paktavyah, what is to be matured; apakwamatiraham, I, of immature mind.

3 Sapta tantun, may be the seven forms of the Soma sacrifice, or the seven metres of the Vedas, by which the gods, or the Sun, are induced to be present.

4 Vatse bashkaye adhi; the first is explained by the Scholiast, sarvasya nivasa bhute: bashkaye is rendered A'ditye: but, as Sayana adds, the usual meaning of bashkaya is a yearling calf; but as we have vatsa also, which likewise means a calf, bashkaya must have some other sense;—such as time, or rather, the sun.

5 Yas-tastambha shad-ima rajansi ajasya rupe kim api svidakam the one may be, according to the Scholiast, the orb of the ungenerated sun, on which the six seasons depend; or the satyaloka, whence there is no return, and which may be considered as [the stay of the other six worlds or regions; or, agreeably to his Vedanta views, 'the one' is the sole form of the unborn creator, which is the same with the universe.

moving (sun): the rays shed (their) milk from his (exalted) head, investing his form with radiance; they have drunk up the water by the paths (by which they were poured forth.)¹

8. The mother (earth), worships the father, (sun with holy rites, for the sake of water; but he has anticipated (her wants) in his mind: where-upon, desirous of progeny, he is penetrated by the dews of impregnation, and (all) expectant of abundance, exchange words (congratulation.)²

9. The mother, (sky), was associated in (sustaining) the burthen of the fulfiller of desires, (the earth): the embryo (water) rested within the (womb of the) clouds: thereupon the calf bellowed,³ and beheld the omniform cow in the three combinations.⁴

10. The one sole (sun), having three mothers and three fathers,⁵ stood on high: none ever over-weary him: The (gods) on the summit of the sky take counsel respecting him in language all-comprehending, (but) not extending to all.⁶

1 The solar rays; although especial agents in sending down rain, are equally active in its re-absorption.

2 This is merely a metaphorical description of the agency of the sun in sending rain upon the earth. and its consequent fertility.

3 The cloud thundered.

4 Viswarupyam gam trishu yojaneshu is explained, the earth diversified by various crops, in consequence of the co-operation of the cloud, the wind, the rays of the sun.

5 The three worlds, earth, sky, heaven, and the three deities presiding over them, Agni, Vâyu, Surya.

6 Vis'wavidam vacham avis'waminvam, speech or discourse, knowing all, or which may be known by all; or that which does not extend to all, a-sarva-vyapinim; speech here, according to Sayana, means language,—vacham garjitalakshanam.

11 The twelve-spoked wheel¹ of the true (sun) revolves round the heavens, and never (tends) to decay : seven hundred and twenty children in pairs,² Agni, abide in it.

12. They have termed the five-footed, twelve-formed parent, Purishin,³ when in the further hemisphere of the sky : and others have termed him Arpita,⁴ when in the hither (portion of the sky);⁵ shining in his seven-wheeled (car), each (wheel) having six spokes.

13. All beings abide in this five-spoked⁶ revolving wheel; the heavily-loaded axle is never heated; its eternal, compact nave is never worn away.

14. The even-fellied, undecaying wheel, repeatedly

1 According to Sayana, the twelve signs of the Zodiac; but the expression may mean the twelve months. At the same time, M. Mollien has shown, that there is no reason to suppose the Zodiacal divisions were unknown to the Hindus at the probable date of the Vedas.—Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, premiere serie, vol 3.

2 Nights and days; three hundred and sixty each.

3 Deriving it from purisha, water, Purishin is a name of the sun, as the source of rain: the first five feet are the five seasons, the dewy and cold seasons forming one; the twelve forms are the twelve months, or twelve Adityas.

4 Sayana considers this as synonymous with adkinam or parayattam, dependent upon, and applicable to the sun, as dependent upon or influenced by, the course of the year, or recurrence of the solstices; moving quick or slow, according to his southern or northern declination.

5 Upare is the term of the text, which the Scholiast explains, where living creatures are delighted,—uparamanta asmin prāninah; or it may mean a year, va samvatsarah; but it may have a relation, perhaps, to the expression in the first line of the verse, divah pare ardhe, in the further part of the sky; upara may imply the nearer or hither part, referring to the two ayanas, or solstices; the seven wheels are the seven rays, or the seven days of the week, the six spokes the six seasons.

6 The five seasons: or the text may refer to the cycle of five years.

revolves: ten,¹ united on the upper surface,² bear (the world): the orb³ of the sun proceeds, invested with water, and in it are all beings deposited.

15. Of those that are born together, sages have called the seventh the single-born; for six are twins, and are movable, and born of the gods;⁴ their desirable (properties), placed severally in their proper abode, are various (also) in form, and revolve for (the benefit of) that which is stationary.⁵

16. They have called these, my virtuous females, males;⁶ he who has eyes beholds; the blind man seeth not: he who is a sage son understands this, and he who discriminates is the father of the father.⁷

1 The ten organs of sense, or the five Lokapalas, guardians of the world, and five classes of human beings, according to [Sāyana: perhaps the ten regions of space would be more appropriate.

2 Uttānāyam, or [the upper part; urddhwatanāyam, or the pole, ishāyam; or the earth spread above, upari vistrīta bhūmyām; it is not clear what is intended.

3 Suryāya cakshush, lit. the eye of the sun, either the display of the nature or radiance of the sun, or his orb, being, as it were, the eye of all; sarvasya cakshuh sthāniyam va mandalam.

4 These are six seasons, made of two months each; the seventh is the intercalary month, which has no fellow, and has no A'ditya to preside over it, wherefore it is not considered to be of divine origin like the rest; the six seasons are also termed Rishis, rishhayah, which Sāyana explains by gantārah, goes; in what sense does not appear; it may, perhaps, refer to the presence of a Rishi in the sun's car in each of the twelve months, if that be not rather a Paurāṇik than a Vaidik notion.—Vishnu Purāṇa, p. 233.

5 That is, the several seasons are diversified by the varieties of temperature, produce, and the like, for the benefit of the world.

6 This is a piece of grammatical mysticism; ras'mi, a ray of the sun, here personified as a female, is properly a noun masculine.

7 According to the Scholiast, the sun is to be considered as the father of the rays of light, which again, in their collective capacity being the cause of rain, are the fosterers, or parent of the earth; the

17. The cow, holding her calf underneath with her fore-feet, and then above with her hind-feet, has risen up; whither is she gone; to whom has she turned back when half-away; where does she bear young: it is not amidst the herd.¹

18. He who knows the protector of this (world) as the inferior associated with the superior, and the superior associated with the inferior, he is, as it were, a sage; but who in this world can expound (it); whence is the divine mind in its supremacy engended.²

19. Those which (the sages) have termed descending they have also termed ascending; and those they have termed ascending, they have also called descending: and those (orbits) which thou, Soma and Indra, hast made, bear along the worlds like (oxen) yoked to a wain.

sun is therefore father of the father, and he who knows 'this is identical with the sun: another explanation is that which Manu intimates; an intelligent son may be termed the parent of an ignorant father: the philosophical view of the meaning is, that there is no distinction of gender in soul; it is neither male, nor female, nor neuter, and therefore may be said to be either or all, according to the forms with which it is associated; as in the text, twam stri, twam puman asi, twam kumara, uta va kumari, thou art woman, thou art man, thou art youth, thou art maiden; being, in fact, neither, as the Smriti has it,—naiva stri, na puman esha, naiva chayam napunsakam.

1 This is rather obscure: according to the Scholiast, the cow is the burnt offering, and the calf is Agni, and the positions of the two indicate the station of the offerer with respect to the sun; or the cow may typify the solar rays collectively, and the calf the worshipper.

2 Agni the inferior, A'ditya the superior; but they are both identical, fire and the sun being the same.

3 The rays of light, or [the planets changing their relative position as they revolve.]

4 The moon and the sun; Indra being one of the twelve A'dityas, or identical here with the sun.

20. Two birds associated together,¹ and mutual friends, take refuge in the same tree : one of them eats the sweet fig ;² the other, abstaining from food, merely looks on.

21. Where the smooth-gliding (rays)³ cognizant (of their duty, distil the perpetual portion of ambrosial (water) ; there has the lord and steadfast protector of all beings consigned me, (though) immature (in wisdom.)⁴

22. In the tree⁵ into which the smooth-gliding (rays), feeders on the sweet (produce), enter, and again bring forth (light) over all ; they have called the fruit sweet, but he partakes not of it who knows not the protector (of the universe).⁶

23. They who know the station of Agni upon the earth ; the station of Vayu that was fabricated from the firmament ; and that station of the Sun which is placed in heaven, obtain immortality.⁷

1 There is some probability in Sayana's explanation, that the vital and supreme spirit, Jivatmâ and paramatma, are here alluded to under the figure of the two birds.

2 Pippalam swâdu atti ; the philosophical interpretation is, that the vital spirit enjoys the rewards of acts. Yaska's explanation is something different, although he agrees in considering two species of soul to be intended as abiding in one body—Nir, xiv. 30.

3 Suparna is here explained, supatanah sobhanagamana ras'mayah ; the goes easily or beautifully, the rays of the sun.

4 Aditya has admitted, or admits me, the reciter of the hymn, to the sphere of the sun.

5 The orb or region of the sun.

6 Tam na unnasad yah pitaram na veda ; here pitaram is explained, in its general sense of pâlaka cherisher, protector ; the sun, or, according to the Vaidântik gloss, the supreme spirit.

7 Yadgayatre adhi gayatram traishtubhad-va traishtubham, &c ; the purport of this phraseology, borrowed from the several metres, Gayatri, Trishtubh, and Jagati, is not very clear ; it may be merely an

25. With the stanzas in the Jagati metre he fixed the rain in heaven,⁵ and surveyed the Sun in the obscure and mythical reference to the text of the Veda, a knowledge of which is essential to final felicity; but Sayana explains the words as in the translation; gāyatra he derives from; gayatri, the earth; and in the second place he calls it the pada or station of Agni; traishtubha he identifies with the firmament, and the place of Vāyu; and jagat as the sun in Jagati, the solar region: another interpretation is derived from the ritual use of the three several metres, and their combinations, at the three daily sacrifices.

1 Gāyatrena pratimimite arkam, he, severally, measures the mantra with the Gayatri metre; or a part being put for the whole, with any Vaidik metre.

2 Trishtubhena vākam; vāka is explained to signify either dwicha or tricha rupam, the form or phrase of two or three stanzas; or it may imply a Sūkta.

3 Vākena-vākam; when the first vaka has the sense of Sūkta, then its repetition may imply the Varga or Anuvāka; but if it signify a couplet or triplet, it seems more applicable to the Sūkta or hymn.

4 Aksharena sapta vanih, the seven generic metres of the Veda with the syllable; the syllable being the chief element of the metre; thus, the Gāyatri consists of eight syllables; Trishtubh, of eleven; Jagati, of twelve; it is not said who thus composed or classified the metrical system of the Vedas, but it appears, from the commentary on the following stanza, the Brahmā is intended when the verb is in the singular; perhaps the Rishis, or the priests, are alluded to when it is in the plural.

5 Sindhūm divi astabhayat; Brahma, says the Scholiast, at the time of creation, fixed the shedder of water, udākasya syandakam, in the sky; or it might be intended for Aditya, as by the text—Jāgato va esha ya esha tapati; he may be termed Jāgata who gives heat (to the world).

Rathantara.¹ They have declared three divisions of the Gâyatri metre,² whence it surpasses (all the rest) in force and majesty.

26. I invoke the milch cow that is easily milked, that the handy milker may milk her;³ may Savitri accept this our excellent libation, that his heat may (thereby) increase: it is for this, verily, that I earnestly invoke him.

27. She comes lowing, abounding in rich (products) desiring her milk to the Aswins: may she thrive for our great advantage.

28. The cow bellows for her calf, (who stands) with winking eyes, and lows as (she) proceeds to lick his forehead: she utters a cry, as, anxious, she sees the moisture in the corners of his mouth, and nourishes him with her milk.

29. He, too, bellows, and the cow utters inarticulate sounds, as, encompassed by him, she repairs to her stall; (influenced) by her instincts, she acts like a human being, and, radiant, manifests her nature.

30. Life endowed with breath, eager (in discharge of its functions,., reposes,⁴ steady, in the midst of its (proper) abodes: the life of the mortal body, cognate

² Gayatrasya samidhas tisra âbuh; Sayana considers samidh as merely signifying pada, division of a stanza; of which the Gâyatri verse has three.

³ The cow is the cloud, the milk the rain, and Vayu, or wind, the milker; the metaphor is continued in the three following verses, where the calf is the world, or mankind anxious for the rain, as the cause of abundance.

1 Swadhabhih-putrakritaih by offerings made by the sons.

2 This verse occurs in the Yajush xxxvii. 17 ; Mahidhara explains it in the like manner.

3 Man, according to Sayana's philosophical interpretation ; but that of the Nairuktas, which he cites, is probably more consistent with the intention of the original, which considers wind as the cause of rain, to be alluded to allegorically.

4 Nabhir atra bandhu ; Sayana refers nabhih to the preceding terms, me pitâ janitâ, meaning the moisture of the earth, by which corn is abundant, and which, as derived from the rain of heaven, makes the latter the parent and progenitor of man : bandhuh he renders bandhikâ, binding or supporting, and makes it an epithet of prithivi, the earth : it may be doubted if this is the meaning, and the term nâbhi possibly implies the antariksha, or firmament, completing, with heaven and earth, the three regions concerned in providing sustenance for man.

5 Uttânayos-chamvor-yonir antar : the uplifted ladles are heaven and earth, and the womb of all beings between them is the firmament, the region of the rain.

has deposited the germ (of the fruitfulness) of the daughter.¹

34. I ask thee, (Institutor of the rite), what is the uttermost end of the earth: I ask thee, where is the navel of the world. I ask thee, what is the fecundating power of the rain-shedding steed: I ask thee, what is the supreme heaven of (holy) speech.²

35. This altar is the uttermost end of the earth:³ this sacrifice is the navel of the world:⁴ this Soma juice is the fecundating power of the rain-shedding steed: this Brahmâ is the supreme heaven of (holy) speech.⁵

36. The seven⁶ (sustaining, the embryo rain) for half a year, the fecundating (element) of the world, abide, by appointment, in the various functions of Vishnu. By their intelligence they pervade in thought all around (them), for they are intelligent and diffusive.

1 The father, the heaven, may be regarded as identical with either Aditya or Indra; the daughter is the earth, whose fertility depends upon the rain deposited as a germ in the firmament.

2 The answers in the following stanza explain what is here intended.

3 As in the text, etâvati vai prithivi yâvati vedih, such or so much, verily, as the earth, so much is the altar; it is the essence of the whole earth.

4 Nâbhi merely means sannâhana, the binding together of man with the means of subsistence, or the crops that spring from the rain which falls as the consequence of sacrifice or of oblations.

5 The text of the Vedas, of which Brahmâ, or perhaps the priest so termed, is the author or expounder.

6 The solar rays, saptârdhaharbhah; either retaining the rains for half a year; that is, during the dry months, or abiding in a part of half of space, or in the mid-heaven or firmament.

7 Vishnu is said to be here the pervading sun; vyapakasya Adityasya in whose various duties of cherishing the world, the solar rays are by direction, pradisa, especially employed.

37. I distinguish not if I am this all;¹ for I go perplexed, and bound in mind; when the first-born (perceptions of the truth reach me, then immediately shall I obtain a portion (of the meaning) of that (sacred) word.

38. The immortal, cognate with the mortal, affected by (desire of) enjoyment,² goes to the lower or the upper (sphere): but (men beholding them) associated, going everywhere (in other words together); have comprehended the one, but have not comprehended the other.³

39. All the gods have taken their seats upon this supreme heaven, the imperishable (text) of the Veda; what will he, who knows not this, do with the Veda? but they who do know it, they are perfect.

40. Cow, mayst thou be rich in milk through abundant fodder; that we also may be rich (in abundance); eat grass at all seasons, and, roaming (at will), drink pure water.

41. The sound (of the clouds has been uttered, fabricating the waters, and being one-footed, two-footed,

1 Na vijānami yadiva idam asmi; or it may be read; yadi va idam, that I am like that which this is; or if I am this; in either case, the expression warrants the Vaidic character which Sayana ascribes to it implying the identity of individual and universal spirit.

2 Swadhyā gribhitā, lit. seized by food; put for any sensual gratification.

four-footed, eight-footed, nine-footed, or infinite in the highest heaven.¹

42. From her² the clouds shed abundant rain, and thence (the people of) the four quarters live: thence the moisture spreads (to the grain), and the universe exists.

43. I beheld near (me) the smoke of burning cow-dung; and by that all-pervading mean (effect), discovered the cause (fire); the priests have dressed the Soma ox,³ for such are their first duties.

44. The three, with beautiful tresses, look down in their several seasons upon the earth; one of them, when the year is ended, shears (the ground); one, by his acts, overlooks the universe; the course of one is visible, though not his form;⁴

1 The sound, gauri, is explained, in one sense, that of the clouds or sky, as differently originated; in one station, ekapadi, from the clouds; in two, dwapadi, from the clouds and sky; in four the four quarters of space; in eight, the four points and four intermediate points of the horizon; or from them and the zenith, navapadi, nine-stationed: another explanation makes gauri articulate speech, single as the crude form only double as declension and conjugation, four-fold as nouns, verbs, prepositions, and particles; eight-fold, as the eight cases, including the vocative; and ninefold as the same, with the addition of indeclinable: or again, it may be articulate sound, diversified according to the nine parts of the body whence it may be supposed to proceed, navel, chest, throat, &c.; the highest heaven is said to be the hridaya, ākāśa, or ethereal element of the heart, as the basis of speech, muladhare.

2 The sound of the clouds or sky, the thunder

3 Ukshanam, prisnim apachanta: the Scholiast explains prisni by Soma, and ukshanam, the shedder or bestower of the reward of the sacrifice.

4 The three are, Agni, who burns up the earth; the Sun, who revives it by his light, and the rain which he sends; and Vayu, the wind, who contributes to the fall of rain.

45. Four are the definite grades of speech :¹ those Brāhmans who are wise know them :² three, deposited in secret, indicate no meaning : men speak the fourth grade of speech.³

46. They have styled (him, the Sun),⁴ Indra, Mitra:

1 Chatwari vākparimita padāni; the explanations of this piece of mysticism somewhat vary; the four padas may be om, and the three sacred words, bhur, bhuvar, swar; or the four parts of speech, nouns, verbs, prepositions, and particles; or the language of the mantras, the kalpa, the Brāhmaṇa, and laukika, or current speech : or the languages of serpents, birds, insects, and man; or they may be para, audible; pasyanti, visible, audible only to sages and saints; madhyama, intelligible or expressive, proceeding from the heart; and vaiśvāni, articulate, as residing in the mouth and enunciated by the palate, lips tongue, &c. : or again, they may be the languages of the three upper worlds and of the world of man.

2 Brahmaṇa ye manishinah : Brahmanas here according to Sayana, are those acquainted with Sabdabrahma; Brahma as the word, or, in fact, Yogis, mysticists

3 Of the four grades, padas three may be considered mystical; but we have another set from the Brahmanas quoted by Sayana, from Yaska—Nir. xiii. 9 : Speech, vāk, it is said was created fourfold; three kinds of which are in the three regions, the fourth amongst the Pasus; the form on earth, associated with Agni, is in the Rathantara; the form in the firmament, associated with Vayu, is in the Vāmadevya mantras; that which is in heaven, with A'ditya, is Brihati or in the thunder (stanayitnau): whatever else was more than this was placed amongst the Pasus, literally, animal; but here apparently implying the Brāhmanas,—āthapasushu, tato, yāvag-atirichyate tām Brāhmaneshuh; although the inference that follows rather implies the Brāhmans as it is said; therefore, the Brāhmans speak both languages both that of the gods and that of man; tasmād Brāhmaṇa ubhayim vācham vadanti y i cha devānam ya cha manushyanām: the key to this is to be found, probably, in the Upanishads.

4 The Sun is S'yanā's interpretation: Yāska says Agni; but they are the same, and are the same as all the other forms, Varuna, Agni, and he is the celestial, well-winged Gerutmat, for learned priests call one by many names: as they speak of Agni, Yama, Matariswan.

47. The smooth-gliding wafters (of the rain, the solar rays), clothing the waters with a dark cloud, ascend to heaven; they come down again from the dwelling of the rain, and immediately the earth is moistened with water.

49. Saraswati, that retiring breast,² which is the source of delight, with which thou bestowest all good things, which is the container of wealth, the distributor of riches, the giver of good (fortune); that (bosom) do thou lay open at this season for our nourishment.

50. The Devas sacrifice with sacrifice, for such are their first duties; those mighty ones assemble in the celestial region where the divinities who are to be propitiated (by sacred rites) abide.³

according to the texts, Ekaiva vâ mahan atma devatâ suryah, the divine sun is the one great spirit; and Agni sarva devatâh, Agni is all the divinities.

1 The wheel is the year of twelve months; the three axles are the three double seasons, or hot, wet, and cold; and the three hundred and sixty spokes are the days of the luni-solar year, as we have had before.

2 Stanah sâsayah, sayana, sleeping, according to. Sâyana; dchevarttamana, abiding in the body: Mahidhara, Yaj, xxxviii. 5; explains it as if asleep, not subject to the enjoyment of others, supta iva aste-anything-anupabhuktatwat.

have obtained the portion, or condition of gods, by the former worship of Agni ; or the R'adhya may be the same as the A'dityas, or the Angirasas or they may be the deities presiding over the metres, chhando-abhimāninaḥ ; it would seem that in Sayana's day the purport of the designation, S'adhya had become uncertain ; they are named amongst the minor divinities in the Amara koṣha, and from Bhāratmalla we learn that they were twelve in number but no other peculiarity is specified.

1 Abhipato vrishtibhis-tarpayantam, satisfying with rain the reservoirs, salilādharan ; the word abhipata is unusual, and may be differently explained : as, favourably, willingly, anākulyena.

ANUVAKA XXIII.

SUKTA I. (CLXV.)

THE hymn is supposed to repeat a conversation between Indra, Agastya, and the Maruts, and the interlocutors are the Rishis of the uktā; that is, the Maruts are the Rishis of the third, fifth, and seventh verses; Agastya of the three last, and Indra of the rest. Indra as Marutwat, or attended by the Maruts is the deity; the metre is Trishtubh.¹

(INDRA speaks),—With what auspicious fortune have the Maruts, who are of one age, one residence, one dignity, watered (the earth) together; with what intention: whence have they come; Showerers of rain, they venerate, through desire of wealth, the energy (that is generated in the world by rain.)

2. Of whose oblations do the youthful (Maruts) approve: who attracts them to his (own) sacrifice (from the rites of others,; with what powerful praise may we propitiate (them), wandering, like kites in the mid-air?

3. (The Maruts,—Indra, lord of the good, whither dost thou, who art entitled to honour, proceed alone: what means this (absence of attendance): when followed (by us), thou requirest (what is right);² Lord of fleet horses, say to us, with pleasant words, that which thou (hast to say) to us.³

1 This hymn appears to vindicate the separate, or at least preferential worship of Indra, without comprehending at the same time as a matter of course, the adoration of the Maruts.

2 Samprichchase; samichinam prichchase is Sayana's explanation: Mahidhara renders it, thou askest of the people, with kindly words, which is the way: Yajush, xxxiii. 27.

3 Mahidhara's rendering is, tell us the reason of your going alone; for we are yours.

4. The white ever-moving Maruts have mingled with (their) associate (lightning), like (youths) with common women;¹ the formidable deities do not overwhelm heaven and earth (with rain) but advance their prosperity out of (friendly) regard.

5. Rodasi,² the own (wife) of the dispersers (of the clouds), with dishevelled hairs and mind devoted to her ords, woes them to associate with her; of effulgent form she has got upon the chariot of the rest-less (Maruts) as Surya³ (ascended the car of the Aswinis) and comes hither (with the celerity) of the sun.

6. The ever-youthful Maruts have placed the young (Rodasi, lightning) in the brilliant (car) commingling (with them), and vigorous (in yielding rain) on sacrifices (being undertaken); then, Maruts, your sacrificer, presenting oblations, pouring out the Soma juice, and offering adoration, chants the sacred hymn.

7. I proclaim that greatness of the Maruts which is true and worthy of celebration, inasmuch as their high-minded, haughty, and ever-enduring (pride) supports a flourishing progeny.⁴

1 This means a public woman. (Sādhāranyeva) the text is interesting as describing the manners of the period.

2 Rodasi usually means, as in the preceding stanza, heaven and earth; here it is said to signify the lightning, or the bride of the Maruts, Marutpatni vidyud-vā.

3 Suryeva, like Suryā; the Scholiast understands by this appellation either the wife or the daughter of Surya; the latter is the more usual form of the legend.

4 There is no substantive in the hemistich; but the epithets, vrishamana, ahamyuh, sthira, being feminine, imply a substantive in the same gender, which the Scholiast renders by Rodasi, the wife of the Maruts, who by contributing to the fall of rain, assists in the sustenance of mankind.

8. Mitra, Varuna, and Aryaman, defend (this) sacrifice from calumny and destroy unworthy objects; they cause the yet unfallen and showering (rains) to descend when Maruts, the water-yielding (season) gives increase to this (world.)¹

9. None of us, Maruts, have attained either from near or from afar, the limit of your strength; those (Maruts) increasing in energy and vigour, overwhelm their enemies like an ocean.

10. Let us, who are beloved of Indra, glorify him today; let us glorify him tomorrow at the sacred rite; we shall glorify him in future as we did of old so that Ribhukshin may ever be favourable to us amongst men.

11. This praise, Maruts, is for you; this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author capable of conferring delight (by his laudations); may the praise reach you for (the good of your) persons, so that we may thence obtain food, strength and long life.

SUKTA IV (CLXVIII)

THE deities and Rishi are the same: the first seven verses are in the Yagati, the last three in the Tristubh metre.

MARUTS your alacrity is uniform at every sacrifice; you hold all your actions² for the behoof of the celestials; do I therefore invite you to come hither by most excellent hymns for your powerful protection of heaven and earth¹ and your beneficent praise.

¹ Vavridha im maruto dativarah; the latter may refer to the Yajamāna, when the phrase will be, when, Maruts, the worshipper, or he by whom the offering is presented, promotes this your increase.

² In the shape of yielding rain.

2. They who are self-born, self-invigorated and tremulous (in movement) are as-if embodied and created (to confer) abundant food and heaven; thousands in number as the undulations of water they are to be lauded when shedding water like cows (yielding milk.)

3. They, who are like Soma plants, with well-nourished branches² and then pressed out and are drunk; they abide like devoted adherents, in the hearts (of men); upon their shoulders hangs (a lance)³ like a youthful woman, and in their hands a guard and a sword are wielded.

4. Mutually united, they come easily from Div. (the region of the Devas);⁴ immortal Maruts, animate us by your own words; shorn of sin, present at many (sacrifices) brilliant-eyed the Maruts have shaken the firmest mountains.

5. Maruts, armed with thunder-bolts, who (standing) amongst you, sets you of yourselves in motion, as jaws are (set in motion) by the tongue; as clouds, yielding rain, are driven, as a horse is driven during day so (those desirous of sustenance) excite you in various ways.

1 The text has Rodasi i. e., the region of the Devas and Prithivi (the kingdom of Prithu.)

2 Triptansavah-triptāvayavah, having satisfied or well-nourished limbs; which, as applicable to the Soma creeper, may be rendered branches; the analogy of the comparison here between the Soma and the Maruts is not very obvious.—Wilson.

3 What is suspended on the shoulders of the Maruts, the text does not specify: Sayana suggests, either a lance, s'akti, or the beauty of the arms, bhuja lakshmi.—Wilson.

4 It is clear that Maruts were a class of higher men or Devas who came to Prithivi (India) from the region of the Devas.

6. Where, O Maruts, is the limit of the vast region (whence you come)¹ : where is the beginning of that to which you proceed : when you disperse the dense vapour like light grass and hurl down the brilliant rain-cloud by the thunder-bolt.

7. Proportionate to your wealth, Maruts, is your liberality ; it is helped (by Indra), happiness-bestowing, brilliant, fruitful, favourable to the husbandman, propitious : it is like the gifts of a (rich man) quick (in yielding fruits) and like the victorious force of the (Asuras).²

8. The moving waters (of the rivers) are arrested : when the thunder-bolts utter the voice of the clouds ; but the lightnings smile in the firmament when the Maruts sprinkle water on the earth.

9. Prisni bore the brilliant troop of the quick-coursing Maruts for the great battle (with the clouds), whereupon (mankind) immediately saw the desiderated food.

10. This laudation, O Maruts, is for you ; this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author capable of conferring delight : may the praise reach you for (the good of your) persons so that we may thence obtain food, strength and longevity.

² Asuryeva janjati, asurasya sarvabhibhavanti s'aktih : according to the Scholiast, the similitude consists in this, that ; as the Asuras take from one to give to another, so the winds plunder the clouds to enrich the earth — Wilson.

SUKTA V. (CLXIX).

THE deity is Indra : the Rishi Agastya ; the metre Tristubh.

THOU, Indra, art mighty for thou art protector and hast not abandoned the great Maruts ; therefore, creator of the Maruts, favourably disposed towards us, grant us those blessings which are most dear to thee.

2. O thou having many men, the shedder of water for men and learned ; they are, Indra, united (with thee) ; the host of Maruts is delighted for acquiring victory in battle, the instrument of happiness.

3. The weapon, Indra, is at hand for our (good) ; the Maruts send down the long-accumulated rain ; Agni is blazing for the ceremony ; the oblations encompass him as the waters (surround) an island.

4. Do thou, Indra, speedily grant us wealth (becoming thee and we shall gratify) the donor with a most worthy present : we, thy praisers, offer to thee, the ready giver of boons, the laudations that would propitiate thee ; we nourish thee with sacrificial food as they cherish the bosom (of a female for the sake of replenishing it) with sweet (milk).

5. Thy riches, Indra, are most delighting¹ and helpful to one desirous to sacrifice : may those Maruts be propitious to us : the divine beings who were anxious to go first to the ceremony.

6. Go, Indra, to the mighty, rain shedding leaders (of the clouds) and put forth thy exertions (being stationed) in Antariksha ; for their broad footed steeds.

¹ Tve raya Indra tos'atamah : or raya may mean kinsmen or friends ; that is, the Maruts.

² Popularly firmament : but it refers to the region between Swarga and Prithivi.

stand (firm) like the manly energies of an enemy in the field of battle.¹

7. The noise of the formidable, dark-coloured, swift-moving and advancing Maruts is every where echoed; (the noise of them) who strike down their mortal (foes) gathering in a host against them with their own weapons, as (they strike down) a contemptible enemy.²

8. Associated with Maruts do thou Indra, the originator of all creatures, for thine own honour, pierce the sorrow-destroying receptacles of the waters, for thou Indra, art glorified by the lauded divinities: may we obtain from thee food, strength and long life.

1 Tirthe naryah paunsyani tasthanu : arya is said to be for arch, satroh of an enemy : tirthe, yuddhamarge, the way of battle : or, according to the Scholiast, it may be rendered, the broad based, dark coloured clouds. stand like the manly armies of a prince, swaminah on the royal road, raja vithyam.—Wilson

2 So Sayana interprets rinavaram; otherwise, it might be thought to imply a debtor, as if the cloud was debtor to the winds for its contents,

SUKTA VI. (CLXX.)

THE deity and Rishi as before, but the hymn is in the form of a dialogue between them; the first two verses are in the Bṛikati and the last three in the Anushtubh metre.

(INDRA speaks,—It is not certain what to-day or what to-morrow will yield to us;² who comprehends this; verily the mind of any other (being) is of an unsteady (nature) and even that which has been profoundly studied is (in time) forgotten.³

2. (Agastya),—Why Indra, dost thou wish to kill us: the Maruts are thy brethren;⁴ share with them (the offering) peacefully; destroy not us in enmity.

3. (Indra),—Wherefore, brother Agastya, being a friend dost thou treat me with disrespect? Truly we know what is in thy mind: thou dost not desire to give us any thing.

1 The Scholiast cites the Nirukta, 1 6 for the 'occasion of the dialogue: Agastya, having intended to offer a sacrifice to Indra, proposed to make offerings also to the Maruts, of which Indra complains; the object being evidently, what has been elsewhere indicated, the association of the Maruts with Indra in the worship addressed to the latter, apparently an innovation, and objected to by some of the worshippers of Indra.—Wilson.

2 Na nānam asti no swah, lit. it is not certain, nor is it tomorrow; but Sayana and Yaska consider the first negative to imply to-day; it is not certain, Indra says, whether I shall receive any offering either to-day or to-morrow: hope or expectation of the future should not be entertained.—Wilson.

3 The latter portion of this stanza is not very clear: anyasya chittam abhi sancharenyam, utadhitam vi nasvati; literally, the mind of another is very wandering; although read, (it) perishes. Roth translates it; on the fickleness of the other (? what other)—rests the (well-grounded) expectation.—Wilson.

4 Being equally with Indra, the sons of Aditi, according to the Puranas; but here, probably, nothing more is meant than affinity of function.—Wilson.

4. (Agastya),—Let the priests decorate the altar; let them kindle the fire before; and then let us both consummate the sacrifice, the inspirer of immortal (wisdom).¹

5. (Agastya),—Thou, Vasupati, art the lord of riches; thou, Mitrapati, art the firm stay (of us) thy friends: Declare, Indra, along with the Maruts, (thy approval of our acts), and partake of the oblation offered in due season.

SUKTA VII. (CLXXI.)

The deities are the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre Trishtubh.

I APPROACH you, Maruts, with this respectful homage, and with a hymn beg your favour against eager (foes): with minds pacified by our praises, suppress your anger, and let loose your horses.²

2. This praise, accompanied by offerings, Maruts, is for you, offered from the heart: accept it, divinities, with favour, and come with willing minds (to receive) these (laudations), for you are the augmenters of sacrificial food.

3. May the Maruts, now hymned, bestow happiness upon us: may Maghavan, now glorified, be propitious to us: Maruts, may all the ensuing days that may be expected by us prove gratifying, and full of enjoyment.

¹ Some refer this stanza to Indra, but it seems more suited to Agastya; in which case the two are either the sacrificer and his wife, or the institutor of the ceremony and the officiating priest.

² Take the horses out of your car, that you may not come back to the sacrifice in anger: this hymn again indicates a sort of trimming between the worship of Indra and of the Maruts.

7. I glorify with reverence, at this sacrifice, (the two), who are vast, expansive, multiform, infinite, auspicious; who support (all beings) by their bounty: defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

8. May this sacrifice be the means of expiating those offences which we may have committed against the gods, against a friend at any time, against a son-in-law;¹ defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

9. May both these, accepting praise, and friendly to man, be favourable to me: may they both be associated as guardians for my protection: deities, we your adorers, propitiating you with (sacrificial food, desire ample (wealth), for the sake of making liberal donations.

10. Endowed with understanding, I repeat to Heaven and Earth this initial praise, to be heard around: may paternal (heaven) and maternal (earth) preserve us from reprehensible iniquity; and ever nigh defend us with their protection.

11. May this (hymn), Heaven and Earth, be successful; (the hymn) which, Father and Mother, I repeat to you both on this occasion; be ever with your protection in the proximity of those who praise you;² that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

1 Jaspātim va: Jah, it is said, means 'daughters;' patim is, as usual, lord or husband.

2 Devanam avame: the first is interpreted stotrinam, 'of praisers.

SUKTA VII. (CLXXXVI).

THE deities are the Vis'wadevas; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

MAY the divine Savitri, the benefactor of all men, come benignant to our solemnity, together with the divinities of earth, and do you, who are (always) young, willingly present at our sacrifice, exhilarate us, as (you exhilarate) the whole world.¹

2. May all the triumphant gods, Mitra, Aryaman, Varuna, equally well pleased, come (to our rite): may they all be propitious to us: may they not leave us in want of food, after overcoming (our foes).

3. I praise with hymns, (O gods), your best beloved guest, Agni, who is prompt (to partake of the oblation), and who is well pleased along (with you); so that (thereby) Varuna, the possessor of renown, the subduer of foes, the animator (of men), may fill us with food.

4. I approach you, (deities), with reverence, night and day, in the hope of overcoming (sin), as (willingly) as a gentle cow (comes to be milked), mixing (for you) on the appropriate day the (sacrificial) food, (consisting) of multiform (preparations) of milk (generated) from the same udder.²

1 This verse occurs in the Yajush, 33, 34. Mahidhara rather differs from Sayana in his explanation. Vis'wanara he considers an epithet of Savitri,—vis'wa nara hitakari, the doer of good to all men: Ilā he renders by food,—yathā sarve iram bhakshayanti tatha etu; whilst Sayana has for ilabhih saha, bhumisthanabhih-devatābhih, with the divinities, whose place is earth; in the second part of the verse, he explains jagad by jangama, moveable; that is, cattle and offspring.

2 Vishurupe payasi, sasminn-udhan, in multiform milk in common udder; or it may be explained, the manifold water or solution of the Soma juice, prepared for the sacrifice; which may be compared, on

5. May Ahirbudhnya¹ grant us happiness : may Sindhu² come, nourishing us as a (cow her) calf, whereby we may propitiate the grandson of the waters, (Agni), whom the clouds, swift as thought, convey.

6. Or may Twashtri come to this sacrifice, equally well pleased with those who praise (him) at the excellent (rite) at which he is present : may the most potent Indra, the protector of man, the destroyer of Vritra, come to the (solemnity) of our leaders.

7. For our minds, yoked together like horses, tend to the ever youthful Indra, as cows to their calves : and the praises of men, (addressed) to him, are generating most fragrant (fruit),³ as wives bear (children to their husbands).

8. Or may the Maruts, being of one mind, come from heaven and earth (to the sacrifice) ; they who are a mighty host, who have parti-coloured steeds, who are like protecting chariots,⁴ and who are devourers of foes : may they come like friendly deities.

9. For, verily, their greatness is well known, (as) they diligently discharge their functions ; by which their account of its yielding rewards, to an udder yielding milk, whence butter and the like.

1 Or Ahir, who is also Budhnya : Ahi and Budhnya are both said to be synonymes of antariksha, and compound implies a divinity presiding over the firmament : they occur as one name in the Nirukta, v 4 ; it is no doubt the same with the Ahirvradhna of the Puranas, who is by them enumerated as one of the Rudras—Vishnu P. 121. In the Kosha of Hemachandra, Ahirbradhna is a name of Siva.

2 According to the Scholiast, the name of a river.

3 Surabhishtamâm, explained by the commentary, atisayena surabhim, exceedingly fragrant ; a rather singular epithet.

4 Avanayo na rathah-rakshakâh-rathah ; or avanaya may mean, bending or inclining downwards.

sport pours rain upon every arid soil, as light spreads (universally) on a fine day.

10. Propitiate the As'wins and Pushan, for my protection; (propitiate) those (deities), who are of independent powers,¹ as Vishnu, devoid of hatred, Vayu, and Ribhukshin,² and may I influence the gods to be present for my felicity.

11. Objects of admiration, may that wealth-abounding effulgence which manifests itself amongst the gods, give animation to our existence, and (permanence to) our dwellings; that we may (thence) obtain food, strength, and long life.

¹ Swatavaso hi santi is explained, ye swayatta balah santi, those who are self-dependant, powerful.

² A name of Indra.

SUKTA VIII. (CLXXXVII.)

THE deity is termed Pitu, the divinity presiding over food; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre of the second, fourth, eighth, ninth, and tenth verses, is Gayatri; of the other six, Ushnik.

I glorify Pitu, the great, the upholder, the strong, by whose invigorating power Trita² slew the mutilated Vritra.

2. Savoury Pitu; sweet Pitu; we worship thee: become our protector.

3. Come to us, Pitu, auspicious with auspicious aids; a source of delight; a friend well respected, and having none (but agreeable properties).³

4. Thy flavours, Pitu, are diffused through the regions, as the winds are spread through the regions, as the winds are spread through the sky.

5. Those (men), Pitu, (are the enjoyers of thy bounty), who are thy distributors, most sweet Pitu, (to

1 Anna devata, or simply anna, the divinity presiding over food, or merely food; pitu implying palakam, that which nourishes: according to Saunaka, the hymn should be recited by a person about to eat, when his food will never disagree with him; its repetition also, accompanied with oblations and worship, will secure him against want of food, and if he should have taken poison, its silent repetition will act as an antidote.

2 Trita is here evidently a name of Indra; the Scholiast explains it, he whose fame is spread through the three worlds; or, as Mahidhara interprets it, Tristhāna-Indrah, the three-stationed Indra — Yajur-Veda, xxxiv. 7.

3 The text has adwayah, not being twofold; that is, according to the commentator, being of the property described above; not comprising any incompatible property; or it may be an epithet of sakha, a friend, one who does not differ in mind or act.

others): they who are the relishers of thy flavours, are as if they had stiff necks.¹

6. The thoughts of the mighty gods are fixed, Pitu, upon thee: by thy kind and intelligent assistance, (Indra) slew Ahi.²

7. When, Pitu, this (product) of the water wealthy clouds, (the rain), arrives; then do thou, sweet Pitu, be at hand with sufficiency for our eating.

8. And since we enjoy the abundance of the waters and the plants; therefore, Body, do thou grow fat.³

9. And since we enjoy, Soma,⁴ thy mixture with boiled milk or boiled barley;⁵ therefore, Body, do thou grow fat.

10. Vegetable cake of fried meal,⁶ do thou be substantial, wholesome, and invigorating; and, Body, do thou grow fat.

11. We extract from thee, Pitu, by our praises, (the sacrificial food), as cows yield butter for oblation;

1 Tuvigriyah iva irate; tuvi is, ordinarily, a synonyme of bahu, much, many; Sayana explains it by praviddha, enlarged; because, he says, when people eat, they are dridhanga, erect, firm; and when they are without food, the neck is bent, or bends, down; or it may mean, that they are great eaters, as if they had many throats.

2 Indra is supplied by the comment: there is no nominative in the text to ahim-avadhit.

3 Vatape piva id bhava; vatapi is explained s'arira, that which is sustained by vital air,—vata.

4 The object addressed is now not food in general, but a modified form of the Soma juice.

5 Gavasiro-yavasirah are said to mean preparations of milk and barley, boiled: go-vikarakshiradyas'rapanadravyam and yavavikaras'-rapana dravyam.

6 Karambha oshadhe: the first is explained, a lump or cake of perched meal, S'aktu pinda, identified with an herb or vegetable,—tadâtmaka oshadhih.

7 Pitu is here again identified with Soma.

from thee, who art exhilarating to the gods; exhilarating also to us.

SUKTA IX. (CLXXXVIII.)

THIS hymn is addressed to the various forms of Agni, which have already occurred more than once as Apris;¹ the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Gáyatri.

THOU shinest to-day, divine conqueror of thousands, kindled² by the priests: do thou, who art the sapient messenger (of the gods), convey (to them) our oblation.

2. The adorable Tanunapât proceeds to the rite, and combines with the oblation, bearing for the sacrificer) infinite (abundance of) food.

3. Agni, who art to be glorified,³ bring hither, being invoked by us, the adorable gods, for thou art the donor of thousands.

¹ As before noticed, the A'pris are also termed Prayajas: Sayana also quotes Yaska for the synonyme Kim-devata, a term of disparagement, implying their insignificance, as much as to say contemptuously, What sort of divinities are these: the term Prayaja, that which is an especial object of worship, may be variously applied, as in the Brahmanas, to divinities presiding over the seasons, over the metres of the Veda, over animals, over life, over the spirit, which are forms of Agni,—Prayaja ritudevataś'chhandodevatah pas'udevatah pranadevata atmadevata ityadinā bahun pakshan upanyasya brāhmanani cha pradars'ya agnaya eveti siddhantitam.

² This hymn occasionally differs from others of the same tenor in employing as epithets the ter as they use as denominatives; thus, here, samiddha is a participle, an epithet of deva: in Hymn XIII., Susamiddha, which means well-kindled, is considered to be a name of Agni.

³ Idya is here used in place of Ilita, employed elsewhere as an appellative: Narasansa, who, in the two preceding hymns, precedes Ilita, is here omitted.

4. By the power (of their prayers) they have strewn the sacred grass, the seat of numerous heroes, pointing to to the east; on which, A'dityas, you are manifest.

5. They have sprinkled water on the doors¹ (of the hall of sacrifice), which are variously and perfectly radiant, manifold, excellent, many, and numerous.

6. Let the brilliant and beautiful Day and Night, who shine with surpassing lustre, sit down here (upon the sacred grass).

7. Let these two chief, well spoken, divine sages, the invokers (of the gods) perform this our sacrifice.

8. Bharati, Ila, Saraswati,² I invoke you all, that you may direct us to prosperity.

9. Twashtri, who is the master (in fashioning) the forms (of beings)³ has made all animals distinct: grant us, (Twashtri) their increase.

10. Vanaspati, deliver of thyself the victim to the gods, so that Agni may taste the oblation.

¹ The epithets here given to the doors are unusual,—virāt samrāt vibhūh prabhūh bahvis cha bhūyasis cha yāh; they are explained by the commentator as in the text, but he adds that the two last may be understood as epithets of number, and the rest as names; the apartment having four different doors, each designated by its proper appellation: in the original, the two first, virāt samrāt, are in the nom. sing.; the others, more correctly, in the accus. plural.

² Sayana makes Bharati the goddess presiding over the heaven, Ila over the earth, and Saraswati over the firmament; but they are all three considered to be special manifestation of the majesty of the sun: Etas tīṣṭa Aditya-prabhavavishesha-rūpā ityāhuh.

³ Twashta rūpāni hi prabhūh; karttum, to make, being understood: Twashtri is described by the commentator as the divinity presiding over the implements of sacrifice, but the office is also ascribed to him of fashioning beings in the womb as soon as begotten, founded upon a text of the Veda, cited as, retasah siktasya Twashta rūpāni vikaroti; or, as explained by the Scholiast, yonau srishtāni rūpāni karttum prabhūh.

11. Agni, the preceptor of the gods, is characterized by the Gāyatri measure : he blazes when the oblations are offered.

SUKTA X (CLXXXIX.)

THE deity is Agni ; the Rishi, Agastya ; the metre, Trishtubh.

AGNI, knowing all kinds of knowledge, lead us by good ways to wealth : remove far from us the sin that would force us astray, that we may offer to thee most ample adoration.¹

2. Adorable Agni, convey us by the sacred acts (of worship), beyond all evil ways ; may our city be spacious ; our land be extensive ; be the bestower of happiness upon our offspring, upon our sons.

3. Agni, do thou remove from us disease and those men who, unprotected by Agni, are adverse to us ; and adorable divinity, (visit) the earth, with all the immortals, for welfare.

4. Cherish us, Agni ; with incessant bounties ; shine always in thy favourite abode : let no danger, youngest (of the gods), assail thy worshipper to-day ; nor, mighty one, let it assail him at any other season.

5. Abandon us not, Agni, to a wicked, voracious, malevolent foe ; (abandon us) not to one who has fangs, and who bites ;² nor to one without teeth ;³ nor to

1 This verse is an essential one in the formulæ accompanying oblations with fire : it occurs three times in the Yajush v 36 ; vii. 43 ; and xl 16 ; the explanation of Mahidhara is the same as that of Sayana in the two first : in the third it is somewhat varied.

2 Snakes and venomous reptiles.

3 And who, therefore, does mischief with other natural weapons, as horns and claws.

the malignant;¹ nor give us up, powerful Agni, disgrace.

6. Agni, born for sacrifice, (a man) praising thee, who art excellent, for (the sake of cherishing) his body becomes such as thou art; exempts himself from all who are inclined to harm or revile him; for thou, Agni, art the especial adversary of those who do wrong.

7. Adorable Agni, thou art sagacious, and in a short time discriminatest between both those men (who do and do not worship thee); approach the worshipper at the proper time, and be compliant (with his wishes); like an institutor of the rite, (who is directed) by desires (of the priests).

8. We address our pious prayers to thee, Agni, the son of prayer, the subduer of foes; may we procure, by these sacred supplications, infinite wealth, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA XI. (CXC).

THE deity is Brihaspati;² the Rishi Agastya; the metre, Trishtuḥ.
(PRIESTS), augment by your hymns Brihaspati, who deserts not (his worshipper); the showerer (of benefits), the pleasant-tongued, the adorable; of whom resplendent, gods and men, (the ministers) of the institutor of the sacrifice, emulous in sacred songs, proclaim (the praise).

¹ Rishate, to one who injures; as thieves and Rakshasas.

² Brihaspati is here defined as mantrasya pālāyitaram, the protector or cherisher of the prayer.

2. The hymns of the (rainy) season¹ are addressed to him, who is verily the creator (of rain), and has granted it (to the prayers) of the devout; for that Brihaspati is the manifester (of all), the expansive wind that (dispensing) blessing has been produced for (the diffusion of) water.

3. He is ready² (to accept) the offered praise, the presentation of the homage, the hymn, as the sun (is ready to put forth) his rays: by the acts of him whom the Râkshasas (oppose not), the daily (revolving sun) exists, and he is strong as a fearful beast of prey.

4. The glory of this Brihaspati spreads through heaven and earth like the sun: receiving worship, and giving intelligence, he bestows (the rewards of sacrifice); like the weapons of the hunters,³ so these (weapons) of Brihaspati fall daily upon the workers of guile.

5. Divine Brihaspati, thou dost not bestow desired (wealth) upon those stupid (men), who, sinful and mean, subsist, considering thee, who art auspicious, as an old ox:⁴ but thou favourest him who offers (thee) libations.⁵

6. Be a (pleasant) way to him who goes well and makes good offerings, like the affectionate friend of

1 Ritwiya is explained varsharttusambandhinyo vachah, prayers connected with the season of the rain.

2 Or the pronoun may apply to the Yajamana, who exerts himself to offer the praise, the oblation, etc.

3 Mriganam na hetayah is explained by the commentary, hantum anvishyatam ayudhaniva, like the weapons of those seeking to kill.

4 Twa usrikam manyamanah: usriya is explained, a cow giving little milk; or an old one, jirnam anadwahanam vâ.

5 Chayase it piyarum, thou goest to bestow favour on him who sacrifices with the Soma juice: but, according to the Nirukta, the words may have a different sense, implying, thou destroyest the malevolent —iv. 25

(a ruler who) restrains the bad ; and may those sinless men who instruct us, although yet, enveloped (by ignorance), stand extricated from their covering.

7. To whom praises (necessarily) proceed, as men (assemble round a master) ; as rivers, rolling between their banks, flow to the ocean : that wise Brihaspati, greedy (after rain), and stationary in the midst, contemplates both,² (the ferry and the water).

8. So, Brihaspati, the mighty, the beneficent, the powerful, the showerer (of benefits), the divine, has been glorified ; praised by us, may he make us possessed of progeny and cattle, that thence we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

SUKTA XII. (CXCI.)

THE divinities are considered to be Water, Grass, and the Sun ; the Rishi is Agastya ; the metre of the 10th, 11th, and 12th verses, is Mahāpankti ; of the 13th, Mahabrihati ; of the rest, Anustubh.³

SOME creature of little venom ; some creature of great

1 Abhi ye chakshate noh, those who speak to us : the commentator says, who, bodhayanti, waken or instruct us ; but it is not clear how those who are apivrita, ajnanenavrita, enveloped by ignorance, should be competent to teach : another explanation is, let those who revile us, and are being protected, be deprived of that protection,

2 Ubhayam chashte antar Brihaspatistara apas'cha gridhrah : the passage is very obscure : gridhrah is explained, vrishtim akankshamana, desirous of rain ; taras, taranam jalābhivridhim, crossing, or a ferry, or increase of water : apah has its usual sense ; ubhayam antar madhye sthitvā, having stood in the middle ; but it is not said of what : chashte-pas'yate, he sees ; or karoti, he does : identifying Brihaspati with Indra, ubhayam, both, may denote heaven and earth, between which, in the Antariksha, or firmament, the region of the rain, is his proper station.

3 This is a rather singular hymn : according to the Scholiast, it is a mystical antidote against the poison, having been recited by Agastya venom; or some venomous aquatic reptile;¹ creatures of two kinds,² both destructive (of life), or (poisonous) unseen creatures,³ have anointed⁴ me with their poison.

2. (The antidote), coming (to the bitten person), destroys the unseen (venomous creatures); departing (it destroys them); deprived (of substance),⁵ it destroys them (by its odour); being ground, it pulverises them.

3. (Blades of) s'ara grass, (of) kus'ara, (of) darbha, (of) sairya, (of) munja, (of) virana,⁶ all (the haunt) of unseen (venomous creatures), have together anointed me (with their venom).

4. The cows had lain down in their stalls; the wild beasts had retreated (to their lairs); the senses under an apprehension of having been poisoned: so S'aunaka says; Let any one who is afflicted by poison diligently repeat the hymn Kankatana, when it will have no effect upon him, though inflicted by a serpent or an envenomed spear: he will overcome all venom in reptiles, spiders, insects, scorpions, roots, and artificial poisons, by silently repeating it.

1 Kankata, na-kankata, satinakankata, are thus explained by Sayana, alpavishah kaschit, something of little venom; tadviparito analpavisho mahoragadi, the opposite of that, of not little venom, like great snakes and the like satina is a synonyme of water in the Nirukta.

2 Of little or of much venom; or creatures of land or water.

3 Adrishtā, of invisible forms; the appellation, [according to the Scholiast, of certain poisonous insects; in the comment on the eighth verse he explains it, either a class of poisons or of poisonous creatures, —vishaviseshah vishadharavishesā va.

4 Alipsata, have smeared, have spread over all the limbs.

5 Avaghnati, avahanyamanaushadhih; a drug or antidote being destroyed; losing its substance, and reduced to its odour: or it may mean merely, that a certain drug, understood, is destructive of poisonous creatures.

6 These are severally, the Saccharum sara, an inferior sort of it, Poa cynosuroides, Saccharum spontaneum, Saccharum munja, Andropogon muricatum, long reed-like grasses, amidst which reptiles may lurk unseen.

of men were at rest; when the unseen (venomous creatures) anointed me (with their venom.)¹

5. Or they may be discovered (in the dark):² as thieves in the (dusk of) evening; for although they be unseen, yet all are seen by them;³ therefore, men, be vigilant.

6. Heaven, (serpents), is your father; earth, your mother; Soma, your brother;⁴ Aditi, your sister: unseen, all-seeing, abide (in your own holes); enjoy (your own) good pleasure.

7. Those (who move with their) shoulders, those (who move with their) bodies,⁵ those who sting with sharp fangs,⁶ those who are virulently venomous; what do you here, ye unseen, depart together far from us.

8. The all seeing sun rises in the east, the des-

1 These reptiles being most frequent at night or in the dark; the verse occurs in the Atharvana, vi. LII 2, with a various reading in the first part of the second line; nyurmaya nadinam, the waves of the rivers were hushed.

2 As snakes by their breathing, according to Sayana.

3 So the Scholiast understands viswadrishṭa, making it a Bahuvrihi compound, as indicated by the accentuation.

4 Soma here will be the moon; or, according to the Scholiast, Heaven, the residence of Soma,—Somadharo dyulokah.

5 Ye ansya ye angyah; the expressions are rather vague, implying what relates to the shoulders, or the body generally: thus, ansya may mean, being suited to the shoulders, moving with or by them, born or produced in or on them, biting with them,—ansarhah, ansagah, ansebhavah, ansayabhyam khadantah: so angya may mean, moving with the body, or poisoning with the body, as certain spiders, whose contact is poisonous, and the like: the anse bhavah, produced in the shoulders, might furnish those who seek for analogies between Iranian and Indian legends with a parallel in the story of Zohak.

6 Suchikāh, having sharp needle-like stings, like a scorpion.

troyer of the unseen¹ driving away all the unseen (venomous creatures), and all evil spirits.

9. The sun has risen on high, destroying all the many (poisons); A'ditya, the all-seeing, the destroyer of the unseen, (rises) for (the good of) living beings.²

10. I deposit the poison in the solar orb, like a leather bottle in the house of a vender of spirits; verily, that adorable (sun) never dies; nor, (through) his favour, shall we die (of the venom); for though afar off, yet drawn by his coursers, he will overtake (the poison); the science of antidotes converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.³

² This also occurs in the Atharvana, vi. lxi. 1; the second part is the same; the first reads, Utsuryo divam eti puro rakshansi nirjuvan, the sun rises in the sky in the east, scattering the Rakshasas.

³ The notion that pervades this stanza, and forms the burden of the three following, is derived, according to Sayana, from the Visha-vidya, the science of poisons, or of antidotes, whence it is also termed Madhu-vidya, science of ambrosia: one formula of which, as cited by him, is "having taken the poison in the solar orb with the fourth finger; having made it ambrosia; and caused them to blend together, may it become poisonless:" by the Surya mandala, or orb of the sun, is probably to be understood a mystical diagram, or figure wholly or partly [typical of the solar orb: the sun being considered as especially instrumental in counteracting the operation of poison: the science of antidotes is also named in the text madhula, as synonymous with Madhuvidya. It was originally taught by Indra to Dadhyanch who communicated it to the As'wins, and thereby lost his head.—

11. That little insignificant bird¹ has swallowed thy venom; she does not die; nor shall we die; for, although afar off, yet drawn by his coursers, (the sun) will overtake (the poison); the science of antidotes has converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.

12. May the thrice-seven sparks (of Agni)² consume the influence of the venom; they verily do not perish; nor shall we die; for, although afar off the sun, drawn by his coursers, will overtake the poison; the science of antidotes has converted thee, (poison), to ambrosia.

13. I recite the names of ninety and nine (rivers), the destroyers of poison: although afar off, (the sun) drawn by his coursers, will overtake the poison; the science of antidotes has converted thee, (poison), to ambrosia.

14. May the thrice-seven peahens,³ the seven sister rivers, carry off, (O Body), thy poison, as maidens, with pitchers, carry away water.

15. May the insignificant {mongoose⁴ (carry off) thy venom, (Poison); if not, I will crush the vile

1 The bird, according to the Scholiast, is the female kapinjala, or francoline partridge, which, he says, is well known as a remover of poison,—visha-hartri.

2 The seven tongues, flames of fire, may be multiplied as red, white, and black; or vishpulingaka may be a synonyme of chatikā, a female sparrow; of whom there are twenty-one varieties, eaters of poison with impunity.

3 Tri-sapta mayuryah; the enmity between peafowl and snakes is proverbial, but that there are twenty one varieties of the mayuri, or peahen, wants authority: the seven rivers, the Scholiast says, are those of heaven, or the branches of the divine Gangā, but we have had them before; all running streams are possibly regarded as antidotes.

4 Kushumbhako nakulah the neul, or viverra Mongoose, whose hostility to the snake is also proverbial.

(creature) with a stone: so may the poison depart from my body, and go to distant regions.

16. Hastening forth at the command (of Agastya), thus spake the mungoose: the venom of the scorpion is innocuous; scorpion, thy venom is innocuous.¹

1 M. Langlois has preferred a totally different interpretation of this Sukta, understanding it to allude to the state of the sky before the commencement of a sacrifice; he therefore interprets visha {by darkness,—les tenebres, or les vapeurs de la nuit, which are dispersed by the morning light, or by the rays of the sun: on what authority this view of the intention of the hymn is founded has not been stated: nothing of the kind is intimated by Sayana whose interpretation is confirmed by the legendary application of the hymn as related by Saunaka by the corresponding text of the Atharvana; there are, no doubt, many expressions of doubtful import, and some which are used in other places, as in the Yajush, in a different acceptation; but the interpretation given by Sāyana appears to be most consistent with the general purport of the text.

MANDALA II.

THE first Mandala is termed that of the Satarchins, of a hundred put for an indefinite number of authors of Richas or stanzas ; the second is usually termed the Gartsamada Mandala, the hymns, with a few exceptions, being attributed to the Rishi Gritsamada, a remarkable personage in Hindu legend. It is related of him that he was first a member of the family of Angiras, being the son of Sunahotra : he was carried off by the Asuras, whilst performing a sacrifice, but was rescued by Indra by whose authority he was thenceforth designated as Gritsamada, the son of Sunaka or Saunaka of the race of Bhrigu. Thus, the Anukramanika says of him : He, who was an Angirasa, the son of Sunahotra, became Saunaka, of the race of Bhrigu : he, Gritsamada, is the seer of the second Mandala : and again, in the enumeration of the Rishis, it is said of him, The Rishi of the hymn, Twam Agne is Gritsamada, the son of Sunaka, who went to the race of Bhrigu, being naturally the son of Sunahotra, of the Gritsamada family. The Index should be correct, if it be the work of Kàtyayana, who is said to have been the pupil of Saunaka ; but we have other very different accounts of Gritsamada, or Ghritsamada, as the name is also written. In the Anusasana Parva of the Mahabharata he is called the son of Vitihavya, a king of the Haihayas, who, fleeing from the vengeance of Pratarddana, king of Kasi, took refuge with the Rishi Bhrigu : on Pratarddana's demanding his delivery, Bhrigu denied that any Kshatriya was present in his hermitage ; in consequence of which denial, Vitihavya at once became a Brahman : his son was Gritsamada, who, the Mahabharata adds, was a famous Rishi, and the author of the principal hymns in the Rig-Veda — Maha. vol. iv. p. 70. Again, the Purànas make him the son of Suhotra, and father either of S'aunaka, or of Suuaka, the father of Saunaka ; and ascribe to him the institution of the four castes. A curious story is also related of Gritsamada, to which the Mahabharata alludes, of his having assumed the semblance of Indra, and so enabled that deity to escape from the Asuras, who were lying in wait to destroy him ; a legend to which we shall again have occasion to refer. Saunaka, whether the same as Gritsamada, or a different person, is named as the chief of the Rishis assembled at Naimisharanya to celebrate the twelve years' sacrifice, to whom the Mahabharata, and several of the Puranas, are said to have been repeated, by Lomaharshana, the Suta : he is also said to have been the teacher of a Sàkhà or branch of the Atharvana Veda : he is often quoted, as we have seen, by Sāyana.

ANUVA'KA I

SUKTA I (I)

1. Sovereign of men, Agni, thou art born for the days (of sacrifice), pure and all-irradiating, from the waters, from the stones, from trees, and from plants.¹

2. Thine, Agni, is the office of the Hotri, of the Potri, of the Ritwij, of the Nishtri; thou art the Agnidhra of the devout; thine is the function of the Prasastri; thou art the Adhwaryu and the Brahman;² and the householder in our dwelling.

1 This verse occurs in the Yajush, xi. 27. Mahidhara's explanation is much the same as that of Sayana: both notice varieties of interpretation. Susukshani, for instance, may also signify drying up, causing the evaporation of the earth's moisture; or it may, mean, destroying, consuming: Agni is produced from the waters, either as the lightning that accompanies rain or submarine fire; from stones by striking them together; so from trees or wood by attrition; from plants, such as bambus, by mutual friction, causing the conflagration of a forest.

2 These are eight of the sixteen priests employed at very solemn ceremonies: the commentary ascribes the duty of the Pras'astri to the Maitravaruna, and identifies the Brahma with the Brahmanachchansi; but in the ordinary enumeration they are distinct: the sixteen are thus enumerated by Kulluka Bhatta, the commentator on Manu, VIII. 210; in the order and proportion in which they are entitled to share in a Dakshina of a hundred cows, being arranged in four classes, of which the first four are severally the heads, and the others subordinate to them, in the same course of succession:—1 Hotri, Adhwaryu, Udgātri, and Brahman are to have twelve each, or forty-eight in all. 2 Maitrávaruna, Pratistotri, Bráhma-nachchhansi, and Prastotri, six each, or twenty-four. 3 Achchāvāka, Neshtri, A'gnidhra, and Pratiharttri, four

3. Thou, Agni, art Indra, the showerer (of bounties) on the good ; thou art the adorable Vishnu, the hymned of many : thou, Brahmanaspati, art Brahma, the possessor of riches ; thou, the author of various (conditions), art associated with wisdom.

4. Thou, Agni, art the royal Varuna, observant of each, or sixteen ; and 4 Gravadut, Netri, Potri, and Subrahmanya, three each, or in all twelve ; making up the total of one hundred. Ramanatha, in his commentary on the Amara Kosha, VII. 17, also gives the names of the sixteen priests, with a few variations from Kulluka. Grāvastut is his reading, instead of Gravadut, and it is the more usual one ; and in place of the Prastotri, Netri, and Potri, he gives, Prasthatri, Pras'astri, and Balachchhandaka : we have the Potri repeatedly named in the text of the Rich, as well as the Pras'astri. In the Aitareya Brahmana, B. VII. 1, the sixteen priests to whom portions of the offering are assigned are also enumerated, with some modifications, having, instead of the Pratistotri, Gravadut, Netri, and Subrahmanya, of the first list, the Pratiprasthatri, Upagatri, A'treya, and Sadasya. The same authority, however, adds as priests not included in the sixteen, the Grāvastut, Unnetri, Subrahmanya, and the S'amitri, or immolator, when a Brahman. In Mādhava's commentary on the Nyayamala vistara of Jaimini, for an extract from which I am indebted to Dr. Goldstucker, he enumerates the sixteen priests as classed in four orders, following the authority of Kumāril Bhatta, much to the same effect as Kulluka ; they are :—1 the Adhwaryu, Pratiprasthatri, Neshtri and Unnetri, 2, the Brahma, Brahmanachchhansi, Agmdh, and Potri ; 3 the Udgatri, Prastotri, Pratiharttri, and Subrahmanya ; and 4 the Hotri, Maitravaruna, Achchavaka, and Grāvastut. The four first are especially charged with the ceremonial of the Yajur-Veda ; the next four suprintend the whole according to the ritual of the three Vedas ; the third class chant the hymns, especially of the Sama Veda, and the fourth repeat the hymns of the Rich ; the head of each class receives the entire Dakshina or gratuity ; the second one-half ; the third, the one-third ; and the fourth, a quarter ; the several functions are not very explicitly described.

holy vows : thou art the adorable Mitra, the destroyer (of foes) : thou art Aryaman, the protector of the virtuous, whose (liberality) is enjoyed by all :¹ thou art a portion (of the sun) :² be the distributor (of good things), divine (Agni), at our sacrifice.

5. Thou, Agni, art Twashtri, (the giver) of great wealth (to thy) worshipper : these praises are thine : do thou, of benevolent power, (admit) our affinity : thou, who art prompt to encourage (us), givest us good (store of) horses ; thou, who aboudest with opulence, art the strength of men.

6. Thou, Agni, art Rudra, the expeller (of foes) from the expanse of heaven :³ thou art the strength of the Maruts : thou art supreme over (sacrificial) food : thou, who art pleasantly domiciled (in the hall of sacrifice), goest with ruddy horses, (fleet as) the wind : as [Pushan, thou cherishest, of thine own will, those who offer worship.

7. Thou, Agni, art Dravinodas, to him who honours thee : thou art the divine Savitri, the possessor of precious things : protector of men, thou art Bhaga, and rulest over wealth : thou art the cherisher of him who worships thee in his dwelling.

8. The people adore thee, Agni, the protector of the people in their dwellings : they propitiate thee as a benevolent sovereign : leader of a radiant host, thou art lord

1 Liberality is said to be the characteristic, properly, of Aryaman, datritwam châyamno lingam.

2 Twam ans'ah may also mean the forms of the sun, or the A'ditya, named ans'a.

3 Twam Rudro asuro maho divah : asura is explained s'atrunam nirasita, the expeller of enemies, divas, from heaven ; or it may mean, the giver of strength, asur, balam ; tasya data ; A'ditya-rupa : a form of A'ditya, or an A'ditya.

over all offerings : thou art the distributor of tens, and hundreds, and thousands (of good things).

9. (Devout) men (worship) thee, Agni, as a father, with sacred rites : they (cherish) thee, who art the illuminator of the body, with acts (of kindness), as a brother : thou art as a son to him who propitiates thee ; and thou protectest us, a faithful and firm friend.

10. Thou, Agni, art (ever) resplendent,¹ and art to be glorified when present : thou art lord over all renowned food and riches : thou shinest brightly, and thou consumest (the oblation) for him who offers it : thou art the especial accomplisher of the sacrifice, and bestower (of its rewards).

11. Thou, divine Agni, art Aditi to the donor of the oblation : thou art Hotra and Bhârati, and thriveest by praise : thou art Ila of a hundred winters² to him who makes thee gifts : thou, lord of wealth, art the destroyer of Vritra,³ Saraswati.

12. When, well-cherished Agni, thou art (the giver of) excellent food : in thy desirable and delightful hues, beauties (abound) ; thou (art) food : (thou art) the transporter (beyond sin) ; thou art mighty ; thou art wealth ; thou art manifold, and everywhere diffused.

1 Twam agne ribhuh, twam vajasya isishe : we might have conjectured that some allusion to the Ribhus was here intended ; but Sayana renders ribhu, bhasamanah, shining ; and vajasya, by annasya, of food.

2 Twam Ila satahimasi, according to the Scholiast, means the earth of unlimited duration,—aparimitakâlâ bhumih.

3 Vritraha, Sayana interprets, the destroyer of sin, &c. ; but these goddesses are identified in the hymns to the Apris, with Agni, and an allusion to Indra would only be consistent with the prevailing idea throughout the hymn, of the universal identity of Agni with all other divinities.

13. The A'dityas have made thee, Agni, their mouth; the pure (deities) have made thee, Kavi, their tongue: the (gods), the givers of wealth, depend upon thee at sacrifices; they eat the offered oblation through thee.

14. All the benignant immortal gods eat the offered oblation through thee, as their mouth: mortals taste the flavour (of all viands) through thee: thou art born pure, the embryo of plants.¹

15. Thou art associated, AGNI, by thy vigour, with those (gods): divine, well-born Agni, thou exceedest (them in strength); for the (sacrificial) food that is here prepared is, by thou power, subsequently diffused through both regions, heaven and earth.

16. The pious are they who present, as a gift, to the reciters of thy praises, an excellent cow and an excellent horse: do thou, Agni, lead both us and them to the best of abodes, (or heaven), that we and our worthy decendants may repeat the solemn prayer to thee at the sacrifice.

SUKTA II.

THE deity, and Rishi, and metre, the same as before.

EXALT with sacrifice, Agni, who knows all that has been born: worship him with oblations, and with ample praise; him who is well kindled, well fed, much lauded, resplendent, the conveyer of oblations, the giver of strength (to the body).

Corn and other grains ripen by the heat of the sun or fire; the text has s'uchi, pure; but Sayana's copy must have had in its place vasu, which he explains as usual, being the abode of all; Sarvasham Nivāsabhutah san.

2. The mornings and evenings, Agni, are desirous (of worshipping) thee, as cows in their stalls long for their calves : adored of many, thou, self-controlled, art verily spread through the sky : thou (art present at all) the sacred rites of men, and shinest brightly by night.

3. The gods have stationed at the root of the world,¹ that Agni who is of goodly apperance ; the pervader of heaven and earth ; who is to be known as a car (to convey men to their wishes) ; who shines with pure radiance, and who is to be honoured as a friend amongst mankind.

4. They have placed him in his solitary dwelling, who is shedding moisture upon the earth ; resplendent as gold,² traversing the firmament, animate with flames ; and pervading the two parents (of all things, heaven and earth), like refreshing water.

5. May he, the presenter of oblations (to the gods) be around all sacrifices : men propitiate him with oblations and with praises, when blazing with radiant tresses³ amongst the growing plants, and enlivening

1 Budhne rajasah-lokasya mule ; that is according to the [com-mentary, the altar.

2 Chandram iva surucham might seem to be preferably rendered, bright-shining, like the moon ; but Sayana affirms that chandra here means gold ; of which, when neuter, it is a synonyme, in the Veda.

3 Hiris'ipro vridhasanasu jarbhurat : s'ipra has been before met with in its ordinary sense of chin, or jaw ; has been explained, the nose ; and one sense of the compound that here occurs is haranasilahanu, having a jaw accustomed to seize or consume ; but, upon the authority of another text, s'ipra s'irsnasu vitatā hiranyayih, golden locks spread on the head, Sayana explains it here by ushnisha, a curl, or turban ; vridhasanasu he explains by pravardha manaswoshadhishu, amongst growing plants.

Heaven and earth (with his sparks), like the sky with stars.

6. Thou, Agni, art he who, for our good, art possessed of riches: kindled by us, blaze as the liberal donor of wealth to us, render heaven and earth propitious to us, so that divine Agni, (the gods) may partake of the oblations of the institutor of the rite.

7. Bestow upon us, Agni, infinite possessions: grant us thousands (of cattle and dependants): open to us, for thy reputation, the doors of abundance: make heaven and earth, propitiated by sacred prayer, favourable to us, and may the mornings light thee up like the sun.

8. Kindled at the beautiful dawn, (Agni) shines with brilliant lustre, like the sun; adored by the hymns of the worshipper, Agni, the king of men,¹ (comes as) an agreeable guest to the institutor of the sacrifice.

9. Amongst men our praise, Agni, celebrates thee who art first amongst the greatly-splendid immortals; (may it be to us) as a milch cow spontaneously yielding at sacrifices to the worshipper, infinite and multiform (blessings according to his) desire.

10. May we manifest vigour among other men, Agni, through the steed and the food (which thou hast given); and may our unsurpassed wealth shine like the sun over (that of) the five classes of beings.²

11. Vigorous Agni, hear (our prayers): for thou art he who is to be lauded; to whom the well born priests address (their hymns); and whom, entitled to worship,

¹ Raja visam, king, or master of the Visas or people and radiant in thine own abode, the offerers of the oblation approach, for the sake of never-failing prosperity.

² Pancha-krishtishu, janeshu, men; according to the Scholiast, the four castes and the Nishâdas.

12. Agni, knowing all that is born, may we, both adorers and priests, be thine for the sake of felicity ; and do thou bestow upon us wealth of dwellings, of cattle, of much gold, of many dependants, and virtuous offspring.

13. The pious are they who present, as a gift, to the reciters of thy praise, an excellent cow and an elegant horse : do thou Agni, lead us and them to the best of abodes, (or heaven), that we and our worthy descendants may repeat the solemn prayer to thee at the sacrifice.

SUKTA III.

The divinities are the A'pris ;¹ the metre is Trishtubh, except in the seventh stanza, in which it is Jagati.

AGNI, the well-kindled, place upon (the altar of) the earth, stands in the presence of all beings ; the invoker (of the gods), the purifier, the ancient, the intelligent, the divine : Let the venerable Agni minister to the gods.

2. May the bright Naras'ansa,² illumining the receptacles (of the offering), making manifest by his greatness the three radiant (regions), and diffusing the oblation at the season of sacrifice with butter- dispensing purpose, satisfy the gods.

¹ See Hymns xiii. vol. i. p. 34 ; and CXLII. CLXXXVIII. pp. 71, 195, in this volume.

² In the preceding Suktas, Tanunapat is the second personification of Agni addressed ; he is here omitted.

3. Agni, who art the venerable P'lita, do thou, with mind favourably disposed towards us, offer today sacrifice to the gods, before the human (ministrant priest) : as such, bring hither the company of the Maruts, the undecaying Indra, to whom, seated on the sacred grass, do you priests offer worship.

4. Divine grass,¹ let the Vasus, the Viswadevas, the adorable A'dityas, sit upon his flourishing, invigorating well-grown, sacred grass, strewn for the sake of wealth upon this altar, and sprinkled with butter.

5. Let the divine doors, spacious and easily accessible, and to be saluted with prostrations, be set open ; let them be celebrated as expansive, uninjurable, and conferring sanctity upon the illustrious class (of worshipper), possessed of virtuous progeny.

6. In regard of our good deeds, Day and Night, perpetually revered, are interweaving in concert, like two famous female weavers,² the extended thread, (to complete) the web of the sacrifice, liberal yielders (of rewards) containers of water.

7. Let the two divine invokers of the gods,³ the first (to be revered), most wise, sincerely worshiping with sacred texts, most excellent in form, offering homage to the gods in due season, present oblations in the three high places upon the navel of the earth.⁴

1 The Barhish, or a personification of Agni, here as in the preceding.

2 Vayyeva ranvite are explained by the Scholiast, vayya iva vanakusale iva sabdite, stute.

3 The personified fires of earth and the firmament, under the character of two ministering priests, according to the Scholiast.

4 That is, as usual, the altar : the three high places, sanushu-trishu, are the three sacred fires ; Garhapatyā, A'havaniya, and Dakshina.

8. May the three goddesses, Saraswati, perfecting our understanding, the divine Ila, and all-impressive Bharati, having come to our dwelling, protect this faultless rite, (offered) for our welfare.

9. May a tawny-hued, well-grown (son), the bestower of food, active, manly, a worshipper of the gods, be born : may TWASHTRI¹ prolong for us a continuous (line of) progeny, and may the food of the gods come also to us.

10. May Agni, who is Vanaspati, approving (of our rite), approach ; and by his especial acts fully dress the victim :² may the divine immolator³ convey the burnt-offering to the gods, knowing it to have been thrice consecrated.³

11. I sprinkle the butter, for butter is his birth-place ; he is nourished by butter ; butter is his radiance : Agni, showerer (of benefits), bring the gods to the offered oblation ; exhilarate them ; convey to them the offering that has been reverently sanctified.⁴

1 Agnir-havih Sudayati pra dhibhih is explained by the Scholiast, Agni, who is the supporter, or the instrument of cooking or maturing fitly, cooks the oblation of the nature of the victim with various acts, which are the means of cooking ; he dresses the oblation, not under-dressing nor over-dressing it ; Agnih pakadharo havih pas'urupam karmaviseshaih pakasâdhaniah prakarshena sudayâti ksharayati-apakadhikapakadirahityena havih pachati.

2 Daivyah samita : the latter usually denotes the person who kills² the victim : Agni is elsewhere called, perhaps only typically, the immolator of the gods,—devanam samita.

3 Tridha samaktam, thrice anointed or sprinkled ; the three rites or ceremonies are termed upastarana, avadana, abhigharana.

4 Yajur-Veda, XVII. 88. Mahidhara renders dhâma by dwelling, or radiance ; and purposes, as an alternative, to apply the last member of the stanza to the Adhwaryu ; Priest, bring

SUKTA IV.

ĀGNI is the deity; Somahuti, of the race of Bhrigu, the Rishi the metre is Trishnūh.

I INVOKE, on your behalf, the resplendent, the sinless Agni, the guest of mortals, the acceptor of (sacrificial) food, who, knowing all that has been born, is like a friend, the supporter (of all beings), from men to gods.

2. The Bhrigus, worshipping Agni, have twice made him manifest: (once) in the abode of the waters, and (once) amongst the sons of men:¹ may that Agni, the sovereign of the gods mounted on a rapid courser, ever overcome all (our foes).

3. The gods, intending to dwell (in heaven), left, as a dear friend amongst the human races, that Agni, who, present in the chamber of sacrifice, is bounteous to the donor of offerings, and shines on the nights when he is wished for.²

4. The cherishing of Agni is as agreeable as (the cherishing) of one's self: (pleasant) is his appearance, when spreading abroad, and consuming (the fuel): he brandishes his flame amongst the bushes, as a chariot-horse lashes with his tail.

5. Whose greatness my colleagues loudly extol: who has manifested his real form to the priests: who higher Agni to the oblation; exhilarate him; (and say to him), showerer (of blessings), convey the consecrated oblation (to the gods).

1 As lightning in the firmament, and as culinary fire on earth.

2 Didayad-usatir-urmya: usatih, the commentator explains kamayamanah, being to be desired; and urmya, ratrih, nights; which he renders, all nights, or the whole night,—sarvasu ratrihu dipyate; or sarvarariradipayati, he shines on all nights, or he lights up all the nights.

is recognised at oblations by his variegated radiance, and who, though frequently growing old, again becomes young.

6. Who shines amidst the forests, as if satisfying himself (with food): who (rushes alone), like water down a declivity, and thunders like a chariot (of war: dark-pathed, consuming, yet delightful, he is regarded like the sky smiling with constellations.

7. He who is in many places; who spreads over the whole earth, like an animal without a herdsman, that goes according to its own will; AGNI, the bright-shining, consuming the dry bushes, by whom the pain of blackness (is inflicted on the trees), entirely drinks up (their moisture).

8. Verily thy praise has been recited (by us) at the third (daily) sacrifice, as it was in the repetition of thy first propitiation: give us, AGNI, ample and notorious food, posterity, riches, such as may be the support of numerous dependants.

9. By thee, (AGNI), may the GRITSAMADAS, repeating thy praise, become masters of the precious secret (treasures); so that they may be possessed of excellent dependants, and be able to resist (their) enemies; and do thou give to (thy) pious worshippers, and to him who glorifies (thee), such (abundant) food.

SUKTA V.

THE deity and Rishi are the same ; the metre is Anushtubh.

AN invoker (of the gods),¹ our instructor and protector, has been born for the preservation of our patrons :² may we, possessed of (sacrificial) food, be able to acquire worshipful, conquerable, and manageable riches.

2. In whom, as conductor of the sacrifice,³ the seven rays are manifested, and who, as a human Potri, officiates in the eighth place to perfect every divine (rite).

3. Whatever (offerings the priest) presents, whatever prayers he recites, he, (AGNI), knows them all : he comprehends all priestly acts, as the circumference (includes the spokes) of a wheel.

4. The pure regulator (of the sacrifice)⁴ is born verily together with the holy act : the wise (worshipper) performs all his, (Agni's), prescribed rites in succession, as the branches spring (from a common stem).

5. The sister fingers, which are the milch kine of the Neshrti, are those which accomplish his, (Agni's), worship ; and in various ways are combined for this purpose through the three (sacred fires).

6. When the sister (vessel), bearing the clarified

1 Hotri : in this, and the following stanzas, Agni is addressed, as identified with, or personified by, several of the individual priests employed at sacrifices.

2 Pitribhyah utaye, for protection to the Pitris : the Scholiast interprets pitri here by pālaka, or Yajamana, the patron, or instructor of the sacrifice.

3 Netri, and presently afterwards Potri, two of the sixteen priests : the seven rays are here explained to mean, the seven priests, engaged in their respective functions.

4 The Prasastri whose duty it is, by appropriate acts, to obviate all obstructions to a sacrifice.

butter, if placed near the maternal (altar), the Adhwaryu rejoices at their approach, like barley (at the fall of) rain.

7. May he, the ministering priest,¹ discharge the office of priest at his own ceremony; and may we worthily repeat (his) praise, and offer (him) sacrifice.

8. And do thou, Agni, (grant), that this wise (worshipper) may worthily offer (worship) to all the adorable (divinities), and that the sacrifice which we offer may also be perfected in thee.

SUKTA VI.

THE deity and the Rishi are the same : the metre is Gayatri.
AGNI, accept this my fuel, this my oblation; listen, well pleased, to my praises.

2. May we propitiate thee, Agni, by this (oblation) : grandson of strength, (who art) gratified by prompt sacrifice,² (may we please thee), well-born, by this hymn.

3. Granter of riches, may we, thy worshippers, propitiate thee, who are desirous of (sarrificial) wealth, and deserving of laudation, by our praises.

4. Lord of wealth, giver of wealth, possessor of riches, who art wise, understand (our prayers), and scatter our enemies.³

¹ The Ritwij, or a priest in general, in which capacity Agni is invited to officiate for himself,

² Aswamishte-vyapakayajna, whose rites are expanding; or asu, quick, tadichchhati, he wishes for quick or prompt worship.

³ Yajur-Veda, xii. 43; the explanation is the same, only the ellipse following understand, is filled up by abhimatam, wish, desire.

5. (For thou art) he (who gives) us rain from heaven; he (who gives) us undecaying strength, he (who gives) us infinite (abundance of) food.

6. Youngest (of the gods), their messenger, their invoker, most deserving of worship, come, upon our praise, to him who offers (thee) adoration, and is desirous of (thy) protection.¹

7. Sage Agni, thou penetratest the innermost (man), knowing the birth of both (the worshipper and the worshipped); like a messenger favourable to men, especially to his friends.

8. Do thou, Agni, who art all-wise, fulfil (our desires): do thou, who art intelligent, worship (the gods) in order; and sit down on this sacred grass.

SUKTA VII.

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

YOUNGEST (of the gods), Agni, descendant of Bharata,² granter of dwellings, bring (to us) excellent, splendid, and enviable riches.

2. Let no enemy prevail against us, whether of god or man; protect us from both such foes.

3. Let us, through thy favour, overwhelm all our foes, like torrents of water.

¹ Ilanaya-pujayitre, to the worshipper; avasyave-swarakshana-michchhate, to him who wishes his own preservation.

² Bharata, according to Sayana, means sprung from the priests—bharata-ritwija, produced by their rubbing the sticks together.

4. Purifier, Agni, holy, adorable, thou shinest exceedingly when (thou art) worshipped with (oblations of) butter.

5. Agni, descendant of Bharata, thou art entirely ours, when sacrificed to with pregnant kine, with barren cows, or bulls.¹

6. Feeder upon fuel,² to whom butter is offered, (thou art) the ancient, the invoker of the gods, the excellent, the son of strength, the wonderful.

SUKTA VIII.

THE deity and Rishi are the same, as is the metre, except in: last stanza, in which it is Anushtubh.

PRAISE quickly the yoked chariot of the glorious and munificent Agni, like one who is desirous of food.

2. Who, sagacious, invincible, and of graceful gate, destroys, when propitiated, his foe, for him who presents (offerings.)

3. Who, invested with radiance, is glorified, morning and evening, in (our) dwellings : whose worship is never neglected.

4. Who, many-tinted, shines with radiance, like the sun with (his) lustre, spreading (light) over (all) by his imperishable (flames.)

1 Vas'abhir-ukshabhih-ashtapadibhirahutah, offered or sacrificed to with barren cows, vasa ; with bulls, uksha ; and with eight footed animals ; that is, according to Sayana, a cow with calf ; but it is remarkable that these animals should be spoken of as burnt-offerings.

2 Drvannah : from dru, a tree, or timber ; and anna, food.

5. Our praises have increased the self-irradiating devouring Agni : he is possessed of all glory.

6. May we, uninjured, be secure in the protection of Agni, Indra, Soma, and the gods, and, confident in battle, overcome (our enemies.)

SIXTH ADHYA'YA.

SUKTA IX.

THE deity and Rishi are the same ; the metre Trishtubh

MAY Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the intelligent, the resplendent, the radiant, the very powerful ; he who knows (how to maintain) his rites undisturbed ; who is steady in (his own) place, and is the cherisher of thousands, sit in the station of the invoking priest.¹

2. Showerer (of benefits), Agni, be thou our messenger (to the gods) ; our preserver from evil ; the conveyer to us of wealth ; the protector of our sons and grandsons, and of our persons ; understand (our prayer), ever heedful and resplendent.

3. We adore thee, Agni, in thy loftiest birth-(place) and with hymns in thine inferior station :² I worship that seat whence thou hast issued : the priests have offered thee, when kindled, oblations.

4. Agni, who art the chief of sacrificers, worship (the gods) with the oblation, and earnestly commend to them the (sacrificial) food that is to be given (them) ; for thou, indeed, art the sovereign lord of riches ; thou art the appreciator of our pious prayer.

² That is, Agni is worshipped in heaven as the sun ; in the firmament as lightning ; and as the sacrificial fire kindled on the altar ; the same occurs in the Yajush, XVII. 75.

5. Beautiful Agni, the two dwelling-places (heaven and earth) of thee, who art born day by day, never perish : confer upon him who praises thee (abundant) food, and make him the master of riches, (supporting) virtuous offspring.

6. Do thou, with this (thy) host (of attendants), be of good promise to us : do thou, the especial worshipper of the gods, their unassailable protector, as well as our preserver, light [up (all) with ; shining and affluent well-being.

SUKTA X.

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

THE adorable Agni, the first (of the gods), and their nourisher when kindled by man upon the altar ; he, who is clothed in radiance, is immortal, discriminating, food-bestowing, powerful ; he is to be worshipped.

2. May Agni, who is immortal, of manifold wisdom, and wonderful splendour, hear my invocation, (preferred) with all laudations : tawny, or red, or purple horses draw his car ; he has been borne in various directions.

3. They have generated (Agni) when soundly sleeping on his upturned (couch) :¹ that Agni who is an embryo in many (vegetable) forms, and who, (rendered manifest) by the oblation, abides conscious in the night unenveloped by darkness.

1 Uttanayam sushutam, on the lower of the two sticks which are rubbed together.

4. I offer oblations with butter to Agni,¹ who spreads through all regions, vast, expanding, with all-comprehending form,² nourished (with sacrificial) food, powerful, conspicuous.

5. I offer oblations to Agni, who is present at all (sacrifices);³ may he accept (them), offered with an unhesitating mind, (to him) who is the refuge of man, endowed with any form that may be desired, blazing with a radiance (that it is) not (possible) to endure.

6. Overpowering (thy foes) with lustre, mayest thou recognize thy portion : may we, having thee for our messenger, recite (praise) like Manu : desiring wealth, I offer oblation with the sacrificial ladle and with praises, to that entire Agni, who rewards (the worshipper) with the sweet (fruit) of the sacrifice.

1 Jigharmy-agnim havisha ghritena : the Yajush, XI. 23, reads it, a twa jigharmi manasa ghritena, I sprinkle thee with butter with a believing mind s'raddhayuktena chittena.

2 Prithum tirascha vayasa vrihantam Mahidhara connects the two first, and renders them, vast with crooked-going or undulating radiance : the two last he interprets, augmenting with smoke : other interpretations are given, but they are not more intelligible than that of the text.

3 This verse is also in the Yajush, XI. 24 and from Katya-yana, a direction is given for its use and that of the preceding : they are to be repeated together, but the first half of stanza four is to be repeated with the second half of stanza five, and the first half of stanza five with the second half of stanza four : as the sense of the line stops with the half-stanza, there is no obscurity of meaning from the process, but it shows that more attention is paid to the manner than to the matter of the recitation.

SUKTA XI.

The deity is Indra; the Rishi as before; the metre is a species of Trishtubh, entitled Virat-sthâna, except in the last verse in which it is in the usual form.

INDRA, hear (my) invocation; disregard it not: may we be (thought worthy of the gift of thy treasures: these oblations. designed to obtain wealth, flowing (abundantly) like rivers, bring to thee augmented vigour.

2. Indra, hero, thou hast set free the copious (waters) which were formerly arrested by Ahi, and which thou hast distributed: invigorated by hymns, thou hast cast down headlong the slave, conceiting himself immortal.

3. Indra, hero, these brilliant laudations), in (the form of) hymns, in which thou delightest, and in (that of) the praises uttered by the worshippers¹ by which thou art gratified, are addressed to thee, to bring thee (to our sacrifice).

4. We are invigorating thy brilliant strength (by our praises), and placing the thunderbolt in thy hands: do thou, Indra, radiant, increasing in strength, and encouraged) by the sun, overpower, for our (good), the servile people.²

5. Indra, hero, thou hadst slain by thy prowess the glorified Ahi, hidden privily in a cave, lurking in concealment, covered by the waters in which he was abiding, and arresting the rains in the sky.

1 Rudriyeshu stomeshu : Rudriya may be rendered, the means of giving pleasure,—sukhasadhanabhuteshu ; or Rudrah may mean stotarah, praisers, worshippers ; either is an unusual signification.

2 Dasir visah suryena sahyah : the two first the Scholiast renders by, upakshapayatirih, or asurih prajah, people interrupting religious rites, or of the race of Asuras : Suryena he renders by prerakena, urger, instigator, as if it were an adjective.

6. We glorify, Indra, thy mighty (deeds) of old : we glorify thy (more) recent exploits : we praise the thunderbolt, shining in thine arms, and we celebrate the horses, the signs of (Indra as) the sun.¹

7. Thy swift horses, Indra, have uttered a loud sound, announcing rain : the level earth anxiously expects its fall, as the gathering cloud has passed.

8. The cloud, not heedless (of its office,) is suspended in the sky ; resonant with maternal (waters), it has spread about : (the winds), augmenting the sound in the distant horizon, have promulgated the voice uttered by Indra.

9. The mighty Indra has shattered the guileful Vritra, reposing in the cloud : heaven and earth shook, alarmed at the thundering bolt of the showerer.

10. The thunderbolt of the showerer roared aloud, when (Indra), the friend of man, sought to slay the enemy of mankind.² Drinking the Soma juice, he, (Indra), baffled the devices of the guileful Dánava.

11. Drink hero, Indra, drink the Soma : may the exhilarating juices delight thee : may they, distending thy flanks, augment thy prowess, and in this manner may the replenishing effused libation satisfy Indra.

1 Hari suryasya ketu, the two horses, the signs of the sun ; but the Scholiast proposes to explain surya by instigator or heroic,—sushtu prerakasya : or su-viryasya, as indicating Indra : or it may mean, of Indra, identical with Surya, Suryâtmanah Indrasya.

2 Amânusham yan manushe nijurvît, when the man, or as Sayana explains it, the benefactor of man, manushyanam hitakari, destroyed the no-man that is, the manushyanam-ahitam, not friendly to man : which is, probably, a correcter reading than the manushyanam rahitam, of the printed text.

12. May we, thy pious 'worshippers), abide in thee approaching thee with devotion, may we enjoy (the reward of) our adoration : desirous of protection, we meditate thy glorification : may we ever be (thought worthy) of the gift of thy treasures.

13. May we, (through) thy (favour), Indra, be such as those are, who, desirous of thy protection, augment (by their praises) thy vigour : divine (Indra), thou grantest the wealth which we desire, (the source of) great power and of (numerous) progeny.

14. Thou grantest a habitation ; thou grantest us friends ; thou grantest us, Indra, the strength of the Maruts : the winds,¹ who, propitious and exulting, drink copiously of the first offering (of the Soma juice).

15. Let those² in whom thou art delighted repair (to the libation), and do thou, Indra, confiding, drink the satiating Soma : liberator (from evil), associated with the mighty and adorable (Maruts), augment our prosperity, and (that of) heaven.³

16. Liberator (from evil) they who worship thee, the giver of happiness' with holy hymns, quickly become great : they who strew the sacred grass(in

1 Vayavah, the Scholiast adds, may be put honorifically for Vāyu, in the singular, of whom it is said, that he is the first drinker of the Soma ; Vayur-hi somasya agrapata.

2 Yesu may apply either to the Maruts or to the Soma ;—may those Maruts or those Soma juices, in which thou delightest.

3 Asmantsu pritswa tarutra avarddhayo dyām brihadbhir arkaih the sense is not very obvious : {Sayana explains pritsu as the qualification of avarddhaya, increase, that is, with children, cattle, and the like in consequence of which prosperous condition, men can offer sacrifices, whence heaven thrives : arkaih is for archaniyaih, to be adored, the Maruts, understood.

honour of thee) are protected by thee, and, together with their families, obtain (abundant) food.

17. Indra, hero, exulting in the solemn *Trīkadruka*¹ rites, quaff the Soma juice, and repeatedly shaking it from thy beard, repair, well pleased with thy seeds, to the drinking of the effused libation.

18. Indra, hero, keep up the strength where with thou hast crushed Vritra, the spider-like son of Danu, and let open the light to the A'rya : the Dasyu has been set aside on thy left hand.

19. Let us honour those men, who, through thy protection, surpass all their rivals, as the Dasyus (are surpassed) by the A'rya : this (hast thou wrought) for us : thou hast slain Viswarupa, the son of Twashtri, through friendship for Trita.³

20. Invigorated (by the libation) of the exulting Trita, offering thee Soma, thou hast annihilated Arbuda Indra aided by the Angirases, has whirled round his bolt as the sun turns round his wheel,⁴ and slain Bala.

21. That opulent donation, which proceeds, Indra,

1 The Trikadrukas are said, by the commentator, to denote three days, or celebrations of the ceremonial, termed abhiplava; abhiplavikeshu ahah-su, called severally, Jyotish, Gauh, A'yus : the text designates them as ugreshu, fierce, angry; but the Scholiast here explains ugra to mean, having praises and prayers,—bahu stotrasas'travat.

2 Danum aurnavabham : Sayana considers the latter to be the same as aurnanabham; or that it may be composed of aurna, a spider, and abha, resembling.

3 Trita, in this and the next stanza, is said to be a Maharshi.

4 Suryo na chakram; or na may be used in a negative sense, and the phrase imply, when the sun did not turn his wheel, or stood still through fear of the Asura: or again, it may mean, that Indra whirled the wheel like the sun, having taken one of the wheels of the sun's chariot as a weapon against Bala.

from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee the boon (which he desires): grant it to us, thy praises; do not thou, who art the object of adoration,¹ disregard (our prayer): so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.

1 Māti dhag bhago no; Sáyana renders, Bhujaniyastwam asmákam kámàn mã dákshih, thou, who art adorable, consume not our desires: Yaska separates the two last words, as, bhago, no astu, may fortune be to us.—Nir. 1. 7.

ANUVA KA II.

SUKTA I. (XII)

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

ॐ, who as soon as born, is the first (of the deities) ; who has done honour to the gods by his exploits ;¹ he, at whose might heaven and earth are alarmed, and (who is known) by the greatness of his strength, he, men,² is Indra.

1 Who has preserved or protected them : or has surpassed them : pratyarakshad atyakràmad-iti va.—Yaska, X. 10 : the whole of this hymn occurs, with one additional stanza, in the Atharva-Veda, xx. 34 ; to which, by the more modern character of its style, it more properly belongs : its construction is in striking contrast for intelligibility with the more ordinary elliptical and obscure construction of the Suktas by which it is preceded and followed.

2 Sa janasa Indra ; janaso jana, he asurah, the Scholiast thus explaining jana ; but this has reference, it is supposed, to a curious legend, which is somewhat variously related, although to the same general purport : according to one version, Gritsamada, by his devotions, acquired a form as vast as that of Indra, visible at once in heaven, in the firmament, and on earth ; the two Asuras, Dhuni and Chumuri, taking him, therefore, for Indra, were proceeding to attack him, when he arrested their advance by repeating this hymn, intimating that he was not Indra : another version states, that when Indra and the gods were present at a sacrifice celebrated by Vainya, Gritsamada was one of the officiating priests ; the Asuras came to the spot to kill Indra, who, assuming the likeness of Gritsamada, went away without question : when the assembly broke up, and Gritsamada went out, the Asuras, who had been lying wait, considered him to be Indra, and were about to fall upon him, when he diverted them from their purpose by reciting this hymn, showing that Indra was a different person : a third story is, that Indra came alone to the sacrifice of Gritsamada, and being, as before, waylaid by the

2. He, who fixed firm the moving earth ; who tranquillized the incensed mountains ;¹ who spread the spacious firmament ; who consolidated the heaven ; he men, is Indra.

3. He, who having destroyed Ahi, set free the seven rivers ; who recovered the cows detained by Bala ; who generated fire in the clouds ; who is invincible in battle ; he, men, is Indra.

4. He, by whom all these perishable (regions) have been made ; who consigned the base servile tribe to the cavern ; who seizes triumphant the cherished (treasures) of the enemy as a hunter (strikes) his prey ; he, men, is Indra.

5. He, whom, terrible, they ask for, (saying), Where is he ? or, verily, they say of him, he is not (in any one place) ; but who, inflicting (chastisement,) destroy the cherished (treasures) of the enemy ; in him have faith ; for he, men, is Indra.

6. He, who is the encourager of the rich, and of the poor, and of the priest, who recites his praise, and is a suppliant ; who, of goodly features, is the protector of him, who, with ready stones, expresses the Soma juice, he, men, is Indra.

7. He, under whose control are horses and cattle, and villages, and all chariots ; he who gave birth to the Asuras, assumed the person of the Rishi, and coming forth, returned to Swarga ; after waiting some time, the Asuras entered the chamber of sacrifice, and laid hold of Gritsamada, conceiving that Indra had assumed his person, until they were persuaded of their mistake by the repetition of this Sukta : the legend, as before stated, is briefly alluded to in the Mahabharata.

1 Yah parvatan prakupitan aramnāt ; the Scholiast says he quieted the mountains, going hither and thither, as long as they had wings ; Indra cut them off.

sun and to the dawn: and who is the leader of the waters; he, men, is Indra.

8. Whom (two hosts), calling and mutually encountering, call upon;¹ whom both adversaries, high and low, (appeal to); whom two (charioteers), standing in the same car,² severally invoke; he, men, is Indra.

9. Without whom men do not conquer; whom when engaged in conflict, they invoke for succour; he, who is the prototype of the universe and the caster down of the unyielding; he men, is Indra.

10. He, who with the thunderbolt has destroyed many committing great sin, and offering (him) no homage; who grants not success to the confident; who is the slayer of the Dasyu; he, men, is Indra.

11. He, who discovered S'ambara dwelling in the mountains for forty years; who slew Ahi, growing in strength, and the sleeping son of Danu;³ he, men, is Indra.

12. He, the seven-rayed,⁴ the showerer. the powerful, who let loose the seven rivers to flow; who, armed with the thunderbolt, crushed Rauhina when scaling heaven; he, men, is Indra.

¹ Yam krandasi sanyati vihvayete; whom, crying aloud, encountering (two), invoke; there is no substantive; Sayana proposes, rodasi, heaven and earth; or dwe sene, two armies.

² Here again a substantive is wanting; the Scholiast supplies rathinau, two charioteers, or Agni and Indra.

³ Sayana considers, ahi, the slayer, ahantaram, and danum, son of Danu, to be epithets of Sambara.

⁴ The seven rays, rasmayah, are here said to imply the seven forms of Parjanya, or Indra, as the rain-cloud; or seven kinds of rain-clouds, severally named in the Taittiriyaanyaka.

13. He, to whom heaven and earth bow down ; ne, at whose might the mountains are appalled ; he who is the drinker of the Soma juice, the firm (of frame), the adamant-armed, the wielder of the thunderbolt ; he, men, is Indra.

14. He, who protects (the worshipper) offering the libation, or preparing (the mixed curds and butter), repeating his praise and soliciting his assistance ;
he, of whom the sacred prayers, the (offered) Soma juice, the (presented sacrificial) food, augment (the vigour) ; he, men, is Indra.

15. Indra, who art difficult of approach ; thou, verily, art a true benefactor), who bestowest (abundant) food upon him who offers the libation, who prepares (the mixed curds and butter) : may we, enjoying thy favour, blessed with progeny, daily repeat (thy praise) at the sacrifice.

SUKTA II. (XIII).

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

THE season (of the rains) is the parent (of the Soma plant), which, as soon as born of her, enters into the waters in which it grows : thence it is fit for expression, as concentrating (the essence of the) water ; and the juice of the Soma is especially to be praised (as the libation proper for Indra).

2. The aggregated (streams) come, bearing everywhere the water, and conveying it as sustenance for the asylum of all rivers, (the ocean) : the same path is (assigned) to all the descending (currents) to follow ;
and as he, who has (assigned) them (their course), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

3. One (priest) announces (the offering) that he, (the institutor of the rite) presents ; another performs the act that apportions the limbs (of the victim) ; a third corrects all the deficiencies of either,¹ and as he, who has enjoyed these (functions), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

4. Distributing nourishment to their progeny, they, (the householders), abide (in their dwellings), as if offering ample and sustaining wealth to a guest : constructing (useful works, a man) eats with his teeth the food (given him) by (his) protector,² and as he, who has enjoyed these (things to be done), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

5. Inasmuch as thou hast rendered earth visible to heaven, and hast set open the path of the rivers by slaying Ahi ; therefore the gods have rendered thee divine by praises, as (men) invigorate a horse by water ; (and thou art (Indra), to be praised.

6. (Thou art he) who bestowest both food and increase, and milkest the dry nutritious (grain) from out the humid stalk : he, who gives wealth to the worshipper, and art sole sovereign of the universe : thou art he, (Indra), who is to be praised.

7. Thou, who hast caused, by culture, the flowering and fruitful plants) to spread over the field ; who hast generated the various luminaries of heaven ; and who of vast bulk, comprehendest vast (bodies); thou art he who is to be praised.

8. Thou, who art (famed for) many exploits, put on to-day an unclouded countenance, (as prepared) to slay Sahavasû, the son of Nrimara,¹ with the sharpened (edge of the thunderbolt), in defence of the (sacrificial) food, and for the destruction of the Dasyus: thou art he who is to be praised.

9. Thou, for whose sole pleasure a thousand (steeds are ready); by whom all are to be fed; and who protectest the institutor (of the sacrifice); who, for the sake of Dabhiti,² hast cast the Dasyus into unfettered (captivity) and who art to be approached (by all), thou art he who is to be praised.

10. Thou art he, from whose manhood all the rivers (have proceeded); to whom (the pious) have given (offerings); to whom, doer of mighty deeds, they have presented wealth; thou art he, who hast regulated the six expansive³ (objects), and art the protector of the five (races) that look up to thee: thou art he who is to be praised.

11. Thy heroism, hero, is to be glorified, by which, with a single effort, thou hast acquired wealth; (where-with) the (sacrificial) food of (every) solemn and

1 Two Asuras, of whom nothing more is particularized than the etymology of their appellations, which is perhaps not very authentic; nri, man, and mara, who kills; and saha, with, vasu, wealth.

2 Dabhiti has been named before, i. 295, but with no further description than his being a Rishi; he is elsewhere called a Raja; see note (a. p. 246; several of the exploits here ascribed to Indra are, in the hymn referred to, attributed to the As'wins.

constant (ceremony is provided); for all (the acts) thou hast performed, thou, Indra, art he who is to be praised.

12. Thou hast provided a passage for the easy crossing of the flowing waters² for Turviti and for Vayya: rendering (thyself) renowned, thou hast uplifted the blind and lame Paravrij³ from the lowliness (of affliction): thou art he who is to be praised.

13. Possessor of riches, exert thy ability to bestow wealth upon us; for thine is great affluence: mayest thou, Indra, be disposed to grant us exceeding abund-

1 Jatushthirasya pre vayah sahaswato; Jatushthira may be a proper name; when the sense will be, thou hast given (pra being put for pradaha) food for the vigorous Jatushthira; but the phrase may also signify, according to Sayana, Indra's being the occasional (jatu) agent in sacrificial offerings (vayas) in relation to constant and essential ceremonies,—sthirasya baluvaṣo yajnaḍeh karmana sambandhi vayas.

2 Aramaya sarapasastaraya srutim: it would seem as if Sayana understood apas here by karma, opus; saranam apah karma yasam; they of whom the act is going or proceeding: but this is only his etymology of apas, waters, for he presently placed his meaning beyond doubt by saying, that the persons names beheld a large river, which they were unable to cross, when they prayed to Indra, and were conveyed across by him. Turviti and Vayya have both occurred more than once.—See Index, vol. i.

3 Paravrijam prandham s'ronam, which is the expression of S cxii. v. 8; the latter adds chakshase etave, to see and to walk; and the Scholiast inserted, as understood, the name of Rijraswa, as the individual who was made to see; whence it followed that s'rona was the name of him who was made to walk: from his passage, however, it is clear that there was an ellipse, and that both prandha and s'rona, or blind and lame, were epithets of Paravrij: the miracle in the earlier hymn is ascribed to the Aswins.

SUKTA III. (XIV.)

The deity Rishi, and metre as before.

PRIESTS, bring the Soma libation for Indra; sprinkle with ladles the exhilarating beverage: he, the hero, is ever desirous of the draught: offer the libation to the showerer (of benefits), for, verily, he desires it.

2. Priests, offer the libation to him who slew the rain-arresting Vritra, as (he strikes down) a tree with (his) thunderbolt; to him who desires it: and Indra is worthy of (the beverage).

3. Priests, offer this libation, which, like the wind in the firmament, (is the cause of rain); to him who slew Dribhika,¹ destroyed Bala, and liberated the cows; heap Indra with Soma juice, as an old man (is covered) with garments.

4. Priests, propitiate, by the offering of the Soma, that Indra, who slew Urana,² displaying nine and ninety arms; and hurled Arbuda down headlong.

5. Priests, offer the Soma libation to that Indra, who slew Swas'na, the unabsorbable Sushna, and the mutilated (Vritra); who destroyed Pipru, Namuchi, and Rudrikra.³

1 An Asura; Bala we have had before.

2 Urana is a new name; Arbuda occurs vol. i. p. 173.

3 Sushna has often been named, and Pipru occurs more than once: see Index, vol. i. Swas'na-su-as'nate is he who devours; but the Scholiast refers su to the verb jaghana, well-slew, and makes the name, Asna, apparently without necessity; this and

6. Priests, present the Soma libation to him, who, with the adamantine (thunderbolt), demolished the hundred ancient cities of Sambara, and cast down the hundred thousand (descendants) of Varchin.¹

7. Priests, present the Soma libation to him, who, slaying hundreds and thousands (of Asuras), cast them down upon the lap of the earth : who destroyed the assailants of Kutsa, Ayu, and Atithigwa.²

8. Priests, leaders (of the ceremony), may you, quickly bringing the offering to Indra, receive that (recompense) which you may desire : solemnizing the sacrifice, offer the Soma libation, purified by expressing to the renowned Indra.

9. Priests, offer to him the prompt (libation) ; lift it up, purified with water, in the laddle : well pleased he desires it from your hands ; present the exhilarating Soma juice to Indra.

10. Priests, fill the bountiful Indra with libations, as the udder of a cow is filled with milk ; so shall the adorable (Indra) fully comprehended (the liberality) of him (who desires to present the gift, and shall say (to him), I acknowledge the secret (virtue) of this my (draught).

11. Priests, fill with libations, as a granary (is filled) with barley, Indra, who is lord of the riches of

12. Possessor of riches, exert thy ability to bestow wealth upon us; for thine is great affluence: mayst thou, Iudra, be disposed to grant us exceeding abundance, day by day, so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at our sacrifice.

SUKTA IV. (XV.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

VERILY, I proclaim the great and authentic deeds of the mighty and true (Indra); of him who drank the effused juices at the Trikadruka rites, and in his exhilaration slew Ahi.

2. Who fixed the heaven in unsupported (space), and filled the spacious firmament, and heaven, and earth, (with light): he it is who has upheld and has made the earth renowned: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

3. (He it is) who has measured the eastern (quarters) with measures like a chamber; who has dug with the thunderbolt the beds of the rivers, and has easily sent them forth by long continued paths in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

4. Encountering the (Asuras), carrying off Dabhiti, he burnt all their weapons in a kindled fire, and enriched (the prince) with their cattle, their horses, and their chariots:¹ in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

5. He tranquillized this great river, (so that it)² might be crossed; he conveyed across it in safety (the sages) who had been unable to pass over it, and who having crossed, proceeded to realize the wealth they sought: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

6. By his great power he turned to Sindhu towards the north:³ with his thunderbolt he ground to pieces the waggon of the dawn, scattering the tardy enemy with his swift forces: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

7. Conscious of the disappearance of the damsels,⁴ the (Rishi) Parivrij, becoming manifest, stood up; the lame man overtook (them), the blind man beheld (them): in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

1 According to the legend, the Asuras had besieged and taken the city of a royal sage, named Dabhitî, but on their retreat were intercepted and defeated by Indra, who recovered the booty, and restored it to the prince.

2 Sa in mahim dhunim eto aramnat: dhuni, according to Sayana, is a synonyme of the Parushni, or Iravati River: see vol. i p. 88, note, from its shaking or dissipating the sins of the worshippers,—stotrinam papani dhunoti parushni nadi.

3 Sodancham sindhum arinat; sindhum prancham santam udunmukham akarot; he made the Sindhu, being to the east facing towards the north: there is no further explanation of the sense of the passage, and it does not appear whether, by the Sindhu, we are in this place to understand the Indus.

4 Certain girls, it is said, made sport of the blind and lame Rishi, who thereupon prayed to Indra, and recovered his sight and the use of his legs:

8. Praised by the Angirasas, he destroyed Bala: he forced open the firm shut (doors) of the mountain; he broke down their artificial defences: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

9. Thou hast slain the Dasyus, Chumuri and Dhuni, having cast them into (profound) sleep: thou hast protected Dabhiti, whilst his chamberlain¹ gained in that (contest) the gold (of the Asuras): in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds)

10. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee the boon (that he desires): grant it to (us) thy adorers: do not thou who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers; so that blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.²

SUKTA V (XVI.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

I BEAR the libation for you to the best of the holy (gods, to be poured) on the kindled fire, (and I offer to him) fitting praise): we invoke for (our) protection the ever-youthful Indra the undecaying, the causer of decay, sprinkled (with the Soma libation.)

2. For without that mighty Indra, this (world) were nothing: in him all powers whatever are aggregated: he receives the Soma juice into his stomach, and in his body (exhibits) strength and energy: he bears the thunderbolt in his hand and wisdom in his head.

3. Thy might, Indra, is not to be overcome by (that of) heaven and earth; nor is thy chariot (to be stopped) by oceans or by mountains: no one can escape from thy thunderbolt, when thou traverses many leagues with rapid (horses).

4. All men offer worship to that adorable, powerful, and munificent (Indra, who is associated (with praise): therefore, (do thou), who art liberal and most wise, worship him with oblations; and drink, Indra, the Soma, together with the Sun, the showerer (of benefits).¹

5. The juice of the gratifying and exhilarating (Soma), the exciter (of) those who drink it, flows to the showerer (of benefit), the dispenser of food, for his beverage: the two priests, the sprinklers of the oblation; and the stones (that express the juice), offer to the best (of the deities), the Soma, the shedder (of blessings.)²

1 Vrishabhena bhanuna : the Scholiast renders bhanu by Agni, fire.

2 The main object of this and the succeeding stanza appears to be the exemplification of the various modifications of meaning, of which the words vrishan and vrishabha are susceptible; the Soma juice, which is vrishan, flows (to) vrishabha, Indra, who is also vrishabhanna: the two priests, the Adhwaryu and Pratisthatri, it is said, are both vrishabhas; so are the stones used to bruise the Soma plant; and the Soma juice is vrishana; so the thunderbolt is vrisha; the car is vrisha; the horses, vrishanau; the weapons vrishabhani; the Soma is vrishan; and Indra and the Soma are both designated vrishabha: these different forms, vrishan, vrishana, vrishabha, are from the radical vrish, to rain; and imply raining, shedding, showering, sprinkling, literally; or bestowing freely or liberally, when used, as they most commonly are in a figurative sense.

6. Thy thunderbolt, Indra, is the rainer (of bounties); thy chariot, the showerer (of blessings); thy two horses, the shedders (of desire); thy weapons, the diffusers (of wishes); thou reignest, showerer (of benefits), over the inebriating beverage, the sprinkler (of delight): satiate thyself, Indra, with the good-diffusing Soma.

7. Victorious in battle, (through) thy (favour) I approach thee, who art gratified by praise, in sacred rites with prayer, as a boat (to bear me over misfortune): may Indra listen attentively to these our words: we pour out libations to Indra, (who is a receptacle) of treasure, as a well (is of water).

8. Conduct us beforehand away from evil, as a cow grazing in a meadow leads her calf (out of peril): may we, S'atakratu, envelop thee, if but once, with acceptable praises, as youthful husbands (are embraced) by their wives.

9. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee, the boon (that he desires): grant (it) to (us) thy adorers: do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers: so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA VI. (XVII.)

THE deity and Rishi as before; the metre of the two last stanzas is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

ADDRESS, worshippers, after the manner of Angiras, a new (hymn) to that Indra, whose withering (energies) were developed of old; who, in the exhilaration of the Soma, forced open the obstructed and solid clouds.¹

2. May that (Indra) be (exalted), who, manifesting his energy, exerted his might for the first drinking of the Soma; a hero, who in combats protected his own person, and by his greatness sustained the heaven upon his head.

3. Verily, Indra, thou hast displayed thy first great prowess, when (propitiated) by the prayer (of the worshipper), thou hast put forth thy withering (vigour) in his presence: and when the congregated enemies (of the gods), hurled down by thee in thy chariot, drawn by thy horses, fled, scattered.

4. He indeed, the ancient Indra, making himself by his might sovereign over all worlds, became supreme over (all); and thenceforth sustaining heaven and earth, he overspread them with effulgence, and, scattering the malignant glooms, he prevaded (all things.)

5. By his strength he fixed the wandering mountains; he directed the downward course of the waters; he upheld the earth, the nurse (of all creatures); and by his craft he stayed the heaven from falling.

6. Sufficient was he for (the protection of) this (world), which he, its defender, fabricated with his two arms for the sake of all mankind, over whom, he was supreme by his wisdom; whereby, (also), he the loud-shouting, having struck Krivi² with the thun-

7. As a virtuous (maiden), growing old in the same dwelling with her parents, (claims from them her support),¹ so come I to thee for wealth : make it conspicuous, measure it, bring it (hither), grant (a sufficient) provision for my bodily sustenance, (such as that) wherewith thou honourest (thy worshippers.)

8. We invoke thee, Indra, the bestower of enjoyment : thou grantest food, Indra, (in requital of pious) works ; protect us, Indra, with manifold protections ; Indra, showerer (of benefits), render us affluent.

9. That opulent donation which proceeds Indra, from thee assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee the boon that he desires : grant (it) to (us) thy adorers : do not thou who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers : so that blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA VII. (XVIII).

The deity, and Rishi, as before ; the metre, Trishtubh.

A LAUDABLE and pure sacrifice² has been instituted at dawn ; having four pairs (of stones for bruising the

1 Amajur-iva pitroh sachā sati samanāt : amajuh is explained by Sayana, living at home during life ; sati he renders, daughter, duhita : the point of comparison, her claiming her portion, is supplied by the commentator but the possibility of a daughter's being so situated intimates a probability that infant marriages were not at this time considered imperative.

2 Prata ratho navo yoji-ratho-ranhanād yajnah : the word ratha, as derived from ranha, to go, is said to mean here, worship, sacrifice : it may have, however, its more usual meaning of a

Soma ; three (tones of prayer) ; seven metres, and ten vessels ; beneficial to man, conferring heaven, and sanctifiable with solemn rites and praises.

2. That (sacrifice) is sufficient for him (Indra), whether (offered) for the first, the second, or the third time :¹ it is the bearer (of good) to man : other (priests) engender the embryo of a different (rite), but this victorious (sacrifice), the showerer (of benefits) combines with other (ceremonies.)²

3. I harness quickly, and easily the horses to the car of Indra for its journey, by new and well-recited prayer : many wise (worshippers) are present here ; let not other institutors of sacred rites tempt thee (away.)

4. Come, Indra, when invoked, with two horses, or with four, or with six, or with eight, or with ten,³ to drink the Soma juice : object of worship, the juice is poured out : do no wrong (to the libation).

chariot, in which case the other words and phrases are to be adapted to the signification : the chariot has been harnessed, ayoji ; provided with four yokes, chatur-yuga ; three whips, trias'a ; seven reins, saptarasmi ; and ten sides or faces, 'dasa aritra ; such a chariot is to be understood, figuratively, as a conveyance to Swarga, in which sense it is also applicable to yajna sacrifice.

1 Alluding to the three daily sacrifices.

2 The terms, anyasyah, anye, and anyebhih, or another, others, with others, have no substantives expressed ; the nouns of text are supplied from the Scholiast, except in the last, which he renders by Indra, and other deities,—Indradibhih devair sangachate.

3 Although the horses of Indra are properly but two, yet, from their supernatural faculties, they may multiply themselves without limit, so says the Scholiast.

5. Come to our presence, Indra, having harnessed thy car with twenty, thirty, or forty, horses ; or with fifty well-trained steeds ; or with sixty or with seventy, Indra, to drink the Soma juice.

6. Come, Indra, to our presence, conveyed by eighty, ninety, or a hundred horses : this Soma has been poured into the goblet, Indra, for thy exhilaration.

7. Come hither, Indra, (having heard) my prayer : yoke thy two universal steeds to the pole of thy chariot : thou hast been the object of invocation in many ways by many (worshippers) but now, hero, be exhilarated in this (our) sacrifice.

8. Never may my friendship with Indra be disunited : may his liberality (ever) yield us (our desires) : may we be within the excellent defence of (his protecting) arms : may we be victorious in every battle.¹

9. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee, the boon that he desires : grant (it) to (us) thy adorers : do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers : so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee in this sacrifice.

1 Praye praye jigivansah syama : praye is explained, in one sense, yuddhe, in war or battle ; it is also said to mean, entering ; may we be victorious in consequence of Indra's repeatedly entering or frequenting the chamber of sacrifice.

SUKTA VIII. (XIX.)

The deity Rishi, and metre, the same.

IT has been partaken¹ (by Indra) for his exhilaration, of this agreeable (sacrificial) food, the libation of his devout (worshipper); thriving by which ancient (beverage), he has bestowed a (fitting) dwelling, where the adoring conductors (of the ceremony) abide.

2. Exhilarated by the Soma juice, Indra, armed with the thunder-bolt, severed the rain-confining cloud; whereupon the currents of the rivers proceeded (towards the ocean), like birds to their own nests.

3. The adorable Indra, the slayer of Ahi, sent the current of the waters towards the ocean: he generated the sun: he discovered the cattle: he effected the manifestation of the days by light.²

4. To the presenter (of the libation) Indra gives many unparalleled gifts: he slays Vritra: he was the arbiter amongst his worshippers when contending for the possession of the sun.³

² Aktunā ahnām vayunani sadhat is explained by the comment, tejasa prakasan divasanam asadhayat; the sense given in the translation.

³ Atasayyo bhut paspridhanebhyah suryasya satau; the first is explained, praptihetubhutam san, being the cause of obtaining, to those who were contending; saying, Let me be the first to have the sun,—aham eva prathamam suryam prapnuyam; or sati may mean war; to those contending in battle with the sun; no legend is given in explanation of either sense, but is intimated in the succeeding verse, which has been before alluded to, of a dispute between Surya and Etaśa, in which Indra supported the latter —Vol. i. p. 166, note.

5. The divine Indra, when lauded (by Etasa), humbled the sun (in behalf) of the mortal who offered to him the libation; for the munificent Etasa presented him with mysterious and inestimable riches; (as a father gives) his portion (to a son).

6. The radiant Indra subjected to Kutsa, his charioteer, (the Asuras, Sushna, Asusha, and Kuyava; and for the sake of Divodasa, demolished the ninety and nine cities of S'ambara.¹

7. Through desire of food, Indra, we, contributing to thy vigour, spontaneously address to thee (our) praise; secure of thee, may we rely upon thy friendship² hurl thy thunder-bolt against the godless Piyu.³

8. Thus, hero, have the Gritsamadas fabricated praises to thee, as they who are desirous of travelling (construct) roads:⁴ may those who worship thee, adorable Indra, obtained food, strength, habitations, and felicity.

9. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee the boon (that he desires): grant it to us, thy adorers; do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers: so that blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee in this sacrifice.

1 All these have repeatedly occurred before,—see Index, vol. i. except Asusha, he who is not to be dried up; it may be an epithet of Sushna, but is explained by the Scholiast, an Asura.

2 Asyama tat saptam: sapta, derived from sapta, seven, is considered a synonyme of sapta padinam, or sakhyam, friendship.

3 Either an Asura in general, or the name of a particular Asura.

4 Avasyavo na vayunani are explained, gamanam ichchhantah pumanso margam yatha kurvante, as men, wishing to go, make roads.

SUKTA IX. (XX).

THE deity Rishi and metre, as before.

WE bring to thee, Indra, (sacrificial) food, as one desiring food brings his waggon :¹ regard us benevolently when glorifying thee, rendering (thee) illustrious by (our) praise, and soliciting such guides as thou art to felicity.

2. (Defend us), Indra, with thy protections, for thou art the defender against enemies of those men who rely upon thee : thou art the lord of the offender (of the libation), the repeller (of foes) and with these acts (protectest) him with worships thee.

3. May that young adorable Indra, ever be the friend the benefactor, and protector of us, his worshippers : with his protection, may conduct (to the object of his worship) him who repeats (to him) prayer and praise, who prepares the oblation, and recites (his) commendations.

4. I laud that Indra, I glorify him, in whom of old (his worshippers) prospered, and overcame (their enemies : may when, he solicited, gratify the desire of wealth of his present pious adorer.

5. Propitiated by the hymns of the Angirases, Indra granted their prayer, and directed them on the way (to recover their cattle) : carrying off the dawns by the (light of the) sun, he, animated the demolished ancient cities of As'na.

6. May the renowned and graceful Indra who is verily divine, be present over men : may he, the vigorous conqueror of foes, cast down the precious head of the malignant Dâsa.¹

7. Indra, the slayer of Vritra, the destroyer of cities, has been scattered the black-sprung servile (hosts):² He engendered the earth and the waters for Manu : may he fulfil the entire prayer of the sacrificer.

8. Vigour has been perpetually imparted to Indra by his worshippers (with oblations) for the sake of obtaining rain ; for which purpose they have placed the thunder-bolt in his hands, wherewith, having slain the Dasyus, he has destroyed their iron cities.

9. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee, the boon (which he desires) ; grant (it) to (us) thy adorers : do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers : so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA X. (XXI.)

THE deity and Rishi are the same ; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishtubh.

perpetual lord, the lord of man, the lord of earth, the lord of horses, the lord of cattle, the lord of water.¹

2. Offer adoration to Indra, the overcomer, the destroyer, the munificent, the invincible, the all-enduring, the creator, the all-adorable ; the sustainer, the unassailable, the ever-victorious.

3. I proclaim the mighty exploits of that Indra, who is ever-victorious ; the benefactor of man, the overthrower of (the strong) man, the caster down (of foes), the warrior ; who is gratified by our libations, the granter of desires, the subduer of enemies, the refuge of the people.

4. Unequaled in liberality, the showerer (of benefits), the slayer of the malevolent, profound, mighty, (endowed with) impenetrable sagacity, the dispenser of prosperity, the enfeebler (of foes), firm (of fame), vast (in bulk), the performer of pious acts, Indra has given birth to the light of the morning.²

5. The wise Usijas, celebrating his praises, have obtained by their sacrifice, from the sender of water, (knowledge) of the path (of their cattle) : seeking the aid of Indra, and celebrating his praises, they have acquired, whilst uttering hymns and offering adoration, (valuable) treasures.

6. Indra, bestow upon us most excellent treasures ; (give us) the reputation of ability (to celebrate sacred rites) ; grant us prosperity, increase of wealth, security of person, sweetness of speech, and auspiciousness of days.

¹ These are all compounds with Jit ; literally, conqueror, as visvajite, dhanajite, &c. ; but the sense, as Sâyana suggests, is best expressed by Adhipati, lord of or over.

² Ushasah swar janat : or swar may mean, the Sun ; Indra, or the sky, makes manifest the morning sun.

SUKTA XI. (XXII)

THE deity and Rishi as before; the metre of the first stanza is Ashti; of the rest, Asis'akkarī.

THE adorable and powerful (Indra) partaking of the Soma, mixed with barley, effused at the Trikadruka rites, has drunk with Vishnu as much as he wished: the draught has excited that great and mighty Indra to perform great deeds: May that divine (Soma) pervade the divine Indra), the true Soma (pervade) the true Indra.¹

2. Thereupon, resplendent, he has overcome Krivi² in conflict by his prowess: he has filled heaven and earth (with his lustre), and has been invigorated by the efficacy of the draught: one portion he has taken to himself;³ the other he has distributed (to the gods):

1 All the verses of this hymn occur in the Sama-Veda, though scattered; this corresponds with 1. 457, and 11. 836, of Mr. Whitney's Index. Professor Benfey translates the first epithet of Indra, Mahisha, which Sayana interprets by Mahan, great, or pujya, worshipful, by its more ordinary sense of Buffalo: the burthen of each verse, sa-enam saschad devo devam satyam Indram satya Induh, he renders by, der hat der Gott den Gott geehrt, der wahre Indu den wahren Indra, Sâyana refers sa to Indu, or the Soma, of which deva, as well as satya, is an epithet, and puts the verb saschat, which he renders by vyapti karma, pervading, in the imperative, vyapnotu, the text follows his interpretation.

2 Krivim namasuram, an Asura so named.

3 Adhattanyam jahare, prem arichyata, literally, he has taken the other in the belly, he has left over that, that is, according to the Scholiast, basing his interpretation upon the Taittiriya, Indra, having divided the Soma into two portions, took one to himself, and gave the other to the gods, as it is said by another text, a half to Indra, a half to the other gods, etena arddham Indraya, arddham anyebhyo devebhya.

May that divine (Soma) pervade the divine (Indra), the true (Soma), the true (Indra).¹

3. Cognate with (pious) works and with power, thou desirest to support (the universe): mighty with heroic (energies), thou art the subduer of the malevolent: (thou art) the distinguisher (between the doer of good and ill); the giver of the substantial wealth he desires to him who praises thee: May the divine (Soma) pervade the divine (Indra), the true Soma, the true (Indra).²

4. Indra, the delighter (of all),³ the first act performed by thee in ancient time was for the good of man, and deserving of renown in heaven, when, arresting by force the breath of the (enemy)⁴ of the gods, thou didst send down the rain: May Indra prevail by his prowess over all that is godless; may S'atakratu obtain vigour; may he obtain (sacrificial) food.

1 Sâma Veda, II. 828.

2 Sâma-Veda, II. 837.

3 Nrito, lit. dancer, the epithet occurs elsewhere, as one who dances or exults in battle, here the Scholiast explains it by narttayitri, one who causes to dance or to rejoice.

4 The text has only devasya, of the divine, or the deity, which the Scholiast explains, asurasya, asum rinan he renders pranam hinsan, injuring or taking away the breath or life, in consequence of which Indra sends down the water or rain, prarinah apah, the stanza occurs in the Sama-Veda, I. 466, where this passage and the concluding one are somewhat differently translated.

ANUVA'KA III.

SUKTA I. (XXIII)

This hymn is addressed to Bhahmanaspati or Brihaspati when the latter is named, the Rishi is Gritsamada; the metre of the first fifteen stanzas and the nineteenth is Trishtubh; of the other three, Jagati.

WE invoke thee, Brahmanaspati,¹ chief leader of the (heavenly) bands; a sage of sages; abounding beyond measure in (every kind of) food: best lord of prayer: hearing our invocations, come with thy protections, and sit down in the chamber of sacrifice.

2. Brihaspati,² destroyer of the Asuras, through thee the intelligent gods have obtained the sacrificial portion: in like manner as the adorable sun generates the (solar) rays by his radiance, so art thou the generator of all prayers.

1 Brahmanaspati is explained by Sayana, brahmano annasya parivridhasya karmano va palayatri, the protector or cherisher of food, or of any great or solemn acts of devotion, he has other attributes in the text, as, ganânâm ganapatiḥ, chief of the ganas, which generally denotes the classes of the inferior divinities, as the commentator here understands it, and again, jyeshtharajam brahmanâm, the best lord of mantras, or prayers,—pras'asyam swaminam mantranam.

2 There is no marked distinction between Brihaspati and Brahmanaspati in any of the following stanzas: the former is, perhaps, something of a more martial character, and his protection is sought for against enemies and evil spirits in a more especial manner, but there is nothing very precise in the passages addressed to him any particular office or character; Mahidhara explains the term, cherisher or protector of the Vedas,—brihatam vedanam pâlakah, but in the next sukta, Sayana interprets brihat by mantra,—brihato mantrasya, swamin.

3. Having repelled revilers, and (dispersed) the darkness, thou standest, Brihaspati, on the radiant chariot of sacrifice, (which is) formidable (to foes), the humiliator of enemies, the destroyer of evil spirits, the cleaver of the clouds, the attainer of heaven.

4. Thou leadest men, Brihaspati, by virtuous instructions; thou preservest them (from calamity): sin will never overtake him who presents (offerings) to thee: thou art the afflicter of him who hates (holy) prayers;¹ thou art the punisher of wrath: such is thy great mightiness.

5. The man whom thou, Brahmanaspati, a kind protector, defendest, neither sorrow nor sin, nor adversaries nor dissemblers ever harm, for thou drivest away from him all injurious (things).

6. Thou, Brihaspati, art our protector, and the guide of (our) path; (thou art) the discerners (of all things): we worship with praises for thy adoration: may his own precipitate malice involve him (in destruction) who practises deceit against us.

7. Turn aside from the true) path, Brihaspati, the arrogant and savage man who advances to injure us, although unoffending, and keep us in the right way for (the completion of) this offering to the gods.

8. Brihaspati, defender (from calamity), we invoke thee, the protector of our persons, the speaker of encouraging words, and well disposed towards us: do thou destroy the revilers of the gods: let not the malevolent attain supreme felicity.

¹ Brahmadwishah, which may mean, according to the commentator, those who hate either the Brahmans, or the mantras, or prayers.

9. Through thee, Brahmanaspati, (our) benefactor, may we obtain desirable wealth from men: destroy those (our) unrighteous enemies, whether nigh or far off, who prevail against us.

10. Through thee, Brihaspati, (who art) the fulfiller of our desires; pure, and associated (with us), we possess excellent food: let not the wicked man who wishes to deceive us be our master; but let us excelling in (pious) praises attain prosperity.

11. Thou, Brahmanaspati, who hast no requiter (of thy bounty), who art the showerer (of benefits) the repairer to combat, the consumer of foes, the victor in battles, thou art true, the discharger of debts, the humiliator of the fierce and of the exulting.

12. Let not, Brihaspati, the murderous (weapon) of that man reach us, who, with unrighteous mind, seeks to harm us; who, fierce and arrogant, designs to kill thy worshippers: may we baffle the wrath of the strong evil-doer.

13. Brihaspati is to be invoked in battles; he is to be approached with reverence: he who moves amidst combats, the distributor of repeated wealth; the lord Brihaspati has verily overturned all the assailing malignant (hosts), like chariots (overturned in battle).

14. Consume with thy brightest (weapon) the Rakshasas, who have held thy witnessed prowess in disdain: manifest, Brihaspati, thy glorified (vigour) such as it was (of old), and destroy those who speak against thee.

15. Brihaspati, born of truth, grant us that wonderful treasure, wherewith the pious man may worship exceedingly; that (wealth) which shines amongst men; which is endowed with lustre, (is) the means of (performing holy) rites, and invigorates (its possessor) with strength.¹

16. Deliver us not to the thieves, the enemies delighting in violence, who seize ever upon the food (of others); those who cherish in their hearts the abandonment (of the goods); (they, Brihaspati, who do not know the extent of (thy) power² (against evil spirits).³

17. Twashtri engendered thee (chief) amongst all beings, (whence) thou art the reciter of many a holy hymn:³ Brahmanaspati acknowledges a debt to the

1 There are different interpretations of this stanza, and Sayana would prefer the sense which is given to the phrase, dravinam chitram, lit. various, or wonderful wealth, in the Brahmana, which considers it to mean brāhma-varchas, or tejas, the Brahmanical virtue or energy: the verse occurs in the Yajush, xxvi. 3, where the commentator explains dravinam in its literal acceptance of dhanam, wealth.

2 Na parah samno viduh is a rather doubtful phrase, Sayana explains it, ye pumānsah samnah samamayat twattah parah parastād anyadutkrishtām sāma yad rakshoghnam na jananti, those men who do not know anything greater than the faculty of destroying Rakshasas derived from thee made up of that faculty: his explanation is not very intelligible: Sāma vai rakshoha, Sama is the killer of Rakshasas.

3 Samnah samnah kavih is, according to Sayana, the reciter or author of every Sama, sarvasya samnah, the reciter or author of every Sama, sarvasya samnah uchcharayita karttasi, or he refers kavi to Twashtri, and then explains it, the sage who created Brahmanaspati by the efficacy of the Sama,—samnah sarena twam ajijanat.

performer of a sacred rite;¹ he is the acquitter (of the debt),² and the destroyer of the oppressor.

18. When Brihaspati, descendant of Angiras, for thy glory, Parvata had concealed the herd of kine, thou didst set them free, and with thine associate, Indra, didst send down the ocean of water which had been enveloped by darkness.

19. Brahmanaspati, who art the regulator of this (world), understand (the purport) of (our) hymn, and grant us prosperity; for all is prosperous that the gods protect: (and therefore) may we, blessed with excellent descendants, glorify thee at the sacrifice.³

1 Rinachit-stotrikamam rinam iva chinoti, he takes the intention of the praiser as if it was a debt, or obligation

2 Rinaya is of doubtful meaning, Sayana explains it, the discharger or remover of the debt which is of the nature of sin, paparupasya rinasya prithak-karita.

3 This verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiv. 58; Mahidhara explains it in the same manner, except in regard to the word vadema at the end, rendered in the text, may we declare or glorify thee: he would explain it literally, let us speak; that is, let us say; let what we ask be given to us; let it be enjoyed by us;—diyatam bhujiyatām uchcharayema.

SEVENTH ADHY'AYA.

SUKTA II. (XXIV)

Brahmanaspati and Brihaspati, are again the deities; the former associated with Indra in the twelfth stanza; the Rishi as before; the metre of the twelfth and sixteenth stanzas is Trishtubh; of the rest Jagati.

INasmuch, Brihaspati, as thou rulest (over all), accept this our propitiation: we worship thee with this new and solemn hymn: since this, thy friend, our benefactor, celebrates thee, do thou fulfil our desires.

2. (Thou art) that Brahmanaspati who, by his might, has humbled those who deserved humiliation; who in his wrath rent the clouds asunder; who sent down the undescending (waters); and made way into the mountain (cave), opulent (in cattle).

3. That was the exploit, (performed) for the most divine of the gods, by which the firm (shut gates) were thrown open, the strong (barriers) were relaxed, (by him) who set the cows at liberty: who by the (force of the) sacred prayer, destroyed Bala: who dispersed the darkness and displayed the light.

4. That stone-like, solid, down-hanging, water-laden (cloud), which Brahmanaspati has with his strength divided, the universal solar rays have drunk up; but they have again shed together the showering and water-spreading (rain).

5. For you, (worshippers), the constant and manifold (bounties of Brahmanaspati), through months and through years, set open the gates of the future raîns,¹ and he has appointed those results of prayer which the two regions mutually and without effort provide.²

6. Those sages,³ who, searching on every side, discovered the precious treasure (of cattle) hidden in the cave of the Panis, having seen through the false (illusions of the Asura) and again coming (thither), forced an entrance.

7. Those sages, eminent for truth, having seen through the false illusions of the *Asura*⁴, again pursued the main road thither, and with their hands cast against the rock the destructive fire, which, till then, was not there.⁴

1 Bhuvana bhavitwa are rendered by the commentary, udakanam bhavyanam,

2 Vayuna chakara; jnanani-mantravishayani, he made the knowledge, the object of prayer; which the ayatamanau-aprayatnau or the two, said by the Scholiast to mean heaven and earth, which are without effort, pass to one another, anyadanyad charata: the phraseology is rather obscure, but the meaning is, that, by virtue of prayer and sacrifice, rain is engendered in the sky, which coming down upon the earth, causes fertility, whence food for men or for sacrifice is provided, which, being offered, is again productive of rain, and thus, as the result of prayer, a mutual and spontaneous interchange of benefits between heaven and earth is perpetuated.

3. The Angirasas, according to the Scholiast: the whole of this is, no doubt, allegorical; the cows hidden in the caves are the rains accumulated in the clouds, which are set free by the oblations with fire, of which the Angirasas were, no doubt, the authors; at least to some extent.

4 The expression is rather obscure, nakih sho asti, that is not; that is, according to Siyana, so agnih purvam tatra nakir asti, na vidyate, that fire formerly is not there, is not knowing but they, of their own power, having produced the fire that was not

8. Whatever Brahmanaspati aims at with the truth-strung quick-darting bow, that (mark) he surely attains : holy are its arrows with which he shoots, (intended) for the eyes of men, and having their abode in the ear.¹

9. He, Brahmanaspati, is the aggregator and subjugator (of objects) ; the family priest (of the gods ; and the renowned in battle ; the beholder (of all , who bestows food and desired treasures, whence the radiant sun shines without exertion.

10. Expansive, vast, and excellent riches, are the attainable (bounties) of Brihaspati, the sender of the rain ; these are the gifts of the adorable giver of food, whereby both (descriptions of worshippers) entering here enjoy (abundance).²

11. He, who is all-pervading and delighting, is willing to sustain by his strength the noble worshipper), as well as one who is in low distress : greatly is that Brahmanaspati renowned amongst the god , and therefore is he verily supreme above all (beings).

12. All truth, lords of wealth, (Indra and Brahmanaspati) is inherent, in you both : the waters injure known, or was not extant, threw it there ; avidyamanam agnim swasâmarthyâd utpadya tatra prachikshipuh : a probable allusion to the dissemination of fire-worship by the Angirasas.

1 Nrichakshasah karnayonayah ; the arrows are oblations and mantras : the first obvious to the sight, the second addressed to the ears of men.

2 Yena jana ubhaye bhunjate visah : the two sorts of persons are either the Yajamana, or host, and the officiating priests ; or they may be gods and men ; viso nivishtah santo bhunjate-bhogan labhanti, being entered or seated, they enjoy ; they obtain enjoyments.

not your rites:¹ come to our presence (to receive) our oblations, like a pair of steeds (to receive) their provender.

13. The very swift horses (of Brahmanaspati) listen to (our invocation): the priest of the assembly offers with praise the (sacrificial) wealth: may Brahmanaspati, the hater of the oppressor, accept (the payment of) the debt, agreeably to his pleasure: may he be the acceptor of the (sacrificial) food presented at this ceremony.

14. The purpose of Brahmanaspati, engaging in a great work, has been successful according to his wish; for he it was who recovered (the stolen) cattle for (the dwellers in) heaven; and distributed them; so that of their own power they took different directions, like (the branches of) a mighty river.

15. May we, Brahmanaspati, be daily in the possession of well-regulated and food-supplying wealth: do thou add for us posterity to posterity, since thou, who art the ruler (of all), acceptest my invocation with (offered sacrificial) food.

Brahmanaspati, who art the regulator of this (world), understand (the purport of) our hymn, and grant us posterity; for all is prosperous that the gods protect: (and therefore) may we be blessed with excellent descendants, glorify thee at this sacrifice.

¹ Apas' cha na praminanti vratam vam; the Scholiast says that apah is here used, by metonymy, for all beings,—sarvani bhutani.

SUKTA III XXV.

The deity and Rishi are the same ; the metre is Jagati

KINDLING the fire, may (the worshipper) overcome the malevolent (disturbers of the rite); may he repeating prayers, and laden with oblations, prosper: he whom Brahmanaspati makes his associate, lives to behold the son of his son.

2. (Surrounded) by his descendants, may he surpass the malevolent descendants (of his adversaries), for he is famed for great wealth of cattle, and understands (all things) of himself: his sons and grandsons prosper whom Brahmanaspati makes his associate.

3. As a river (washes away) its banks, so the devout worshipper, (of Brahmanaspati), overpowers his enemies by his strength, as a bull (overcomes) an ox: like the spreading flame of fire, it is impossible to stop him, whom Brahmanaspati makes his associate.

4. For him, the unobstructed rains of heaven descend: first among the devout, he acquires (wealth in cattle: of irresistible vigour he destroys his enemies by his strength, whom Brahmanaspati makes his associate.

5. Verily, for him all rivers flow: him do uninterrupted and numerous pleasures await: blessed with the felicity of the gods, he ever prospers, whom Brahmanaspati makes his associate.

 SUKTA IV. (XXIV)

Deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

MAY the sincere praiser (of Brahmanaspati) verily overcome (his) enemies: may the worshipper of the gods overcome him assuredly who does noe reverence them : may the propitiator of (Brahmanaspati) overcome him who is difficult to be overcome in battles : may he who offers sacrifice appropriate the food of him who does not sacrifice.

2. Offer worship, O man, (to Brahmanaspati) : proceed resolutely against those who are meditating (hostility) : keep your mind firm in contending against foes : offer oblations whereby you may be prosperous : we also solicit the protection of Brahmanaspati.

3. He who with a believing mind worships Brahmanaspati, the father of the gods,¹ with oblations, he verily receives food, together with his sons, his kindred, his descendants, his people, and (obtains) riches together with (all) men.

4. Brahmanaspati leads by a straight path (to his reward), the worshipper who propitiates him with oblations of butter : he guards him against sin ; he protects him from foes and from distress ; and wonderful (in might), confers upon him many (favours).

SUKTA V. (XXVII.)

The deities are the Adityas ; the Rishi is either Gritsamada, or his son, Kurma ; the metre is Trishtubh

I PRESENT continually, with the ladle (of speech), these oblation-dropping hymns to the royal Adityas : May Mitra, Aryaman, Bhaga, the multipresent Varuna, the powerful Ans'a, hear us.²

1 Devanam pitaram : the Scholiast renders the latter, palayitaram, the protector or cherisher.

2 The A'dityas, or sons of Aditi, here enumerated, are only five ; the Scholiast quotes the Taittiriya for eight, adding Dhâtri,

2. May those of equal exploits, Mitra, Aryaman, Varuna, be pleased to-day by this my praise ; they who are A'dityas, luminous, purified by showers,¹ who abandon none (that worship them), who are irreproachable, unassailable

3. Those A'dityas, mighty, profound, unsubdued, subduing, many-eyed,² behold the innermost³ (thoughts of men), whether wicked or virtuous, whether far from or nigh to those royal (deities).

4. The divine A'dityas are the upholders (of all things), moveable or immoveable ; the protectors of the universe ; the provident in acts ; the collectors of rain ;⁴ the possessors of veracity ; the acquitters of our debts.⁵

Indra, and Viwās'wat to those in the text, and adding Ans'u for Ans'a. The Paurānik enumeration is universally twelve, Vishnu Pushan, I'washtri, and Savitri, being added to the eight of the Taittiriya.

1 Dhārāputā, cleansed by water, clean, nirmala, according to the commentary ; but no doubt the term refers to the connection of the A'dityas with the fall of rain.

2 Dhuryakshāh, having many eyes, is the literal rendering of the epithet ; it is no doubt figuratively used, implying the universal penetration of the rays of light, or, as the commentator says, very brilliant,—bahutejasah.

3 Antah-pas'yante, they look within, is the phrase of the text, but the Scholiast explains it, prāninam, or manushyānām hritsu, into the hearts of living beings, or men ; the following expressions confirm his interpretation.

4 Asuryam rakshamānāh : asura, the Scholiast here explains, a cloud ; from asu, water, as the same with life, and ra, what yields, thence, asuryam is the water of the cloud, or rain, which the A'dityas keep collected until the season of its fall, tat tat kale vrishtyutpadanaya rakshanti.

5 The debts, in the estimation of the commentator, are literally so, those which are to be paid by the worshippers to other persons

5. May I be conscious, A'dityas, of this your protection, the cause of happiness (and security) in danger; Aryaman, Mitra, and Varuna, may I, through your guidance, escape the sins which are like pitfalls¹ (in my path).

6. Aryaman, Mitra, and Varuna, easy is the path (you show us), and free from thorns, and pleasant; therefore, A'dityas, (lead us) by (it): speak to us favourably, and grant us happiness difficult to be disturbed.

7. May Aditi, the mother of royal sons, place us beyond the malice (of our enemies): may Aryaman lead us by easy paths, and may we, blessed with many descendants, and safe from harm, attain the great happiness of Mitra and Varuna.

8. They uphold the three worlds,² the three heavens;³ and in their sacrifices three ceremonies (are comprised):⁴ by truth, A'dityas, has you great rināni stotribhiranyebhyah pradeyani, see again, verse nine of the next Sukta.

1 Swabhava, s'wabhraniva, gartavanti sthalāniva, like places of land having holes or pits.

2 Tisro bhumir dharayan, bhumi is here said to mean loka, world or sphere, earth, firmament, and heaven, which the A'dityas support by supplying them with rain.

3 Trih dyun, the three luminous objects, diptan, which, according to the Scholiast, may be the three lokas above the sky, Mahar, Jana, Satya, or the three luminous deities, Agni, Vayu, and Surya.

4 The expression is rather obscure,—trini vrata vidathe antar esham, lit. the three ceremonies in the sacrifice, in the midst of them: the commentator explains it as in the text, three daily ceremonials being essentially one worship of the A'dityas, or he suggests it might be rendered, in the midst of those worlds, there are three acts intended especially as the acts of the A'dityas, the absorption, retention, and re-distribution of dew or rain.

might (been produced, such as is most excellent; Aryaman, Mitra, and Varuna.

9. The A'dityas, decorated with golden ornaments, brilliant, purified by showers, who never slumber, nor close their eyelids, who are unassailable, and praised by many, uphold the three bright heavenly regions for the sake of the upright man.

10. Varuna, destroyer of foes, thou art the sovereign over all, whether they be gods or mortals: grant to us to behold a hundred years, and that we may enjoy by ancient (sages).¹

11. Neither is the right hand known to us, A'dityas, nor is the left; neither is that which is in front, nor that which is behind, (discerned by me): Givers of dwellings, may I, who am immature (in knowledge), and timid in spirit obtain, when guided by you, the light that is free from fear.²

12. He who presents offerings to the royal and true (A'dityas); he whom their constant favours exalt; he proceeds, wealthy, renowned, munificent, and honoured to sacrifices, in his chariot.

13. Pure, unmolested, possessing (abundant) food and virtuous descendants, he dwells amidst fertilizing waters:³ no one, whether nigh or afar, harms him who is (safe) in the good guidance of the A'dityas.

14. Aditi, Mitra, Varuna, having pity upon us, even although we may have committed some offence against you: may I obtain, Indra, that great light which is free from peril; let not the protracted glooms (of night) envelop us.

¹ The text has only purva, prior, former, the commentator explains it by purvair devaih, by former gods or divine sages.

² Either the light of day, or the light of knowledge.

³ Apah suyavasa upaksheti; he dwells near to waters that are productive of corn; that is, he obtains rain when needed.

15. Both (heaven and earth) combined cherish him (whom the A'dityas protected); verily prosperous, he thrives, with the rain of heaven; victorious in battles, (he defends) both his own dwelling (and assails) that of his foe;¹ to him both portions (of creation) are propitious.²

16. Adorable A'dityas, may I pass (safe) in your car from the illusions which (you devise) for the malignant, the snares which are spread for your foes, (in like manner) as a horseman passes over a road); and thus may we abide secure in infinite felicity.

17. May I never (have to) represent, Varuna, the destitution of a (once) opulent, dear, and munificent kinsman:³ may I never, royal Varuna, be devoid of well-regulated riches: (and) may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.⁴

1 Ubha kshaya vajayam yati, he goes, conquering, to both habitations, is the literal rendering, which is amplified by the comment as in the text.

2 Ubhav arddhau, the two parts, of the world, according to the commentator, either moveable and immoveable things, or mortal and immortal beings.

3 Māham āvidam s'unam apan : the last word is of not unfrequent occurrence for jnāti, a relative; s'unam, according to the Scholiast, is synonymous with s'unyam, emptiness; daridryam, poverty: the sentiment is thus illustrated by the Scholiast: may I not be under the necessity of begging of different princes, saying my sons, or other relatives, are hungry: asmadiyah putradayah kshudhita iti prabhu prabhu samipe abhidhaya yachamāno mabhuvam.

4 The burden of the last stanza of Hymn xv.

SUKTA VI (XXVIII.)

The deity is Varuna ; the Rishi and metro are the same as before (The worshipper repeats) this praise of the sage, the self-radiant A'ditya ; may he preside over all beings by his power : I beg for fame of the sovereign Varuna, a deity who, when much pleased, (is propitious) to his adorer.

2. May we, Varuna, deeply meditating on thee earnestly praising thee, and (engaged) in thy worship, be prosperous : glorify thee daily, like the fires (that are kindled in thy honour) at the coming of the luminous dawns.

3. Varuna,* chief guide (of men) may we abide in the felicity of thee, who art endowed with great prowess and art glorified by many : divine sons of Aditi, unharmed (by foes), have compassion upon us through your benevolence.

4. The Aditya, the upholder, has created all this water :¹ the rivers flow by the power of Varuna : they never weary, they never stop; they have descended with swiftness, like birds upon the circumambient (earth).²

5. Cast off from me sin, Varuna, as if it were a rope : may we obtain from thee a channel (filled) with water : cut not the thread of me engaged in) weaving

1 Pra sim asrijad ritam ; the expression is indeterminate, in consequence of the various senses of ritam, which may mean truth, or sacrifice, as well as water : the following phrase, sindhavo varunasya yanti, rivers go of Varuna, or by his will or power, confirms the sense of water in the preceding.

2 Paptu raghuya parijman : the last means merely that which goes about or round, and might be rendered, revolving : the Scholiast considers it to be an epithet of bhumi, understood parijmani bhumyam.

pious works ; blight not the elements of holy rites before the season (of their maturity).

6. Keep off all danger from me, Varuna : supreme monarch, endowed with truth, bestow thy favour upon me : cast off (from me) sin, like a tether from a calf : no one rules for the twinkling of an eye, apart ; from thee.

7. Harm us not, Varuna, with those destructive (weapons), which, repeller (of foes), demolish, him who does evil at thy sacrifice ; let us not depart (before our time) from the regions of light : scatter the malevolent that we may live.

8. As we have offered adoration to thee, Varuna, of old, in like manner as we offer it now, so may we offer it future (to thee), who art everywhere present : for in thee, who art difficult of attainment, as in an (immoveable) mountain, all holy acts are assembled, and are not to be dissevered.

9. Discharge, Varuna, the debts (contracted) by my progenitors, and those now (contracted) by me ; and may I not, royal Varuna, be dependent (on the debts contracted) by another :¹ many are the morinings that have, as it were, indeed not dawned ;² make us, Varuna, alive in them.

1 Maham rajann-anyakritena bhojam, may I not enjoy by what is made by another ; which the Scholiast explains, may I not obtain enjoyment by the wealth that is acquired by another : but the phrase, ma t-kritani, made by me, refers to rinā, for rinani, debts ; and so probably, it does here.

2 Avyushta in-nu bhuyasirushasah-a no jivan tasu sadhi, un-risen, verily indeed, many morning dawns, make us alive in them ; according to Sayana, this means that persons involved in debt are so overcome with anxiety that they are not conscious of the dawn of day, to them the morning has not dawned, they are

10. Protect us, Varuna against every peril which a kinsmen or a friend threatens me with alarmed in sleep ; or from a thief or wolf that attempts to destroy us ¹

11. May I never (have to) represent, Varuna, the destitution of a (once) opulent, dear and munificent kinsman : may I never, royal (Varuna, be devoid of well-regulated riches : and may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA VII. (XXIX.)

The deities are the Viswadevas ; the Rishi and metre as before A'dityas, upholders of pious works, and who are to be sought by all, remove sin far from me, like a woman delivered in secret, :² knowing Mitra, Varuna, and universal) gods the good, that follows from your hearing our prayers, I invoke you for (our protection.

dead to the light of day : the passage is deserving of notice indicating an advanced, as well as a corrupt state of society—the occurrence of debt and severity of its pressure.

1 The construction is rather inconsistent with mahyam, to me, in the sing., in the first line, and asman, us, in the plur., in the second : according to an authority cited by Sayana, this hymn removes sin and danger, debt and poverty, and counteracts bad dreams—

Idam ekâdas archam tu varunam bhayapapanut,
Rinadâridryadushwapnanas'anam iti s'us'ruma.

2 Rahasuriva, like a loose woman who has a child privately, and who abandons it in some distant place, is the explanation of the commentator ; and is necessary to support the comparison to the distant removal of sin prayed for : it is a not insignificant indication of manners.

You, gods, are intelligence, you are vigour : do you drive away the malevolent subduers (of enemies), overcome them entirely, and grant us felicity both now and in future.

3. What may we do for you, gods, either now or in future :¹ what may we do, Vasus, by perpetual and practicable (acts of devotion) : Do you, Mitra, Varuna, Aditi, Indra, and the Maruts, maintain our well-being.

4. O gods, you verily, are our kinsmen : being so, grant felicity to me your suppliant ; let not your chariot be tardy in coming to the sacrifice ; let us never weary of relatives such as you are.

5. Alone among you, I have committed many offences, (the which correct) as a father corrects a naughty (son) : far from me, gods, be bonds ; far from me be sins ; seize not upon me (your) son as (a fowler) catches a bird.

6. Adorable (deities), be present to-day, that, apprehensive of danger, I may feel sure of your hearty (support) : protect us, gods, from the rapacity of the wolf : protect us, adorable (deities), from him who would work us misfortune.²

7. May I never (have to) represent, Varuna, the destitution of a (once) opulent, dear, and munificent

¹ That is to say, we are unable to render you any adequate service.

² The verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiii. 51. The explanation of the expression, nijuro vrikasya, somewhat varies, that first being considered as the adjective agreeing with vrikasya, protect us from the mischievous wolf ; and again, kartat avapado, is explained by Mahidhara, protect us from a well into, which we might fall,—kupat avapat yatra sa-tasmat palayata.

kinsman : may I never, royal (Varuna), be devoid of well-regulated riches, and may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA VIII. (XXX).

THE deities are various : Indra and Soma are those of the sixth stanza ; Saraswati of the eighth ; Brihaspati of the ninth ; the Maruts of the last ; Indra of the rest ; the Rishi is Gritsamada ; the metre is Trishtubh, except in the last verse, in which it is Jagati.

THE waters cease not (to flow in libations) to the divine Indra, the sender of rain, the animator (of all),¹ the slayer of Ahi ; day by day proceeds the current of the waters : at what period of time was their first creation.²

2. His mother, (Aditi), declared to him the man who had offered (sacrificial) food to Vritra : obedient to his pleasure, the rivers, tracing out their paths, flow day by day to their object, (the ocean).

3. Inasmuch as he had spared aloft above the firmament, Indra hurled against Vritra his destructive (thunderbolt) : enveloped in a cloud, he rushed upon Indra, but the wielder of the sharpened weapon triumphed over his foe.

4. Pierce, Brihaspati,³ with a radiant shaft, as with a thunderbolt, the sons of the Asura guarding his ¹ The text has savitre, which might mean, to the sun, as one with Indra : the Scholiast renders it, however, by sarvasya prerakaya, to the instigator, impeller, or animator of all.

² The drift of the question, according to the commentator, is the non-creation or eternity of the waters, nitya eva hi ta ityarthā gates: in like manner as thou didst formerly slay Vritra by thy prowess, so do thou now destroy our enemy.

5. Do thou, who art on high, cast down from heaven the adamant (thunderbolt), wherewith, when exhilarated thou didst slay thy foe; and make us affluent in the possession of many sons, and grandsons, and cattle.

6. Indra and Soma, eradicate the worker (of evil), whom you hate; be the encouragers of the liberal institutor of the rite: protect us in this place of peril, and make the world (free from fear).¹

7. Let not Indra vex me, or make me slothful: never may we say (to another), do not offer the Soma libation: (for it is Indra) who will fulfil (my wishes), who will give (me riches), who will hear (my prayers), who will reward me, presenting libations, with cattle.

8. Saraswati, do thou protect us: associated with the Māruts, and firm (of purpose), overcome our foes, whilst Indra slays the chief of the Sandikas,² defying him and confiding in his strength.

9. Detecting him who is lying in ambush (against us), who is purposing our death, pierce him, Vrihaspati, with thy sharp (thunder-bolt), and overthrow (our) enemies with (thy) weapons: hurl monarch, thy destroying (shaft) against the oppressor.

10. Achieve, hero, along with our valiant heroes, the exploits that are to be achieved by thee: long have

¹ Krinutam-¹ kram, is, literally, make the world; but the verb is not used in the sense of creating, and requires the specification of what is done, which the comment supplies by bhayarahitam, freed from fear.

² Vrishabham sandikānām, the Sandikas are said to be the descendants of S'an'da, who, with Amarka, is the Purohita, or priest of the Asuras.

(our enemies) been inflated (with pride); slay them and bring to us their treasures.

11. Desirous of felicity, Maruts, I glorify with praise and homage your divine, manifest, and congregated strength; that we may hereby daily enjoy distinguished affluence, accompanied by valiant dependants and posterity.

SUKTA IX. (XXXI).

THE deities and Rishi are the same; the metre of the last stanza is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

MITRA and Varuna, associated with the A'dityas the Rudras and the Vasus, protect our (sacrificial) chariot,¹ when (it goes) about (from one place to another); like birds that fly down, seeking for food, rejoicing and resting in the woods.

2. Pronitiated divinities, protect our chariot, gone forth in ^{pleasure} quest of food and to the people, when the quick (horses), raising the dust with their paces, trample with their feet upon the high places of the earth.²

3. Or, may that all-beholding Indra, the accomplicher of great deeds, by the collective vigour of the Maruts (coming) from heaven, protect our chariot with unassailable protection, (for the sake of securing to us) ample wealth and abundant food.

1 Asmakam avatam ratham: the latter is here inteded for the cart, or waggon employed, as appears from the next stanza, to bring food, probably intending the Soma plant, for the preparation of the libation.

2 Prithivyāḥ sanau janghananta panibhiḥ, going heavily on the the precipice of the earth with their feet; literally, with their hands.

4. Or, may the divine Twashtri, the defender of the world, together with the wives (of the gods),³ well-pleased, urge on the chariot; or may Ila, the resplendent Bhaga, Heaven and Earth, the sagacious Pushan, and the As'wins, the two husbands (of Surya) urge on the chariot.

5. Or, may the two divine auspicious and mutually-contemplating Day and Night, the animators of moving (creatures, urging on): and, Earth and Heaven, whilst I praise you both with a new hymn, I offer you food of the standing (corn), although provided with three (sorts of sacrificial viands).⁴

6. We desire, gods, to repeat the praise of you, who are propitiated by praise: may Ahirbudhnya, Aja-ekapàd, Trita, Ribhukshin, Savitri,¹ bestow upon us

¹ The text has only gnabhih, with the wives; but, as accompanying Twashtri, they must be the devapatnih, the wives of the gods, the personified metres of the Veda, according to the Taittiriya; chhandansi vai gnah.

² Sthâtus'cha vayas trivaya upastire: the passage is rather obscure: according to the Scholiast, it means, I, who am able to offer you three sorts of sacrificial food, vegetable substances, animal victims, or the Soma Juice—oshadhipas usomatmakani annâni; spread, upastrinâmi; the food, or cakes and butter, charupurodasadi lakshanani, of that which is stationary, that is vrihyâdeh, or rice and other grains.

food, and may the swift-moving grandson of the waters, (Agni, be gratified by) our praises and our worship.

7. Adorable (gods), I desire that these (my) earnest praises (should please) you: men wishing for food, desirous of vigour, have constructed (hymns) for your celebration; may you hasten like a (swift) chariot-horse to our (pious) rite.

SUKTA X. (XXXII.)

THE deities of the first stanza are Heaven and Earth; of the two next, Indra or Twashtri; Raka, the full moon, of the two following, and Sinivāli, the new moon, of the next two, specified, the Rishi is as before; the metre of the first five stanzas is ṛagati; of the three last, Anushtubh.

HEAVEN and Earth, be the protectors of me your worshipper, anxious to propitiate you by worship and adoration, for of you two is abundant food: desiring riches, I glorify you both, and celebrate you with great (laudation).

2 Let not the secret guile of man, (Indra), harm us by day (or night); leave us not subject to the malevolent, disunite us not from thy friendship; regard us with the favourable thoughts that (spring) from it: we ask this (boon) of thee.

3. Bring to us, with benignant mind, the well-nourished and compactly-limbed milch cow, yielding milk, and con- veying happiness: daily I glorify thee, who art adored by many, quick in (thy) steps, and rapid in (thy) words.¹

4. I invoke, with suitable praise, Raka, who is worthily invoked: may she, who is auspicious of good fortune, hear us, and spontaneously understand (our purpose): may she sew her work with an infallible needle:² may she grant us excellent and opulent descendants.

5. Raka, with those thy kind and gracious intentions, wherewith thou grantest riches to the donor (of oblations), approach us to-day; thou who art auspicious of good fortune, favourably inclined, and bestowing a thousand blessings.

6. Wide-hipped Sinivali,³ who art the sister of the gods, accept the offered oblation, and grant us, goddess, progeny.

7. Offer the oblation to that Sinivali, the protectress of mankind, who has beautiful arms, beautiful fingers, who is the parent of many children.

1 Padyabhîr-as'um vachasa cha vajinam, explained as in the text, but, according to the Scholiast, it is doubtful whether this and the preceding stanza apply to Indra or to Tvashtri.

2 Sivyatu apah suchyachchhidyamanaya, may she sew the work with a needle that is not capable of being cut or broken; with one, of which the stitches will endure, in like manner as clothes and the like wrought with a needle last a long time, according to the commentator.

3 Sinivali is the moon on the first day on which it is visible: she is said to be, devānam swasa, either the sister of the gods, or one who is independent of them; the verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiv. 10; for the epithet, Prithushtuke, which Sayana explains by prithu jaghane, Mahidhara proposes, either, prithu kes'abhare, abundant-haired, or much-praised, or desired by many; stuka, meaning a head of hair, praise or desire.

8. I invoke her who is Gangu,¹ who is Sinivali, who is Raka, who is Saraswati; (I invoke) Indrani for protection, Varunani for welfare.

¹ Said to be a synonyme of Kuhu, the day of conjunction, when the moon rises invisible: it would seem as if these phases of the moon were identifiable with Indrani or Varunani, or with both.

ANUVA'KA IV

SUKTA I. (XXXIII.)

The deity is Ruara, the Rishi, as before; the metre, Trishtubh.

FATHER of the Maruts, may the felicity extend to us : exclude us not from the sight of the sun : (grant that) our valiant (descendants) may overcome (these) foes, and that we may be multiplied, Rudra, by (our) progeny.

2. Nourished by the sanatory vegetables which are bestowed by thee, may I live a hundred winters; extirpate mine enemies, my exceeding sin, and my manifold infirmities.

3. Thou, Rudra, are the chiefest of beings in glory : thou, wielder of the thunderbolt, art the mightiest of the mighty : do thou waft us in safety over (the ocean) of sin : repel all the assaults of iniquity.

4. Let us not provoke thee, Rudra, to wrath by our (imperfect) adoration ; nor, showerer (of benefits), by our unworthy praise, nor by our invocation (of other deities) : invigorate our sons by thy medicinal plants, for I hear that thou art a chief physician amongst physicians.¹

5. May I pacify by my praises that Rudra, who is worshipped with invocations and oblations ; and never may he who is soft-bellied, of a twany hue, and handsome chin ;² who is reverently invoked ; subject us to that malevolent disposition (that purposes our destruction.)³

1 Bhishaktaman twā bhishajam srinomi : we have here an unequivocal assertion of the Æsculapian attributes of Rudra.

2 Ridudara babhruvarna susipra : Yaska interprets the first mridu udara, having a soft belly.—Nir. vi. 4.

3 Ma no asyai riradhan manayai : the Scholiast explains mana by hanmiti manyamana buddhih, the mind meditating, I kill.

6. May the showerer of benefits, the lord of the Maruts, gratify me his suppliant with invigorating food : may I, free from sin, so propitiate Rudra, that I may attain to his felicity, as a man distressed by heat, (finds relief) in the shade.

7. Where, Rudra, is thy joy-dispensing hand, which is the healer and delighter (of all) : showerer (of benefits), who art the dispeller of the sins of the gods,¹ quickly have compassion upon me.

8. I address infinite and earnest praise to the showerer (of benefits), the cherisher (of all), the white-complexioned :² adore the consumer (of sin), with prostrations : we glorify the illustrious name of Rudra.

9. (Firm with strong limbs, assuming many forms, fierce, and twany-coloured, he shines with brilliant golden ornaments : vigour,³ is inseparable from Rudra the supreme ruler and lord of this world.

10. Worthy⁴ (of reverence), thou bearest arrows and a bow ; worthy (of praise), thou wearest an adorable and omniform necklace ;⁵ worthy (of adoration), thou

1 Apabharta rapaso daivyasya, is, according to the commentator, devakritasya papasya apahartta, the taker away of sin committed by a divinity : however, the proper sense of daivya here may be questionable, and it may imply sins against the gods.

2 S'witiche-s'waityam anchate, he who goes to or obtains whiteness ; the white complexion of S'iva, the later representative of Rudra, has, therefore, its origin in the Rich.

3 Asuryam, according to the comment, means bala, strength ; or it might be thought to connect Rudra with the Asuras.

4 Arham is for arha or yogya, fit for, or worthy of ; the term is somewhat remarkable, as especially applicable, although not exclusively so, to a Buddha.

5 The text has nishka, which Sayana here interprets, hara.

preservest all this vast universe : tholden-helm powerful than thou.

11. Glorify the renowned Rudra food. ^{come with} ever youthful, destructive, fierce like a ^{enraged} ^{conform} ^{it} ^{has} beast : Rudra, propitiated by praise, grant end, a des^{he} him who praises (thee), and let thy hosts ^{be} who is our adversary. ^{what}

12. I bow, Rudra, to thee, approaching (our rite), as a boy to his father when pronouncing a blessing upon him : I glorify thee, the giver of much (wealth), the protector of the virtues ; do thou, thus glorified, bestow healing herbs upon me.

13. Maruts, I solicit of you those medicaments which are pure ; those, showerers (of benefits), which give great pleasure ; those which confer felicity ; those which (our) sire, Manu selected ;¹ and those (medica-ments) of Rudra which are the alleviation (of disease), and defence (against danger).

14. May the javelin of Rudra avoid us : may the great displeasure of the radiant deity pass away (from us) : showerer of benefits, turn away thy strong (bow) from the wealthy (offerers of oblations), and bestow happiness upon (our) sons and grandsons.²

1 Yani Manur avrinita pita nah : this alludes, no doubt to the vegetable seeds which Manu, according to the Mahabharata, was directed to take with him into the vessel in which he was preserved at the time of the deluge : the allusion is the more worthy of notice, that this particular incident is not mentioned in the narrative that is given of the event in the S'atapatha Brahmana, see Weber, Indische Studien.

2 The stanza occurs in the Yajush, xvi. 50 ; the end of the first half of the verse reads, durmatir aghayoh, the displeasure of the sinful or the malevolent, instead of durmatir mahi gât, may the great displeasure pass away.

15. omnisc¹ showerer of the world, showerer (of benefits) ne (Rudra), hearer of our invocation, so me his suppl² on this occasion, that thou mayest not be sin, so pr³ slay us; but that, blessed with excellent dlicity, a⁴ jants, we may worthily glorify thee at this sacrific⁵ade.

SUKTA II. (XXXIV.)

THE deities are the Maruts, the Rishi as before, the metre is Jagati, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

THE Maruts, shedders of showers, endowed with resistless might, like formidable lions, reverencing the world) by their energies, resplendent as fires, laden with water,¹ and blowing about the wandering cloud, give vent to its collected rain.

2. Since, golden-breasted Maruts, the (Rudra) begot you of the pure womb of Pris'ni,² therefore they, the devourers (of their enemies), are conspicuous (by their ornaments) as the heavens are by the constellations; and, senders of rain, they are brilliant as the cloud-born (lightning).

3. They sprinkle the wide-extended (land) with water, as (men sprinkle horses (when heated) in battles; and they rush along with swift horses) on the skirts of the sounding (cloud):¹ Maruts, golden-helmed,² and of one mind, agitating (the trees), come with your spotted deer to (receive the sacrificial) food.

¹ Rijishnah, from rijisha, water; or it may mean, Soma that has lost its strength,—rijisha, apagata sàrah somah.

4. The prompt-giving Maruts ever confer upon the (offerer of sacrificial food, as upon a friend, all these (world-supporting) waters: they who have spotted deer for steeds, who are possessed of inexhaustible riches, and who, seated in their chariots (proceed) amongst the moving (clouds, like horses going straight³ (to the goal).

5. Maruts, who are of one mind, and are armed with shining lances, come with the bright, fulluddered kine, by unobstructed paths to partake of the exhilaration of the (Soma) juice, as swans (fly to) their nests.

6. Maruts, who are of one mind, come to the food that is offered at (our) sacrifices, as (you come to the praises of men: nourish the milch cow, the cloud), so that it may be like a mare with a full udder, and render the pious rite productive of abundant food to the worshipper.

7. Bestow upon us, Maruts, that (son) who shall enjoy abundance, and who shall be repeating your appropriate praises day by day, to (induce) your coming: give food to those who praise you; to him who glorifies

1 Nadasya karnais, turayanta asubhih, lit. they hasten with quick ears of the sound: the Scholiast furnishes, quick horses, and explains the ears to signify, the middle parts of that which emits sound, i. e., the cloud.

2 Hiranyasiprah sipra, in other places, the nose, or the lower jaw, is here explained, siras-trana, a head-guard, a helmet.

3 Rijiyaso na is explained, by the Scholiast, by riju akutilam prapnuvantah gachchhanto aswà iva, like horses going by, or arriving at, that which is straight, not crooked.

you in battles : (grant him) liberality, intelligence, and unimpaired, unsurpassable vigour.

8. When the golden-reated munificent Maruts yoke their horses to their chariots on an auspicious (occasion), they shed in their peculiar (directions) abundant food upon him who offers them oblations, as a milch cow (gives milk) to her calf.

9. Maruts, granters of dwellings, protect us from the malignity of the man who cherishes wolf-like enmity against us : encompass him with your burning diseases ; ward off the murderous (weapon) of the devourer.

10. Maruts, your marvellous energy is well known whereby, seizing the udder of heaven, you milked it (of the rain,¹ destroyed) the reviler of your worshipper, and (came), irresistible sons of Rudra, to Trita² for the destruction of his enemies.

11. We invoke you, mighty Maruts, who frequent such sacrifices³ (as this, to be present) [at the offering of the diffusive and desirable (libation : lifting up our ladles, and reciting their praise, we solicit the golden-hued and lofty Maruts for excellent wealth.

12. May they, who, the first celebrators of the ten-

² Trita is said to be a Rishi.

month's rite, accomplished this sacrifice,¹ reanimate us at the rising dawn; for as the dawn with purple rays drives away the night, so (do they scatter the darkness) with great, and pure, and mist-dispelling radiance.

13. They the Rudras, (equipped) with molodious (lutes),² and decorated with purple ornaments, exalt in the dwellings of the waters; and scattering the clouds with rapid vigour, they are endowed with delightful and beautiful forms.

14. Imploring them for ample wealth, and (having recourse to him) for protection, we glorify them with this praise; like the five chief priests whom Trita detained

1 Te das'agwah prathama yajnam uhira, in the first volume we have had das'agwah explained, those who originally, at least, were priests of the race or school [of Angiras, conducting ceremonies that lasted nine or ten days, here we have the office assigned to the Maruts, as the first celebrators of the rite, and who are therefore identified by the Scholiast with the Angirasas,—Angirasas-tad rupa bhutwá--marutah, who were the first, or prior to the Adityas, according to the legend which is here more fully detailed in the commentary, there was a competition for precedence in going to Swarga, between the A'dityas and the Angirasas, and the latter acquired it, by first instituting sacrifices with fire; according to the text, Adityas'chaiva iha-asann-angirasascha te agre agninà agnim ayajanta; the Adityas were also here, and the Angirasas; they (the latter) first worshipped Agni with fire, this is in harmony with the inference drawn from other passages, that Angiras and his disciples were the persons who first established the various forms of worship with fire.

2Te kshonibhih, Sayana explains kshonibhih by, sabda kari-bhir-vinakhyair-vināviseshaiḥ, with sounding instruments, called vinis, a sort of vinas, the vina is a stringed instrument, well known.

for the (performance of the sacrifice and to protect it with their weapons.¹

15. Maruts, may that protection wherewith you convey the worshipper beyond sin, wherewith you rescue the reciter of your praise from the scoffer, be present with us : may your benign disposition tend towards us, like a lowing (cow towards her calf).

1 Trita na yan pancha hotrin abhishtaye avavarttat avaran chakriya avase, the passage is obscure, especially as the legend which is alluded to is not narrated by the Scholiast, in fact, he is disposed to consider it as alluding to the practice of mysticism, or the five hotris, or offerers of the Soma, being the five vital airs whom Trita, as a Yogi, suppressed, and compelled to concentrate themselves in the Chakra. or umbilical region, for the attainment of superhuman faculties: this would leave the term avaran unexplained, although the commentator proposes to render it, homanishpadakan mukhyam, the chief offers of the Soma: his explanation runs thus: pancha-hotrin adhyatmapranapandī panch- vrittyatmanā varttamanam, ata eva homanishpadakan mukhyam, abhishtaye abhilashitasiddhyartham chakripa nabhichakrena avatum sangantum avarttat: swasman nir jigamishun pranam swatmabhimukham bhimukham avartayat, he compelled the vital airs, desirous of issuing from himself, to turn back into the presence of himself and to concentrate with the umbilical chakra, for the entire completion of the rite; those airs being the chief offerers of the oblation abiding in the spirit, as prana, apana, and the rest, constituting the five ministering prāṇas: a less mystical interpretation turns upon the sense of chakriyā, with a spear or lance, rishtyakhyena ayudhena.

SUKTA III. (XXXV.)

The deity is Apamnapat; the Rishi as before; the metre is Trishtubh.

DESIRING food, I put forth this laudatory hymn: may the sounding and swift-moving grandson of the waters¹ bestow abundant food upon me, his worshipper: may he make us of goodly appearance, for verily he is propitiated by praise.

2. Let us address to him the prayer that is conceived in our hearts, and may he fully understand (its purport); for he, the lord, the grandson of the waters, has generated all beings by the greatness of his might.

3. Some waters collect together (from the rain); others, (already collected on earth) unite with them; as rivers, they flow together to propitiate the ocean-fire:² the pure waters are gathered round the pure and brilliant grandsons of the waters.³

4. The young and modest (waters) wait upon the youth, assiduous in bathing him, and he, although unfed

² Urvam nadyah prinanti: urva is explained by Sayana in its usual acceptation of submarine fire,—samudramadhye varittamanam vadavanalam.

with fuel, yet cleansed with clarified butter, shines with bright rays amidst the waters,¹ that abundance (may be) to us.

5. Three divine females² present food to that uninjurable divinity; as if formed in the waters they spread abroad, and he drinks the ambrosia of the first-created (element).³

6. In him is the birth of the horse;⁴ of him is (the origin of) the world:⁵ do thou, grandson of the (waters), protect the pious worshippers from the malevolence of the oppressor those who give no offerings, those who practise untruths, attain not the inconceivable deity, whether abiding in the immature or the perfect waters.

7. He, the grandson of the waters, who abides in his own dwelling; of whom is the readily-milked cow;

¹ Alluding either to the submarine fire or to the lightning amidst the rain-clouds.

² They are according to the Scholiast, Ila, Saraswati, and Bharati, personifications of sacred prayer or praise.

³ Krita iva upa hi prasarsre apsu, they have proceeded or issued, as if made, in the waters, is the explanation of the commentator; but this is all. Sa piyusham dhayati purvasunam, he drinks the nectar, that is the Soma, of those first born; the essence of the waters which were the first created things by Brahma; purvam Brahmanah sakas'ad utpanna nam apam sarabhutam.

⁴ As'wasya atra janima, here or in him is the birth of the horse; alluding, according to the Scholiast, to the production of Uchchais-s'ravas, the horse of Indra, amongst the precious things obtained by the churning of the ocean: but this is Paurāṇik; apparently not Vaidik; and the birth of the horse from water, whether of the ocean or not, is a legend, the origin of which is yet doubtful.

who augments the nectar (of the skies, and thence) eats the sacrificial food; he, gathering strength in the midst of the waters, shines for the sake of conferring wealth upon his worshipper.

8. All other beings are, as it were, branches of him, who, truthful, eternal, and vast, shines amidst the waters with pure and divine (radiance); and the shrubs, with their products, are born (of him).

9. The grandson of the waters has ascended the firmament above (the region) of the tortuously-moving (clouds), arrayed in lightning: the broad and golden-coloured (rivers) spread around, bearing (to all quarters) his exceeding glory.

10. The grandson of the waters is of golden form. of golden aspect, of golden hue, and (shines) seated upon a seat of gold: the givers of gold (at solemn rites) present to him (sacrificial) food.

11. Beautiful is his form (of aggregated lustre, beautiful) is the name of the grandson of the waters; (both) flourish, though hidden¹ (by the clouds) the youthful waters collectively kindle the golden-coloured divinity in the firmament, for water is his food.

12. To him our friend, the first of many² (deities), we offer worship with sacrifices, oblations, and prostration: I decorate the high place (of his presence): I nourish him with fuel: I sustain him with (sacrificial) viands: I glorify him with hymns.

1 Apichyam varddhate meghantarhitam sad-varddhate: increases though concealed by the clouds: is the interpretation of the comment.

2 Bahunam avamaya, the best of many, that is, of the gods as in the Aitareya Brahmana, agnir-vai devanam avamah, that is, according to the Scholiast, devanam madhye prathamah, the first amongst the gods; qualifying the expression as referring to the sacrifice in which oblations are to be presented to Agni, or fire, in the first instance.

13. Vigorous, he has generated himself as an embryo in those (waters): he is their infant; he sucks them; they bedew him (with moisture); the grandson of the waters of untarnished splendour has descended to this (earth) in the form of a different (fire)¹

14. The abundant waters, bearing sustenance to their grandson, flow round him with spontaneous movements; when abiding in his supreme sphere, and shining daily with imperishable (rays).

15. I have come, Agni, to thee, (the giver) of good dwellings, for the sake of offspring I have come with a propitiatory hymn for the sake of the opulent (offerers of oblations): may all the good which the gods defend (be ours); that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA IV. (XXXVI.)

The Rishi and the metre are the same as in the preceding; the deities are various: the first stanza is addressed to Indra, the second to the Maruts, the third to Twashtri, the fourth to Agni, the fifth to Indra and the sixth to Mitra and Varuna; according to the Scholiast, each is associated with a deified month, after the nomenclature of the old kalendar, or Indra with Madhu, the Maruts with Madhava, Twashtri with S'ukra, Agni with S'uchi, Indra with Nabha, and Mitra and Varuna with Nabhasya.

(The libation) that is being presented, Indra, to thee, comprises the (products of the) cow, and the (consecrated) water; and the leaders (of the rite) have expressed it with stones, and strained it through woolen (filters) :¹ Do thou, Indra, who art the first (of the gods,) and rulest (over the world), drink the Soma offered by the Hotri,² and sanctified by the exclamations Swaha and Vashat.

2. Maruts, together worshipped with sacrifices, standing in the car drawn by spotted mares, radiant with lances, and delighted by ornaments, sons of Bharata,³ leaders in the firmament, seated on the sacred grass, drink the Soma presented by the Potri.

3. Do ye, who are devoutly invoked, come to us together, and, seated on the sacrificial grass, enjoy your rest ; and then, Twashtri, who hearest a brilliant cohort, (come) with the gods and their wives, and rejoice, being pleased with the (sacrificial) food.⁴

4. Sage Agni, bring hither the gods, and sacrifice to them : invoker of the gods, propitious to us, sit down in the three altars :⁵ accept the libation of Soma that is offered to thee, from the Agnidhra, and be satisfied with thy portion.

1 The text has only avibhih, with sheep ; the Scholiast amplifies the phrase, aver balamayair das'apavitraih, with purifying filters made of the hair of the sheep.

2 Piba hotrad a somam : in this and the following verses, hotra and the analogous terms, potra, Agnidhra, etc., are explained, the Yaga, or sacrifice of the Hotri, and the rest, those portions of the ceremony which are assigned to the different officiating priests, or the oblations which each is in turn to present.

3 Bharatasya sunavah : the first is said to be a name of Rudra, as the cherisher or sovereign, bhartri, of the world.

4 The verse occurs in the Yajush, xxvi. 24 ; and according to Mahi dhara, is in the first instance, addressed to the Devapatnyah, the wives of the gods, and then to Twashtri along with them : his interpretation is, in another respects, much the same as Sayana's.

5 Those of the Garhapatya, A'havaniya, and Dakshina fires.

5. This (libation), Indra, is the augments of thy bodily (vigour), favourable of old to the resistless strength of (thy) arms: it is effused, Maghavan, for thee; it is brought to thee from the Bráhmāna; do thou drink and be satisfied.

6. Mitra and Varuna, both be gratified with the sacrifice: hear my invocation as the seated Hotri repeats in succession the ancient praises: the (sacrificial) food, encompassed (by the priests), attends the royal pair; drink, both of you, the sweet Soma libation, offered by the Prasastri.

EIGHTH ADHY'AYA.

SUKTA V. (XXXVII.)

The deity of the first four stanzas is Dravinodas; of the fifth, the As'wins; and of the sixth, Agni; the metre and Rishi are the same as before.

BE gratified, Dravinodas, by the sacrificial food presented as the offering of the Hotri; He desires, priests, a full libation; present it to him, and, influenced (by it, he will be your) benefactor drink, Dravinodas, along with the Ritus,² the Soma, the offering of the Hotri.

2. He, whom I formerly invoked, and whom I now invoke, is verily worthy of invocation, for he is renowned as a benefactor: the Soma libation has been brought by the priests; drink, Dravinodas, along with the Ritus, the Soma, the offering of the Potri.

3. May these thy bearers, by whom thou art borne along, be satisfied; lord of the forest, be firm, doing no injury, steadfast of resolve; come, and being gracious, drink, Dravinodas, along with the Ritus, the Soma, the offering of the Neshtri.

4. Whether he have drunk the Soma from the offering of the Hotri; whether he have been exhilarated by the offering of the Potri; whether he have been pleased with the (sacrificial) food presented as the act of the Neshtri; still let Dravinodas quaff the unstrained ambrosial cup, the fourth offered by the priest.¹

5. Yoke to-day, As'wins, your rolling car, conveying (you), the leaders (of the rite); and setting you down before us; mix the oblations with the sweet juice: come, you are affluent with (abundant) food, and drink the Soma.

6. Be pleased, Agni, with the fuel; be pleased with the oblation; be pleased with the sacred prayer that is good for man; be pleased with holy praise, asylum of all: Agni, willing (to accept oblations), render all the great gods desirous (of the same), and with them all, and with the Ritu drink the oblation.

SUKTA VI. (XXXVIII)

The deity is Savitri; the Rishi and metre are the same.

IN truth, the divine Savitri, the bearer (of the world), has perpetually been present for the generation (of mankind), for such is his office:² verily he grants wealth to the pious (worshippers);³ may he, therefore, bestow upon the offerer of the oblation (sufficient) for his well-being.

2. The divine, vast-handed (Savitri), having risen, stretches forth his arms for the delight of all: the

1 Patram Dravinodah pibatu dravinodasah, lit. let Dravinodas drink the cup of Dravinodas; but in the second place the word is explained ritwij, a priest.

2 This seems to be suggested by the etymology of Savitri, as derived from the root Su, to bring forth, prasavāya lokanam; for such is his work,—tadapa tat prasava karma.

3 Devebhyah, to the gods; but the Scholiast interprets it here, stotribhyah, to the praisers.

purifying waters (flow) for (the fulfilment of) his rites, and this circumambient air sports (in the firmament).

3. The moving (Sun) is liberated by his rapid rays : verily he has stopped the traveller from his journey :¹ he restrains the desire of warriors for combat, for night follows (the cessation of) the function of Savitri.

4. She, (Night), enwarps the extended (world) like (a woman) weaving (a garment) : the prudent man lays aside the work he is able (to execute) in the midst (of his labour) : but all spring up (from repose) when the divine, unwearied Sun, who has divided the seasons, again appears.

5. The engendered domestic radiance of Agni spreads through various dwellings, and presides over all (sorts of sacrificial) food : the mother, (Dawn), has assigned to her son, (Agni), the best portion (at sacrifices), which is the manifestation of him imparted by Savitri.²

6. The warrior, eager for victory, who has gone forth (to battle), turns back ; (for) home is the desire of all moving beings : abandoning his half-wrought toil, the labourer returns (home) when the function of the divine Savitri (is suspended).

7. The animals search in dry places for the watery element which has been collected in the firmament by thee : the woods are assigned (by thee) to the birds : no one obstructs these functions of the divine Savitri.

8. The ever-going Varuna grants a cool, accessible, and agreeable place (of rest), to all moving (creatures), on the closing of the eyes (of Savitri);¹ and every bird and every beast repairs to its lair when Savitri has dispersed (all) beings in various directions.

¹ Or literally, the goer, from going.

² The Agnihotra rite is to be performed at dawn, which may be therefore considered as enjoined or instigated by the rising sun.

9. I invite to this place, with reverential salutations for my good, that divine Savitri, whose functions neither Indra, nor Varuna, nor Mitra, nor Aryaman, nor Rudra, nor the enemies (of the gods), impede.

10. May he, who is adored by men, the protector of the wives (of the gods), preserve us; when worshipping him, who is auspicious, the object of meditation, and the all-wise: may we be the beloved of the divine Savitri, that we may (thence be successful in the accumulation of wealth and the acquisition of cattle.

11. May that desirable wealth which is granted to us, Savitri, by thee, proceed from the sky, from the waters, from the earth; and may the happiness (which belongs) to the race of those who eulogise thee, devolve upon me, repeating diligently thy praises.

SUKTA VII. (XXXIX)

The deities are the Aswins; the Rishi and metre as before. DESCEND, As'wins, like falling stones, for the purpose (of destroying our foes); hasten to the presence of the wealth possessing (worshippers), like vultures to a tree like two Brahmanas³ repeating hymns, (be present) at

² Gnaspati, devapatninam patih; or gnáh may mean the metres of the Vedas.

³ Brahmana-iva for Brahmanau; this looks very like a specific denomination, and recognises the existence of the Brahman not the sacrifice, and come like (royal) messengers in the land, welcomed by many people.

2. Moving at dawn like two heroes in a car; like a pair of goats;¹ like two women lovely in form; or like husband and wife; come together, knowing (how sacred) rites (are to be celebrated) amongst men, (to bestow) happiness (on the worshipper).

3. Come to us, the first (before other gods), like a pair of horns, or like two hoofs, travelling with rapid (steps); like a pair of Chakravakas, awaiting day; overthrowers of foes, like warriors in cars, able (to perform all things), come to our presence.

4. Bear us, across (the sea of life), like two vessels, or (over difficult places), like the poles of a car, the axles, the spokes, the felines (of two wheels): Be like two dogs, warding off injury to our persons, and, like two coats of mail, defend us from decay.

5. Irresistible as two winds, rapid as two rivers, and quick of sight, come like two eyes before us; like two hands; like two feet; subservient to the well-being of our bodies, conduct us to (the acquirement) of excellent (wealth).

6. Like two lips uttering sweet words; like two breasts yielding nourishment for our existence; be to us like two noses, preserving our persons, and like two ears for the hearing of agreeable (sounds.)

7. Like two hands, As'wins, be ever investing us with vigour; like heaven and earth, bestow upon us merely as the title of an individual superintending priest, but as implying a religious, or priestly order or caste.

1 In this and many of the succeeding comparisons, the only point of similitude is that of the dual number.

rain ; give sharpness to the praises that are addressed to you, as they whet an axe upon a grindstone.¹

8. The Gritsamadas have composed this prayer, these praises, As'wins, for your exaltation : be propitiated by them, leaders of ceremonies, and come hither : that blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify you at this sacrifice.

SUKTA VIII. (XL.)

The deities are Soma and Pushan ; the Rishi and metre as before. SOMA² and Pushan, you two are the generators of riches, the generators of heaven, the generators of earth ; as soon as born you are the guardians of the whole world : the gods have made you the source of immortality.³

2. (The gods) propitiate these two divinities at the moment of their birth, for they drive away the disagreeable glooms : {with these two, Soma and Pushan, Indra generates the mature (milk) in the immature heifers.⁴

3. Soma and Pushan, showerers (of benefits), direct towards us the seven-wheeled car,⁵ the measure of

1 Kshnotrena iva swadhitim ; asim tejanasana vat tikkshnikurutam ; sharpen like a sword or knife upon a whetstone.

2 By Soma, it would appear that we are to understand both the moon and the Soma plant, as is more particularly intimated in the fourth stanza.

3 Akrinavan amritasya nabhim : hetum, the cause or source, amaranasya, of not dying.

4 That is, the rain in the newly risen clouds,

5 Sayana explains saptachakram, the year, consisting of seven seasons, reckoning the intercalary month as an additional ritu, or season.

the spheres, undistinguishable from the universe, every where existing, (guided) by five reins,¹ and to be harnessed by the mind.

4. One of them, (Pushan) has made his dwelling above in the heaven ; the other, (Soma), upon earth, and in the firmament :² may they both grant us much-desired and much-commended abundant wealth of cattle, the source to us (of enjoyments).

5. One of you, (Soma), has generated all beings ;³ the other proceeds looking upon the universe : Soma and Pushan, protect my (pious) rite : through you, may we overcome all the hosts of our enemies.

6. May Pushan, who is the benefactor of all, be propitious to (this pious) rite ; may Soma, the lord of wealth, grant us affluence : may Aditi, who is without an adversary, protect us, so that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify (you) at this sacrifice.

1 Here again, according to the Scholiast, we have a reference to the solar year, reduced, by the amalgamation of the cold and dewy seasons into one, to five seasons ; as by another text, dwa-dasa vai masah panchartavo hemantas'is'irayoh samasena, the twelve months are verily five seasons by the combination of the cold and dewy seasons.

2 In the first, Soma, as a vegetable, abides on earth ; in the second, or the firmament, he is represented by the moon.

3 In what way is not explained, and another text, quoted from the ninth Mandala,—Somo janita matinam, Soma, the generator of the wise or pious, does not supply the information : possibly allusion is intended to the effects of the libations offered in sacrifice as productive of rain, and thence of nourishment, upon which existence depends.

SUKTA IX. (XLI.)

THE deities are various: Vayu is addressed in the two first stanzas; Indra and Vayu in the third; Mitra and Varuna, the Aswins, Indra, the Viswadevas, Saraswati, and Heaven and Earth, are in succession the divinities of six triplets; the metre is Gayatri, except in the fifth Tricha, in which the two first stanzas are in the Anushtubh metre, and the third in the Brihati; the Rishi is, as before, Gritsamada.

VAYU, whose are a thousand chariots, and the Niyut steeds,¹ come to drink the Soma juice.¹

2. Vayu, of the Niyut steeds, approach: this bright (juice) has been accepted by thee, for thou goest to the dwelling of the offerer of the libation.²

3. Leaders (of rites), Indra and Vayu, lords of the Niyut steeds, come and drink to-day the mixture of milk and of the pure Soma juice.

4. This libation is offered to you, Mitra and Varuna, cherishers of truth; hear, verily, this my present invocation.³

5. Sovereigns, exercising no oppression, sit down in this substantial and elegant hall, (built) with a thousand columns.⁴

6. May these two universal monarchs, fed with clarified butter, sons of Aditi, lords of liberality, show favour to their sincere (worshipper).

¹ The Niyuts are the horses of the car of Vayu,

² This verse occurs in the Yajush, xxvii, 29: S'ukra, which Sayana interprets dipyamâna, bright, resplendent, as an appellative of the Soma juice, Mahidhara renders by graha, a vessel, a ladle; that is, a ladle or cup of Soma juice.

³ This stanza occurs in the Sâma-Veda, II 260; and in the Yajush; but in a very different place from the two preceding, or VII. 9.

⁴ This and the next verse occur in the Sâma-Veda, II. 261, 262.

7. As'wins, in whom there is no untruth ; Rudras go by the (direct road to (the sacrifice at which the libation) is to be drunk by the leaders (of sacred rites,) for which (the offerer may receive the reward of) cows and horses ¹

8. Showerers of wealth, (bring to us) such riches) that the malevolent man, our foe, whether he be far off or nigh,² may not take (it) away.

9. Resolute As'wins, bring to us riches of various sorts,³ and wealth begetting wealth.

10. May Indra dissipate all great and overpowering danger, for he is resolute, and the beholder of all.⁴

11. If Indra provide for our happiness, evil will not come behind us, good will be before us.

12. Let Indra, the beholder of all, the conqueror of foes, send us security from all quarters.

13. Universal gods, come hither ; hear this my invocation ; sit down upon this sacred grass.⁵

1 The Yajush repeats this and the two following verses xx. 80—83.

2 Na yat para nantara : para is rendered by Sayana, durastha, being at a distance, and antara by samipavartti, one being near ; Mahidhara understands them to signify relationship, para meaning asambaddha, unconnected and antara, sambaddha, connected or related : he explains also the verb ādadharsat differently, and makes Indra the object :—"The Indra whom may such a man not overcome, yam-Indram na parabhuṣyat ;" but this seems rather inapplicable.

3 Pisanga sandris'am is explained by Sayana, nanarupam, of many sorts ; Mahidhara, more literally, gives pisanga its ordinary sense of tawny or yellow, and explains the compound, that which is of a yellow colour, or gold.

4 Sama-Veda, I. 200.

5 Yajur-Veda, VII. 34.

14. This sharp, savoury, exhilarating (beverage) is (prepared) for you by the Sunahotras;¹ drink of it at your pleasure.

15. Maruts, of whom Indra is the chief; divinities, of whom Pushan is the benefactor; do you all hear my invocation.

16. Saraswati, best of mothers, best of rivers, best of goddesses,² we are, as it were, of no repute; grant us, mother, distinction.

17. In thee, Saraswati, who art divine, all existences are collected: rejoice, goddess, amongst the Sunahotras, grant us, goddess, progeny.

18. Saraswati, abounding in food, abounding in water, be propitiated by these oblations, which the Gritsamadas offer as acceptable to thee, and precious to the gods.

19. May the two, (Heaven and Earth), who confer good fortune upon the sacrifice, proceed (to the altar);³

1 In this and in verse 17 the author resumes his original character of a member of the family of the Sunahotras: see p 207.

2 Ambitame, naditame, devitame; the superlative of ambika, a mother; nadi, a river; and devi, a goddess.

3 According to the Scholiast, the objects addressed are the two sakatas, carts or barrows, which are employed to bring the fuel, or the Soma plants, and are placed in front of the hall of sacrifice, north and south of an altar erected outside, and which are considered here as types of Heaven and Earth, who, properly speaking, are the deities of the Tricha: the S'akatas are requested, according to Sayana, to proceed to the west part of the northern vedi, or altar — uttaravedeh paschimabhagam pragachchhatam: according to Katyayana, they are also termed Havirdhanas, oblation-containers, and part of the ceremony consists in dragging them into different positions at different periods, accompanied by appropriate texts which are given in the Yajur-Veda, v. 14—21.

for, verily, we implore you both (to come), as well as Agni the bearer of oblations.

20. Heaven and Earth, bear to the gods to-day our heaven-aspiring sacrifice, the means of obtaining Svarga.

21. May the adorable gods, devoid of malice, sit down to-day nigh to you both to drink the Soma juice.

SUKTA X. (XLII.)

The deity is a bird, or Indra in the form of one, the Rishi is Gritsamada; the metre, Trishtubh; according to the Grihya Sutras, the hymn is to be silently repeated on hearing the disagreeable cry of a bird; one ominous of misfortune is probably intended,

CRYING repeatedly, and foretelling what will come to pass, (the Kapinjala)¹ give (due) direction to its voice, as a helmsman (guides) a boat: be ominous, bird, of good fortune, and may no calamity whatever befall thee from any quarter.

2. May no kite, no eagle, kill thee: may no archer, armed with arrows, reach thee: crying repeatedly, in the region of the Pitris,² be ominous of good fortune: proclaimer of good luck, speak to us on this occasion.

3. Bird, who art ominous of good fortune, the proclaimer of good luck, cry from the south of our dwellings: may no thief, no evil-doer, prevail against us;

1 The name does not occur in the text, but the Anukramanika has kapinjarupindro devata: the kapinjala, in ordinary language, is the Francoline partridge.

2 The south; for, as observed in the comment on the next verse, the cry of birds on the south is of good omen.

that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily praise thee at this sacrifice.

SUKTA XI. (XLIII.)

The deity and Rishi as before ; like the preceding, the hymn is also a Tricha, or Triad : the metre of the first and third stanzas is Jagati ; of the third, Atisâkharî or Ashti.

LET the birds in quest of their food, according to the season, proclaim their circumambulations, like the celebrators (of sacred rites) : he utters both notes, as the chaunter of the Sâma recites the Gâyatri and Trish-tubh, and delights (the hearers).

2. Thou singest, Bird, like the Udgâtri chanting the Sâma : thou murmurest like the *Brahmaputra*¹ at sacrifices : like a horse (neighing) when approaching a mare, do thou proclaim (aloud) to us good fortune from every quarter ; proclaim aloud prosperity to us from every direction.

3. When uttering the cry, O Bird, proclaim good fortune : when sitting silently, cherish kind thoughts towards us : when thou criest as thou art flying, let the sound be like that of a lute ;² so that blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily praise thee at this sacrifice.

¹ The same as the Brahmanachchansi, one of the sixteen priests who s'astram s'ansati, recites the mantra that is not to be sung or chaunted.

² Karkarir-yatha : the karkari is said to be a musical instrument,—vidya viseshah.

MANDALA III.

EIGHTH ADHY'AYA (Continued).

ANUVA'KA I.

SUKTA I. (I.)

The hymns of the Third Mandala are attributed to Viswamitra,¹ or individuals of his family; he is the Rishi of the first Sukta, the deity of which is Agni; the metre, Trishtubh.

RENDER me vigorous, Agni, since thou hast made me the bearer of the Soma to offer it in the sacrifice: honouring the gods who are present, I take hold of the stone (to express the juice); I propitiate them; do thou, Agni, protect my person.

¹ Viswamitra is a remarkable person in the traditions of the Hindu religion; according to the historical and Pauranik authorities, he was originally a member of the Kshatriya, or royal and military caste, and himself for some time a monarch; he was descended from Kusa, of the lunar race, and was the ancestor of many royal and saintly personages, who, with himself, were called after their common ancestor, Kusikas, or Kausikas: by the force of his austerities, he compelled Brahmâ to admit him into the Brahmanical order, into which he sought admission, in order to be placed upon a level with Vasishtha, with whom he had quarrelled: his descent, and the circumstances of his dispute with Vasishtha, are told, with some variation, in the Ramayana, ch. LI–LXV. (Schlegel's edition, in the Mahabharata, Vayu Vishnu and Bhagavat, and other Puranas: the details of the Ramayana are the most ample; the texts of the Rig-Veda intimate a general conformity with those of the Puranas as to the family designation of Viswâmitra, and to occasional disagreements with Vasishtha, originating, apparently, in their respective patronage of hostile princes: according, however, to the heroic poems, the Puranas, and various poems and plays, these two [saints were on very amicable terms in their relations to the royal family of Ayodhya, or to king Dasaratha, and his son Rama.

2. We have performed, Agni, a successful sacrifice may my praise magnify (thee) as worshipping thee with fuel and with reverence: (the gods) from heaven desire the adoration of the pious, who are anxious to praise the adorable and mighty (Agni).

3. The gods discovered the graceful Agni (concealed) amidst the waters of the flowing (rivers), for the purpose of (sacred) acts: Agni, who is intelligent, of purified vigour, and friendly; who from his birth bestowed happiness on earth and heaven.

4. The seven great rivers¹ augmented in might the auspicious, pure, and radiant Agni as soon as he was born, in like manner as mares (tend) the new-born foal: the gods cherished the body (of Agni) at his birth.

5. Spreading through the firmament with shining limbs, sanctifying the rite with intelligent and purifying (energies), and clothed with radiance, he bestows upon the worshipper abundant food and great and undiminished prosperity.

6. Agni every where repairs to the undevouring undevoured (waters);² the vast (offspring) of the firmament, not clothed,³ yet not naked, seven eternal, ever youthful rivers, sprung from the same source, received AGNI as their common embryo.

7. 'Aggregated in the womb of the waters,¹ (his rays) spread abroad; and omniform, are here effective for the diffusion of the sweet (juice), like milch kine full uddered: the mighty (Heaven and Earth) are the fitting parents of the graceful AGNI.

8. Son of strength, sustained by all, thou shinest, possessing bright and rapid rays: when the vigorous Agni is magnified by praise, then the showers of sweet rain descend.

9. At his birth he knew the udder of his parent,² and let forth its torrents, and its speech (of thunder): there was no one to detect him, lurking in the deep, with his auspicious associates, (the winds), and the many (waters) of the firmament.

10. He cherishes the embryo of the parent (firmament), and of the generator (of the world): he alone consumes many flourishing (plants): the associated brides (of the Sun, Heaven and Earth), who are kind to man, are both of kin to that pure showerer (of blessings:) do thou Agni, ever preserve them.

11. The great Agni increases on the broad unbounded (firmament), for the waters supply abundant nutriment; and placid, he sleeps in the birth-place of the waters for the service of the sister streams.

12. The invincible Agni, the cherisher of the valiant in battle, the seen of all, shining by his own lustre, the generator (of the world), the embryo of the waters,

1 The antariksha, mid-heaven, or the firmament, the region of vapour.

2 Piturudhar viveda, the parent here is the firmament, and the udder the clouds, or the accumulated stores of rain.

the chief of leaders, the mighty, is he who has begotten the waters for (the benefit of) the offerer of the libation.

13. The auspicious timber has generated the graceful and multiform embryo of the waters and the plants the gods approached him with reverence, and worshipped the adorable and mighty (Agni) as soon as born.

14. Mighty suns, like brilliant lightnings, associate with the self-shining Agni great in his own abode, as if in a (deep) cavern, as they milk forth ambrosia into the boundless and vast ocean.

15. I, the institutor of the rite, worship thee with oblations: desirous of thy favour, I implore thy friendship: grant, along with the gods, protection to him who praises thee; preserve us with thy well-regulated rays.

16. Approaching thee, benevolent Agni, and performing all holy acts that are the cause of opulence, offering oblations with earnestness and in abundance, may we overcome the hostile hosts that are without gods.¹

17. Thou, Agni, art the commendable announcer of the gods, cognizant of all sacred rites; placid, thou abidest amongst mortals and, like a charioteer, thou followest the gods, accomplishing (their wishes)

18. The immortal being has sat down in the dwelling of mortals, accomplishing (their) sacrifices: Agni who is cognizant of all sacred rites, shines with expanded bulk when fed with clarified butter.

19. Come to us with friendly, auspicious, and mighty aids, thou who art great and all-pervading: bestow upon us ample riches, safe from injury, well spoken of, desirable, and renowned.

20. I address to thee, AGNI, who art of old, these eternal as well as recent adorations : these solemn sacrifices are offered to the showerer of benefits, who in every birth is established (amongst men), cognizant of all that exists.

21. The undecaying jâtavedas, who in every birth is established (amongst men), is kindled by the Viswamitrâs: my we, (enjoying) his favour, ever be (held) in the auspicious good will of that adorable (deity).

22. Powerful Agni, (fulfiller) of good works convey, rejoicing, this our sacrifice towards the gods: Invoker of the gods, bestow upon us abundant food: grant us, Agni, great wealth.

23. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, the earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites), such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good-will ever be upon us.¹

SUKTA II.

THE deity is Agni as Vaiswanara ; the Rishi is Viswâmitra; the metre, Jagati.

WE offer to Agni, who is Vais'wanara, the augmenter of water, praise (as bland) as pure clarified butter; and the priests and the worshipper incite by their (pious) rites the invoker of the gods to his two-fold function,¹ as a wheelwright fabricates a car.

2. By his birth he lighted up both heaven and earth; he was the praise-worthy son of his parents; the undecaying Agni, the bearer of oblations, the giver of food, the guest of men, the affluent in radiance.

3. The gods, (endowed) with intelligence, gave birth to Agni in the multiform rite by the exertion of preserving strength: desirous of food, I eulogise the great Agni bright with solar effulgence, and (vigorous) as a horse.

4. Desiring excellent food, inflicting no disgrace, we solicit the boon of adorable (Vais'wanara) from Agni, the benefactor of the Bhrigus, the object of our desires, who is acquainted with past acts, and shines with celestial splendour.

5. Men with strewn holy grass, and uplifted ladles, place before them this solemnity for the sake of obtaining happiness, Agni, bestower of food, the resplendent, the benefactor of all the gods, the remover of sorrow,² the perfecter of the (holy) acts of the sacrificer.

6. Agni, of purifying lustre, invoker of the gods, men desirous of worshipping (thee), having strewn the sacred grass, repair to thy appropriate abode at sacrifices: bestow upon them wealth.

7. He has filled both heaven and earth and the spacious firmament, he whom the performers of (sacred) rites have laid hold of as soon as born: he, the sage,

¹ To the lighting of the Garhapatya and A'havaniya, the domestic and sacrificial fires.

² The text has merely Rudra, which the Scholiast translates duhkhanam drāvakaṁ, the driver away of griefs or pains: otherwise, we might take it as a synonyme of Agni.

the giver of food, is brought like a horse to the sacrificer, for (the sake of) obtaining food.¹

8. Reverence the bearer of oblations (to the gods), him whose sacrifice is acceptable; worship him by whom all that exists is known, who is friendly to our dwellings; for Agni is the conductor of the great sacrifice, the beholder of all, who has been placed in front of the gods.

9. The immortals, desirous (of the presence, sanctified the three radiances² of the great circumambient Agni: one of them they have placed in the world of mortals as the nourisher (of all); the other two have gone to the neighbouring sphere.

10. Human beings, wishing for wealth, give brightness, (by their praises), to the lord of men, the wise (Agni), as they add lustre, by polishing), to an axe; spreading everywhere, he goes alike through high and low places, and has taken an embryo (condition) in these regions.³

11. The showerer (of benefits), generated in (many) receptacles, flourishes, roaring in various (places)⁴ like a lion; Vais'wanara, the resplendent, the immortal, giving precious treasures to the donor (of the oblation).

12. Glorified by his adorers Vais'wanara of old

1 Yajur-Veda, xxxiii. 75.

2 Tisrah samiphah, literally, the three fuels, but here said to intend the three forms or conditions of fire; as, earthly fire, that of the firmament or lightning, and that of heaven, the sun; or three Vaidik forms, two termed A'ghara, and one Anuyaja: the celebration of the two former by enjoyment in the firmament and heaven.

4 As in forests on fire.

ascended to the heaven that is above the firmament, bestowing wealth upon his (present) worshipper, as he did in former times; he travels, ever vigilant, the common path (of the gods.)¹

13. We implore for present riches, the many-moving, tawny-rayed, resplendent Agni, whom mighty, venerable, wise, adorable, and dwelling in the sky, the wind (brought down) and deposited (upon the earth).

14. We implore with prayer the mighty Agni, the giver of food, the unrefusing, (seated on) the front of heaven; the radiant in the sacrifice, him who is to be sought (for by all), the beholder of all, the emblem of heaven, the dweller in light, who is to be awakened at dawn.

15. We solicit wealth of the adorable (Agni) the invoker of the gods, the pure, the single-minded, the munificent, the commendable, the beholder of all, who is many-coloured like a chariot, elegant in form, and always friendly to mankind.

SUKTA III.

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are unchanged.

INTELLIGENT (worshippers), offer to the powerful Vais'wanara precious things at holy rites, that they may go (the way of the good), for the immortal Agni worships the gods; therefore, let no one violate eternal duties.

2. The graceful messenger (of the gods) goes between heaven and earth; sitting (on the altar) and placed before men, he ornaments the spacious chambers (of sacrifice) with his rays, animated by the gods, and affluent in wisdom.

3. The wise worship, with (pious) rites, Agni, the sign of sacrifices,¹ the accomplishment of the solemnity, in whom the reciters of (his) praises have accumulated (their) acts (of devotion), and from whom the worshipper hopes for happiness.

4. The parent of sacrifices, the invigorator of the wise, the end (of the wise, the end (of the rite), the instruction of the priests, Agni, who has pervaded heaven and earth in many forms, the friend of man, wise, (and endowed) with splendours, is glorified (by the worshipper).

5. The gods have placed in this world the delightful Agni in a delightful chariot, the tawny-hued Vais'wanara, the sitter in the waters, the omniscient, the all-pervading, the endowed with energies, the cherisher, the illustrious.

6. Perfecting in performance the multiform sacrifice of the worshipper, along with the gods to whom solemnities have been addressed, and together with the priests, Agni, the charioteer, the swift-moving, the humble-minded, the destroyer of foes, passes along between (heaven and earth).

7. Agni, praise (the gods that we may enjoy) good offspring and long life : propitiate them by libations ; bestow upon us plentiful crops : ever vigilant, grant food to the respectable (institutor of this ceremony), for thou art the desired of the gods, the object of the pious acts of the devout.

¹ Ketum yajnanam : ketu is, properly, a banner ; but it is repeatedly used in the Veda in the sense of prajnapaka, a sign, a signal, that which makes any thing known.

8. The leaders (of holy rites) praise with prostration, for (the sake of) increase, the mighty lord of people, the guest (of men), the regulator eternally of acts, the desired of the priests, the exposition of sacrifices, Jatavedas, endowed with (divine) energies.

9. The resplendent and aborable Agni, riding in an auspicious chariot, has comprehended the whole earth by his vigour: let us glorify with fit praises the acts of that cherisher of multitudes in his own abode.

10. Vais'wanara, I celebrate thy energies, whereby, O sage, thou hast become omniscient: as soon as born, Agni, thou hast occupied the realms (of space), and heaven and earth, and hast comprehended all these with thyself.

11. From acts that are acceptable to Vais'wanara comes great (wealth); for he, the sage (Agni) alone, bestows (the reward) of zeal in (the performance of) his worship: adoring both his prolific friends, heaven and earth,¹ Agni was horn.

SUKTA IV.

The deities are the Apris the Rishi and metre as before.

REPEATEDLY kindled, (Agni),² wake up favourably disposed; (endowed) with reiterated lustre, entertain the kind purpose of (granting us) wealth: bring, divine Agni, the gods to the sacrifice: do thou, the friend (of the gods), minister, well-affected, to (thy) friends.

² Samit-samit, takes the place of the Samiddha, Susamiddha, as an appellative of Agni in preceding Suktas.

2. Tanunapat, whom the deities, Mitra, Varuna, and Agni, worship daily thrice a day, render this our sacred rain-engendering sacrifice productive of water.

3. May the all-approved praise reach the invoker of the gods: may Ila¹ first proceed to worship and to praise with prostrations the showerer of benefits) in his presence: may the adorable (Agni), instigated (by us), worship the gods.

4. An upward path has been prepared for you both² in the sacrifice: the blazing oblations soar aloft: the invoker of the gods has sat down in the centre of the radiant (hall): let us strew the sacred grass for the seats of the gods.

5. The gods who gratify the universe with rain are present at the seven offerings (of the ministering priests), when solicited with (sincerity of) mind: may the many deities who are engendered in sensible shapes at sacrifices come to this our rite.³

6. May the adored Day and Night, combined or separate, be manifest in bodily form, so that Mitra, Varuna, Indra, or (the latter), attended by the Maruts, may rejoice us by their glories.

7. I propitiate the two chief divine invokers of the gods: the seven offerers of (sacrificial) food, expectant of water, gratify (Agni) with oblations; the illustrious observers of sacred rites have saluted him in every ceremony as (identifiable), verily, with water.¹

8. May Bharatis; associated with the Bharatis; Ila with the gods and men; and Agni; and Saraswati with the Saraswatas;² may be three goddesses sit down upon the sacred grass (strewn) before them.

9. Divine Twashti, being well pleased, give issue to our procreative vigour, whence (a son), manly, devout vigorous, wielder of the (Soma-bruising) stone, and reverencing the gods may be born.

10. Vansapati, bring the gods nigh: may Agni, the immolator, prepare the victim:³ let him who is truth officiate as the ministering priest, for, verily, he knows the birth of the gods.

11. Agni kindled with flame, come to our presence in the same chariot with Indra and with the swift-moving gods: may Aditi, the mother of excellent sons,

1 Ritam it ta áhuh is explained by the Scholiast, Agnim eva ritabhutam áhuh, they have called Agni, verily, rita: rita is usually rendered water, but it may mean truth; the commentator leaves it unexplained, having, in the preceding phrase, ritam rendered it by udakam, desirous or expectant of water.

2 The Scholiast interprets bharatibhih, with the connections of Bharata, or the Sun, bharatasya suryasya sambandhinibhih, perhaps intending the solar rays: Bharati he explains by Vach, speech; Ila he explains by Bhumi, the earth; and Saraswati by Madhyamika vak; the Saraswatas are the Madhyamasthanas, the middle regions, or the firmament: Agni, whose name is rather unconnectedly inserted, is thus identified through their several personifications, as goddesses, with heaven, mid-heaven and earth, or with speech or sound, in the three regions; see p. 73, note (c).

3 Agnir havih samita sudayati is the same phrase as occurred in Sukta iii. of the Second Mandala, v. 10: see p. 219.

sit down on the sacred grass, and may the immortal gods be satisfied with the reverentially-offered oblation.¹

SUKTA V

The deity is Agni; the Rishi and metre as before.

THE sagacious Agni, cognizant of the dawn, is awakened to (follow) the paths of the sages: the luminous Vanhi, kindled by the devout, has thrown open the gates of darkness.

2. The adorable Agni is magnified by the hymns, the prayers, the praises, of (his) worshippers: emulating the many glories of the sun, the messenger (of the gods) shines forth at the glimmering of the dawn.

3. Agni, the embryo of the waters, the friend (of the pious), accomplishing (all desires) with truth, has been placed (by the gods) amongst men, the descendants of Manu: desirable and adorable, he has taken his station on high,² where the wise Agni is to receive the oblations of the devout.

4. Agni, when kindled, is Mitra; and as Mitra, is the invoker(of the gods): Varuna is Játavedas: Mitra is the ministering priest: Damunas is the 1 Swaha deva amrita madayantam: Swaha is explained Swahakarena yuktah, joined with or addressed by the exclamation, Swaha This Sukta is more complicated and obscure than any of the preceding addressed to the Apris, except Sukta iii. of the Second Mandala, to which it bears the nearest analogy: they are both perhaps of somewhat later date than the others.

2 Sanwasthat; sanu, uchchhritam; that is, uttaravedyakhyam; the place called the north altar.

agitator (Vayu): Mitra (is the associate) of rivers and mountains.¹

5. The graceful (Agni) protects the primary station of the moving earth: mighty, he protects the path of the sun: he protects the seven-headed (troop of the Maruts in the centre (between heaven and earth): he protects the exhilarating (oblations) of the gods.

6. The mighty, divine Agni, knowing all (things) that are to be known, made the commendable and beautiful water, the glossy skin,² the station of the diffused slumbering (Agni), and, ever vigilant, preserves it.

7. Agni has taken his station in an asylum, brilliant, much-lauded, and as desirous (of receiving him) as he is (to repair to it): radiant, pure, vast, and purifying, he repeatedly renovates his parents, (Heaven and Earth.)

8. As soon as generated he is born aloft by the plants, which grow flourishing by moisture, as the beautifying waters descend: may he, in the bosom of his parents, protect us.

9. Praised and (nourished) by fuel, the mighty Agni, stationed on the (altar the) navel of the Earth, in the form of the firmament, has shone (brightly): may the friendly and adorable Agni who respire in the mid-heaven,³ the messenger (of the gods), bring them to the sacrifice.

¹ The purport of the stanza is the identity of Agni with Mitra, the sun, and of both with Varuna and Vayu.

² Covering as it were by extinguishing the flame of fire.

³ Matariswan, the Scholiast explains matari, antarikshe; swasiti, suryarupena cheshtate, who breathes in mid-heaven, or acts in the form of the sun; or matari may imply aranyam, in a forest, he who abides in the woods: the explanations are those of Yaska—Nir, vii. 26; the more usual sense of Mataris'wan is the wind, as in the next stanza.

10. The mighty Agni, being the best of the heavenly luminaries, sustained the heaven with radiance, when the wind, the bearer of oblations, (till then concealed) came from the Bhrigus.¹

11. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (various) rites), such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good will ever be upon us.²

SUKTA VI.

The deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

DEVOUT ministrants, who are to be inspired by prayer, bring forth (the ladle) destined for the worship of the gods, which is to be conveyed to the south (of the fire-altar), and which, charged with (sacrificial) food, pointed to the east, containing the oblation, and, filled with liquefied butter, proceeds to Agni.

2. Agni, as soon as born, occupy both heaven and earth; for thou, to whom sacrifice is to be offered, exceedest in magnitude the firmament and the earth: may thy seven-tongued fires be glorified.

3. The firmament and the earth and the adorable (gods) propitiate thee their invoker, for the (completion of the) sacrifice, whenever the descendants of Manu,³ pious, and bearing oblations, glorify thy radiant flame.

1 Yadi Bhrigubhyah guha santam: the commentator interprets Bhrigubhyah by adityasya ras'mibhyah, from the rays of the sun.

2 The burden of Sukta xlv.

3 Vis'ah manushih-manoh sambandhinyah prajah: people connected with Manu, is the explanation of the Scholiast.

4. The great and adorable Agni is firm seated on his spacious throne between heaven and earth; and the powerful fellow-brides¹ (of the sun), the imperishable, uninjurable (heaven and earth) are the two milk-yielding cows of the wide-extending (Agni).

5. Great, Agni, are the deeds of thee the mighty one: thou hast spread abroad by thy power the heaven and earth; thou hast been the messenger (of the gods); as soon as begotten thou hast become the leader of men.

6. Harness with traces, to thy car, thy long-maned, ruddy (steeds, to come) to the sacrifice: bring hither, divine Jatavedas, all the gods, and make them propitious to the oblation.

7. When, Agni, thou abidest in the woods, consuming the waters at thy pleasure, then thy rays illuminate the heavens, and thou shinest like many former radiant dawns: the gods themselves commend (the brilliancy) of their praise-meriting invoker.

8. The deities who sport in the spacious (firmament); those who are in the luminous sphere of heaven; the adorable U'mas,² who come when worthily invoked; the horses, Agni, that are fit for thy car.

9. With all these in one chariot, Agni, or in many (chariots) come to our presence, for thy horses are able: bring the three and thirty divinities with their wives, for the sake of (the sacrificial) food, and exhilarate them (all with the Soma libation).

¹ Sapatni, the two brides of one; that is, according to the commentator, of the sun.

² Umah: Umasanjnakah pitarah santi, the Umas are the pitr is called Uma: the term is uncommon.

10. He is the invoker (of the gods), whom the spacious heaven and earth glorify, for the sake of increase, at repeated sacrifices: charged with water, they await like holy rites, propitious to the real presence of him who is born of truth.

11. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, the earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites); such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good-will ever be upon us.

1 Patnivatas-trinsatam trinscha devan; the first is, literally, having wives, but is sometimes considered as a proper name.

2 Prachi adhwareva tasthatuh sumeke ritavari rita-jatasya satye: the passage is obscure, and the commentator has not done much to render it more explicit.

THIRD ASHTAKA.

FIRST ADHYA'YA.

MANDALA III. (Continued).

SUKTA VII. (VII).

THE deity is Agni; the Rishi is Vis'wamitra; the metre is Trishtubh.

THE (rays) of the blackbacked, all-sustaining (Agni)¹ have arisen, and pervaded the parents (earth and heaven) and the flowing rivers;² the surrounding parents co-operate with him, and bestow long life for the sake of assiduous worship.

2. The sky-traversing seeds of the showerer (of benefits) are the milch kine³ (of Agni); as he attains the divine (rivers), bearers of sweet (water.) One sacred sound glorifies thee (Agni), who art desirous of repose, pacifying (thy flames) in the abode of the water (the firmament).

1 Sitiprishthasya dhaseh; Agni is understood, so is rasmaya, rays, according to Sayana: he explains dhasi by sarvasya dharayitri.

2 Sapta vanih the commentator explains by sarpanaswabhava nadih; otherwise sapta might be thought to mean seven, its more usual acceptation.

3 Dhenavah; but Sayana considers it as an adjective equivalent to prinayitryah, propitiators, pleasers.

3. Their lord has mounted on his well-trained mares; the sagacious selector of treasures, the black-backed, many-limbed (Agni) has granted thee a place of rest for the cherishing of (their) rapid speed.¹

4. The flowing (rivers) invigorated him, bear along the great son of Twashtri, the undecaying upholder (of the world), radiant with various forms in the vicinity (of the firmament): Agni is associated with heaven and earth, as a (husband with) only one wife.²

5. Men comprehend the service of the uninjurable showerer (of benefits), and exult in the commands of the mighty (Agni): their frequent and earnest hymns of praise, bright and radiant, are illuminating heaven.

6. Verily (men) bring great delight to Agni by glorifying aloud the mighty parents (heaven and earth) when the shedder of rain approximates his own radiance to the worshipper, (wherewith) to invest the night.

7. Seven sages with five ministering priests³ attend station that is prepared for the rapid (Agni): the undecaying divine (sages), with their faces to the east, sprinkling (the libations), rejoice as they celebrate the worship of the gods.

8. I propitiate the two first divine offerers of sacrifice; the seven (priests) rejoice with the libation; the illustrious celebrators of holy worship, reciting (his) praises, have called Agni the true (object) of every rite.

1 Atasasya dhaseh is explained satatagamanasya posnanartham, for the sake of cherishing of the perpetual going.

2 We have in the text nothing more than Ekâm iva, like one, the pronoun being feminine. The commentator adds, yatha pumân ekâm pravrisati, as a man co-habits with one woman.

3 Adwaryubhih panchabhih sapta viprah; this excludes, according to the Scholiast, the Udgatri and his class.

9. Divine invoker of the gods, the vast and wide-spreading rays shed (moisture) for thee, the mighty, the victorious, the wonderful, the showerer (of benefits): do thou who art all-knowing, joy-bestowing, bring hither the great gods, and heaven and earth.

10. Ever-moving (Agni), may the morning rise for us, abounding with oblation, with pious prayers, and with auspicious signs, and conferring wealth; and oh thou, with the might of thy (diffusive flame), consume all sin on behalf of thy respectable (worshipper.)

11. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites), such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons, and may thy good-will ever be productive of benefits to us.¹

¹ This verse is the burden of several Suktas in the preceding Ashtaka. Sayana rather varies his interpretation in some respects upon this recurrence of the verse: thus he translates in the former, Ilā, by Bhumi, earth: here he calls her a female divinity in the form of a cow, Gorupam devatam, and he connects vijaya with anumati, good will, explaining it abandhya, may it be not barren, productive.

SUKTA VIII. (VIII).

The deity is considered to be the Yupa, or sacrificial post, diversified as single or as many : the Viswadevas are the deities of the eighth stanza ; the Rishi is Vis'wamitra ; the metre of the third and seventh verses is Anushtubh ; of the rest, Trishtubh.

Vanaspati,¹ the devout anoint thee with sacred butter at the sacrifice ; and whether thou standest erect, or thine abode be on the lap of this thy mother (earth), grant us riches.

2. Standing on the east of the kindled (fire), dispensing food (as the source) of undecaying (health) and excellent progeny, keeping off our enemy at a distance, stand up for great auspiciousness.

3. Be exalted, Vanaspati, upon this sacred spot of earth, being measured with careful measurement, and bestow food upon the offerer of the sacrifice.

4. Well clad and hung with wreaths comes the youthful (pillar) : most excellent it is as soon as generated : steadfast and wise venerators of the gods meditating piously in their minds, raise it up.

5. Born (in the forest), and beautiful in the sacrifice celebrated by men, it is (again) engendered for the sanctification of the days (of sacred rites) : steadfast, active, and intelligent (priests) consecrate it with intelligence, and the devout worshipper recites its praise.

6. May those (posts) which devout men have cut down, or which, Vanaspati, the axe has trimmed, may they standing resplendent with all their parts (entire) bestow upon us wealth with progeny.

1. Vanaspati, lit forest lord, is here said to mean the post of wood to which the victim is tied : the verse is quoted in the Aitareya Brahmana, 112, and is similarly expounded in the Nirukta, 8, 18.

7. May those posts which have been cut down upon the earth, and which have been fabricated by the priests, those which are the accomplisners of the sacrifice, convey our acceptable (offering) to the gods.

8. May the leaders of the rite, the divine A'dityas, Rudras, Vasus, Heaven and Earth, the Earth, the firmament, well pleased, protect our sacrifice: let them arise aloft the standard of the ceremony.

9. Arrayed in bright (garments), entire (in their parts), these pillars raging in rows like swans, have come to us erected by pious sages on the east (of the fire); they proceed resplendent on the path of the gods.

10. Entire in all parts and girded with rings, they appear upon the earth like the horns of horned cattle; hearing (their praises) by the priests: may they protect us in battles.

11. Vanaspati mount up with a hundred branches, that we may mount with a thousand, thou whom the sharpened hatchet has brought for great auspiciousness.

SUKTA IX. (IX.)

THE deity is Agni; the Rishi Vis'wámitra; the metre Brihati except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

WE thy mortal friends have recourse for our protection to thee, the divine, the grandson of the waters, the auspicious, the resplendent, the accessible, the sinless.

2. Desirous as thou art of the forests since thou hast repaired to the maternal waters, Agni, thy tarrying so far away is not to be endured ; (in a moment) thou art here with us.¹

3. Thou wishest exceedingly to convey satisfaction (to thy worshipper) and art thereto well-disposed ; of those in whose friendship thou art cherished, some precede whilst others sit around.²

4. The benignant and long-lived deities have discovered thee, Agni, when required to go against their constant and assembled foes, hidden in the waters like a lion (in a cave

5. Matariswan therefore brought for the gods from afar, Agni, hiding of himself, and generated by attrition, as a father brings back) a fugitive (son).³

6. Bearer of oblations, men apprehend thee (thus concealed for the service of the gods, and that thou youngest (of the deities) and friendly to mankind, mayst recompense by thy acts all their pious rites.

7. Auspicious is thy worship for it prospers the ignorant (worshipper), wherefore animals⁴ reverence thee Agni, kindled in the beginning of the night.

8. Offer oblations to the object of holy sacrifice, the brilliant purifier, who is dormant (in fuel) : worship

1 That is, according to the Scholiast, although not yet kindled, yet as soon as the attrition of the touchwood takes place Agni appears.

2 According to Sayana allusion is made to the sixteen priests, of whom the Adhwaryu and eleven others take an active part in ceremonial, whilst the Udgatri and the other three are sitting by, engaged in the recital of the prayers and hymns.

3 The text has only sasrivānsam iva, like one going ; the Scholiast supplies the father and son ; or it might be thought to indicate master and slave.

4 Pasavah : according to the comment, bipeds as well as quadrupeds.

quietly the pervader (of the rite), the messenger (of the gods), the rapid, the ancient deity who is entitled to laudation.

9. Three thousand three hundred and thirty-nine divinities have worshipped Agni:¹ they may sprinkled him with melted butter; they have spread for him the sacred grass; and have seated him upon it as their ministrant priest.

SUKTA X. (X.)

THE deity and Rishi as before: the metre is Ushnih.

THEE, the king of men; Agni, the divine: prudent mortals kindle thee at the sacrifice.

2. They praise thee as the priest, the invoker (of the gods) at sacrifices: shine fourth the protector of the pious rite in thine own abode.

3. He verily who presents oblations to thee, the knower of all things, he acquires (Agni) excellent progeny: he prospers.

¹ Sayana quotes the Brihad Aranyaka for this enumeration, Adhyaye v. Brahmana, p. 642, but that work gives apparently 3333, or according to the gloss of Ananda giri 3336, but in the following verses the number is as usual specified as thirty-three; the eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, and twelve Adityas, with Indra and Prajapati: the verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiii. 7, where Mahidhara explains part of the increase by multiplying the thirty-three by ten for the ganas of the deities, making not very correctly 333; and repeating this number twice, once for their multiplication by Brahmá Vishnu, and Rupra, and again by their Saktis; navaiva ankas-trivridha syur-devanam dasa-air-ganaih, te Brahma Vishnu Rudranam saktinam varna-bhedatah iti te cha 333, 333, 333, etavanto bhavanti, the explanation is not very clear.

4. May (Agni), the banner of sacrifices, offering oblations on the part of the worshipper through the ministry of) the seven officiating priests, come hither with the gods.

5. Offer to the ministering Agni as if to the Creator (of the world), the great praise recited of old, for the sake of animating the energies of the pious (worshippers) ¹

6. May our hymns exalt Agni, so that he may be born more worthy of praise, and may become manifest for (the purpose of bestowing) abundant food and riches.

7. Agni, thou art to be especially worshipped at the sacrifice: worship the gods (on behalf of) the devout (worshipper): thou shinest the invoker (of the gods), the exhilarator (of the pious) overcoming thy foes.²

8. Do thou, our purifier, light up for us a brilliant progeny: be ever nigh to those who praise thee for their well being.

9. The wise, intelligent, and vigilant (worshippers) kindle thee, such as thou (hast been described), the bearer of oblations, the immortal, generated by strength.³

SUKTA XI. (XI)

THE deity and Rishi as before; the metre is Gāyatri.

AGNI, the invoker of the gods, the minister (of the gods), the supervisor of the sacrifice, understands the solemn rite in its due course.

² Sama-Veda, 1, 100.

³ Sahovridham, produced by the strength required for attrition.

2. That Agni, who is the bearer of oblations, the immortal, the desirer (of offerings), the messenger (of the gods), and is the receiver of sacrificial viands, is associated with understanding.¹

3. Agni, the ancient banner of sacrifice, knows (all things) through understanding: his radiance traverses (the darkness).²

4. The gods have made Agni, who is the son of strength, the eternally-renowned, the knower of all that is born, the bearer (of oblations).

5. Agni, the preceder of human beings,³ (ever) alert, the vehicle of their offerings, is ever new, is unsusceptible of harm.

6. Agni, the most liberal contributor of food, is able to resist all assailants unharmed, the nourisher of the gods.

7. From Agni of purifying radiance the mortal presenter (of offerings) obtains by his conveyance (of them to the gods) abundant viands and a dwelling.⁴

8. May we, endowed with intelligence, obtain all

1 Dhiya samrinvati, that is according to Sayana, Agni is fully aware of the objects of the ceremony, and a wish is implied that he may communicate similar knowledge to its performers, tan tadrik prajnanvitan karotu: Mahidhara understands it some what differently in form, though the same in substance, as, through knowledge Agni associates with the gods, for the purpose of conveying the oblations to them. Yajush, xxii. 16.

2 Artham hyasya tarani, his meaning or object is crossing, or that which crosses; his light or radiance is the end or object of Agni, which passes over or through, darkness understood.

3 Visam Manushinam, according to Sāyana, means, men the descendants of Manu, Manor jatanam.

4 This and the two preceding occur in the Sama Veda, 11. 006—008 good things by our praises, of Agni, to whom all is known.

9. May we obtain, Agni, all precious things (as booty) in battles, since the gods are concentrated in thee.

SUKTA XII. (XII.)

THE deities are Indra and Agni ; the Rishi and metre as before. INDRA and Agni come to this acceptable libation, (brought by our praises¹ from heaven, and induced by (our) devotion to drink of it.

2. Indra and Agni, the conscious sacrifice associated with the worshipper² proceeds to you : (summoned) by this (invocation), drink the libation.

1 Girbhir nabho varenyam ; sambhajaniyam somam prati asmadiyabhih stutirupabhir, vagbhir, ahutau : nabho, nabhasah swargasthanad ayatam : called by our praises, come you two from the place of Swarga to this enjoyable Soma, is Sayana's explanation : the verse occurs both in the Sama-Veda, 11. 19. and Yajur-Veda, vii. 31 : Mahidhara tries to give a different sense to Nabha, which he identifies with Aditya, and conjectures a comparison understood, as, come to the Soma which is like the desirable sun or it may mean, he says, those dwelling in heaven : Nabhah sthâh the gods : Come to the Soma that is sought for by the gods.

2 Jarituh sachâ yajno jigati chetanah ; the expression is rather obscure : yajna and chetana are both applied by Sayana to the Soma, as the material of the sacrifice, yajna-sadhanam, and the animator or giver of consciousness to the organs of perception ; indriyanam chetayita, and the co-operator with the worshipper in obtaining heaven or other benefits--jarituh sachâ swargadiphalapraptau sahayo bhutah : this and the next stanza occur in the Sama, 11. 20, 21 : Professor Benfey has understood it differently.

3. Urged by the energy of the sacrifice, I have recourse to Indra and Agni, the protectors of the pious may they be satiated with the Soma here presented.

4. I invoke Indra and Agni, the discomfitters of foes, the destroyers of Vritra, the victorious, the invincible, the bestowers of most abundant food.¹

5. The reciters of prayers, the repeaters of praise, who are skilled in sacred song, worship you both : I have recourse to Indra and Agni for food.²

6. Indra and Agni, with one united effort you overthrew ninety cities ruled over by (your) foes.³

7. Indra and Agni, the pious ministers, are present at our holy rite, according to the ways of worship.

8. Indra and Agni, in you, vigour and food are abiding together, and therefore in you is deposited the dispensing of water.⁴

9. Indra and Agni, illuminators of heaven, be ever graced (with victory) in battles, for such thy prowess proclaims.⁵

ANUVA'KA II.

SUKTA I. (XIII.)

The deity is Agni ; the Rishi is Rishabha, a son of Viswamitra ;
the metre Anushtubh.

(PRIESTS) utter devout (praises) to this your divine Agni, that so glorified he may come to us with the gods and sit down on the sacrificial grass.

2. The observer of truth, of whom (are) heaven and earth, and whose vigour the protecting (deities) assist : him, the offerers of oblations adore, and those desirous of riches (have recourse) to him for protection.

3. He, the sage, is the director of those (who sacrifice), he is (the regulator) of sacrifices : worship him your (benefactor), the donor, who is the bestower of wealth.

4. May that Agni bestow upon us prosperous dwellings for our maintenance, so that from him infinite wealth, whether it may be in heaven or from earth, or in the waters (may come to us.)

5. The devout kindle (the fire) with his wealth-obtaining rites, (to worship) the radiant, unpreceded Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the protector of men.

6. Perfect our prayer, Invoker of the gods, as well as our hymns : Agni, who, increasest with the winds and art the giver of thousands, augment our felicity.

7. Grant us indeed, Agni, wealth (that may be counted) by thousands, and comprising offspring, nourishment, brilliant treasure,¹ and vigour, and be infinite and inexhaustible.

¹ Pushtimat, dyumat : the first, according to the comment implies cattle from whose milk and the like, support is derived ; the second intends the precious metal and jewels.

SUKTA II. (XIV.)

THE deity and Rishi as before ; the metre is Trishtubh.

THE invoker (of the gods), the exhilarator (of his worshippers), the true, the offerer of sacrifice, the most wise, the creator, is present at our sacred rites. Agni, the son of strength, whose chariot is the lightning, whose hair is flame, manifests his glory on the earth.

2. I utter to thee the words of adoration, be pleased by them, observer of truth ; endowed with strength, (they are addressed) to thee who art the expounder (of sacred rites) : wise (as thou art) bring (hither) the wise : object of sacrifice, sit down in the midst upon the sacred grass for our protection.

3. May the food-bestowing day and night hasten to thee whilst thou, Agni, meetest them on the paths of the wind : since (the priests) ever worship thee preceding (them)¹ with oblations, whilst they (united) like the pole (and the yoke of a waggon), abide successively in our dwelling.

4. Vigorous Agni, to thee Mitra and Varuna and all the Maruts, offer praise ; since, son of strength, thou standest a sun,² shedding (thy) rays with lustre on mankind.

5. With uplifted hands,³ approaching thee with re-

1 Purvyam—the scholiast explains sayam prātaḥ kalayoh purvyam, that is, Agni is worshipped at dawn before the day, and in the evening before the night.

2 Tishtah surya : the latter is variously explained by the scholiast as, su, good, and arya, master ; or, as, urger, impeller, preraka, or vigour, energy, viryā.

3 Yajur-Veda, xviii. 75 : Mahidhara explains Uttanahastah, with open hands, not niggardly.

verence, we present to thee to-day our oblation :¹ do thou, who art wise, worship the gods with most devout mind and with unwearied praise.

6. From thee, verily, son of strength, many and various benefactions and various kinds of food devolve upon the devout (worshipper) : do thou grant us, Agni, infinite wealth, and (a son) observant of truth, with speech devoid of guile.

7. Divine (Agni) mighty and omniscient, these (are the offerings) which we mortals present to thee in the sacrifice : do thou be cognizant of every respectable worshipper,² and partake, immortal, of all (his offerings) on this occasion.

SUKTA III. (XV.)

The deity is Agni ; the Rishi is Utkila of the Kata gotra, or family ; the metre is Trishtubh.

RADIANT with great glory, repel the hostile Rākshasas and Pis'āchas :³ may I be in (the enjoyment) of the

1 Kamam : both commentators consider this synonymous here with oblation, purodāsādhavis, as that which is desirable to the gods, kamaniyam

2 Viswasya surathasya bodhi : the scholiast explains the verb, know that I am his protector, gopayita bhavami-iti budhyaswa : Suratha is literally one who has a good chariot, and is so rendered in the commentary sobhauayānopetasya.

3 Dwishe rakshaso amivah ; Sayana explains amiva either as an epithet of the Rakshasas, free from sickness, vigorous strong ; or it may be a synonyme of Pisachika, as hovering about the sacrifice in order to interrupt it ; Mahidhara, Yajur-Veda, ii. 49 gives it the sense of vyadhi, sickness, keep off diseases, vyadhans cha bādhaswa.

favour of the great (Agni), the giver of prosperity, and in the service of (him who is) easily invoked.

2. Consider thyself our protector at the breaking of the dawn to-day and when the sun has risen :¹ Agni, who art engendered with (embodied) form,² be pleased with my constant praise, as a father (is pleased with) his son.³

3. Showerer (of benefits), beholder of men, radiant amidst darkness, shine, Agni, with abundant (rays) in due order : granter of dwellings, conduct us (to good), keep off all ill, and youngest (of all the gods), gratify our desires for wealth.

4. Agni, who art irresistible and the showerer (of benefits); consume victorious all the cities (of the foe,) and (all their) precious things : (do thou), the duly worshipped, the knower of all that is born, (be for us) the conductor of the first great preserving sacrifice.⁴

5. Destroyer (of the world), do thou who art endowed with intelligence and radiant, celebrate many faultless sacred rites in honour of the gods, and restraining (thy impatience, convey to them like a waggon our (sacrificial) food : illumine (with thy rays) the beautiful heaven and earth.

6. Be propitious, showerer (of benefits); grant abundant food, Agni ; (make) heaven and earth yield us

1 Some, says the Scholiast, perform the worship of fire before sun-rise, some after the sun has risen.

2 Tanwā sujatah, well-born with a body, that is, with flames ; or it may mean self-born, swayambhu, according to the comment.

milk : divine (Agni). associated with the gods, shining with bright radiance, let not the ill-will of any mortal prevail against us.

7. Grant Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, earth, the giver of cattle, the means of many sacred rites, such that it may long endure : may there be to us sons and grandsons, and may thy favour, Agni, be productive of good unto us.¹

SUKTA IV. (XVI.)

The deity and Rishi are the same ; the metre of the odd verses is Brihati ; of the even, Sato-brihati.

THIS Agni, is the lord of heroism and of great good fortune ; he is the lord of wealth comprising progeny and cattle ; he is the lord of the slayer of Vritra.²

2. Maruts, leaders (of rites), associate with this augments (of our prosperity), in whom (abide) riches contributing to felicity, ye who (are victorious) over (your) enemies in battle, who daily humble (your) foes.

3. Do thou, opulent Agni, showerer (of benefits) prosper us with riches comprising vigour, numerous progeny, health, and happiness.

4. He, who is the maker, prevades all worlds ; he the enduring maker (of all) bears our offerings to the gods : he is present with the devout (worshippers) and amidst the heroism and the devotions of men.

² Vritrahātanam is, but Vritra may here imply an enemy, or iniquity, as by another text, twayi samarpitakarmanam asmakam tvat prasadat papakshayo bhavati, through thy favour is the destruction of the sins of us whose good works have been delivered to thee ; also Sama-Veda, i. 60.

5. Consign us not, Agni, to malignity ; (doom) us not to the absence of prosperity ; nor, son of strength, to the want of cattle, nor to reproach : drive away (all) animosities.

6. Auspicious Agni, bestow (upon us) at the rite, food (the source of) happiness and renown.

SUKTA V. (XVII.)

The deity is Agni ; the Rishi is Kata the son of Vis'wamitra ; the metre Trishtubh.

THE righteous (Agni) when first kindled on the several (altars) the object of adoration by all, whose hair is flame, and who is cleansed with butter, the purifier, the worthily-worshipped is sprinkled with oblations for the worship of the gods.

2. As thou didst offer the burnt-offering, Agni, (on behalf of) earth ; as thou, Játavedas, who art cognizant (of sacred rites, didst offer sacrifice on behalf) of heaven ; so with this oblation worship the gods, and perfect this rite to-day (as thou didst) that of Manu.²

3. There are thy existences Játavedas ;³ three, Agni, are thy parent dawns :⁴ with them offer the oblation of 1 Prathamānudharma ; dharma may be considered as a synonyme of Agni ; or the construction may be ānudharma, according to law or religion.

2 See Neve on the Deluge.

3 Trīnyayayunshi, three lines, as supported by butter, by fuel, and by the Soma plant.

4 Tisra ajānirushasah ; Ajani may mean sisters, or mothers ; dawns personified as the parents or sisters of Agni, as prior or subsequent to the lighting of the sacrificial fire in early morning ; why "three" does not appear, unless the three diurnal fires are the gods, and knowing (his wishes) be the bestower of happiness on the institutor of the sacrifice.

4. Játavedas, we venerate thee, glorifying the brilliant, beautiful adorable Agni: the gods have made thee their messenger, the disinterested bearer of oblations, the centre of ambrosia.

5. He is the most diligent offerer of worship who is the presenter of oblations before thou art, and who in two places (the middling and the best) seated with the sacrificial food is (the source of) happiness (to the worshippers): do thou, cognizant (of the objects of devotion), officiate in accordance with his piety, and thus render our rite acceptable to the gods.¹

SUKTA VI. (XVIII)

The deity, Rishi; and metre as before.

BE favourably disposed, Agni, on approaching us (at this rite); be the fulfiller (of our objects) like a friend (to a friend) or parents (to a child): since men are the grievous oppressors of men, do thou consume the foes who come against us.

2. Vex thoroughly, Agni, our assailing enemies, disappoint the purpose of the adversary who offers not worship: giver of dwellings, who art cognizant (of sacred rites), vex those who have no thought (of pious acts) so that thy undecaying, all-pervading (rays), may ever abide.

alluded to; as sisters, a text is quoted by Sayana assigning them separate offices; Prajam eka rakshaty-urjam eka, rashtram eka rakshati, one preserves the people, one vigour, one the kingdom.

3. Desirous (of wealth) I offer to thee, Agni, an oblation with butter and with fuel for thy speed and invigoration, praising thee with a holy prayer as much as I am able: (I propitiate thee) that thou mayst render this praise resplendent with infinite treasure.

4. Rise up, son of strength, with (thy) splendour when hymned, and bestow abundant food and wealth, Agni, upon the descendants of Vis'wamitra¹ celebrating thy praise; and grant them exemption from sickness and danger: Encourager of pious works (Agni,) we repeatedly sprinkle thy substance (with milk and butter.)

5. Liberal doner (of riches) bestow upon us the most precious of treasures, for therefore is it, Agni, that thou art kindled: thou hast arms promptly stretched forth, whose (radiant) forms (bestow) wealth on the dwelling of thy fortunate adorer.

SUKTA VII. (XIX.)

The deity and metre as before; the Rishi is Gāthīn, a son of Viswamitra.

I HAVE recourse in this sacrifice to Agni, the invoker and praiser (of the gods), the intelligent, the all-knowing, the unbeguiled; may he, the adorable, sacrifice for us to the gods, (and) accept the precious (offerings) we make for good and riches.

2. Reverencing the gods, I place before thee, Agni, the brilliant oblation-yielding, food-bestowing, butter-charged (offering); mayst thou (propitiated) by the presented wealth, sanctify (this) sacrifice by your circumambulation.

3. He who is protected, Agni, by thee, becomes endowed with a most luminous mind : bestow upon him excellent progeny : may we ever be under the power of thee, who art the willing dispenser of riches : glorifying thee (may we be) the receptacle of 'wealth.

4. The ministering priests have consecrated in thee, Agni, who art divine, many hosts (of flames) ; do thou bring hither the gods, youngest (of the deities), that thou mayst worship to-day the divine effulgence.

5. Inasmuch as the attendant divine (priests) anoint thee as the invoker of the gods to offer worship in the sacrifice, therefore do thou ascent to be our protector on this occasion, and grant abundant food to our descendants.

SUKTA VIII. (XX).

The Viswadevas are the deities of the first and last stanzas
Agni the deity of the rest : the Rishi and metre as before.

THE bearer (of the oblation) invokes with praises at the break of day, Agni, the dawn, the Aswins, and Dadhikrá :¹ may the resplendant divinities, desirous of our sacrifice, hear in unison (the invocation).

2. Agni, born of sacrifice, three are thy viands ;²
three thine abiding places ;³ three the tongues satisfying

¹ This ordinarily means a horse : in this place, according to Sayana, it implies a certain divinity, Kaschid-devah.

² Butter, fuel, and the Soma.

³ Three altars, or the three daily sacrifices, or the three worlds.

(the gods):¹ three verily are thy forms,² acceptable to the deities, and with them never headless (of our wishes) be propitious to our praises.

3. Divine Agni, knowing all that exists and distributor of food, many are the names of thee,³ who art immortal, satisfier of all men, friend of the suppliant, the gods have 'deposited in thee whatever are the delusions of the deluding (Rākshasas.)⁴

4. The divine Agni, is the guide of devout men, as the sun is the regulator of the seasons: may he, the observer of truth, the slayer of Vritra, the ancient, the omniscient, convey his adorer (safe) over all difficulties.

5. Invoke to this rite, Dadhikrā, Agni, the divine Ūshas, Vrihaspati, the divine Savitri, the As'wins the Mitra and Varuna, Bhaga, the Vasus, the Rudras, and Ādityas.

SUKTA IX. (XXI.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi, Gāthīn; the metre of the first and fourth verses is Trishtubh; of the second and third Anushtubh; and of the fifth Sato-brihati.

CONVEY our sacrifice, Jātavedas, to the immortals, and do thou accept these oblations: Agni, invoker (of the gods), seated (on the altar) first partake of the drops¹ of the marrow and of the butter.

4 Therefore Agni is able to counteract their devices for disturbing sacrifices.

2. Drops of the marrow charged with butter fall, purifier, to thee, at thine own rite, for the food of the gods : therefore grant us excellent affluence.

3. The drops (of marrow) dripping with butter are offered, Agni, to thee who art wise : thou the most excellent Rishi art kindled : be the protector of the sacrifice.

4. Irresistible and powerful Agni, the drops of marrow and of butter distil for thee ; therefore do thou, who art praised by sages, come with great splendour, and be pleased, ever intelligent Agni, with our oblations.

5. We present to thee the densest marrow that has been extracted for thee from the interior (of the victim) :² granter of dwellings, the drops fall for thee upon the skin : distribute them amongst the gods.

1 Stokah, commonly meaning any small portion, is explained throughout by vindavah, drops : the hymn, according to Sayana, is proper to animal sacrifices, pas'u-yagam.

2 Ojishtham te madhyato meda udbhritam ; the medas or vapâ is described as the fatty matter that lubricates the abdomen like coagulated butter ; it is evidently the same that is described in the Old Testament as "the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards." Levit. iv. 9, etc.

SUKTA X. (XXII.)

FIVE fires¹ are the deities; the Rishi as before; the metre of the fourth stanza is Anushtubh; of the rest Trishtubh.

THIS is that Agni in whom Indra, desirous (of the oblation), placed the effused soma for (his own) belly:² thou art praised by us, Jâtavedas, enjoying the sacrificial food of many sorts like a rapid courser (enjoying many pleasures in battle).³

2. Adorable Agni, thy radiance that is in the heaven, on the earth, in the plants, in the waters, and wherewith thou overspreadest the firmament,⁴ that is, shining and resplendent, overlooking man (vast as) the ocean.

1 Panchachitirupa agnayo devata, each verse it is said being separately recited as the Adhwaryu constructs a pit or an altar, ishtaka, for collecting chayana or chiti, a sacrificial fire: the hymn occurs in the same order in the Yajush, XII. 47, 51.

2 Dadhe jathare, swodare dadhâra; but the verb is also applied to yasmin, the fire in which the Soma was placed.

3 Sahasrinam vajam atyam na saptim sasavan, enjoying a thousand-fold food like a quick-going horse: like a horse that enjoys various properties in battle, is Sayana's explanation, sahasram nânârupatâm yuddhe yo bhajati sa sahasri, tam as'wamiva; which does not much illustrate the comparison: Mahidhara gives the words an entirely different sense: Sahasrinam, he attaches to somam, worthy or fit for a thousand libations, somam sahasrarham; atyam and saptim to vajam, food, exhilarating, madakaram, and sahasrarham; atyam and saptim to vajam, food, exhilarating, madakaram, and satisfying, triptiharam: na, meaning, now, samprati.

4 Agni, severally, as the sun, as sacrificial fire, as the fire that is illuminated by attrition from wood, as submarine fire and as wind.

5 Twesha sa bhanur arnavo nrichakshah, is explained by Sayana, diptiman eva bhasamano nrinam drashta samudravan

3. Thou movest, Agni, to the vapour in heaven :¹ thou congregatest the divinities who are the vital airs² (of the body) thou animatest the waters in the bright region above the sun,³ as well as those that are in the firmament beneath.

4. May the benignant fires termed purishyas,⁴ together with the instruments⁵ (that have dug the pits in which they are placed) combined, accept the sacrifice (and grant us) salutary and abundant food.

5. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation earth, the giver of cattle, the means of many sacred rites, mahan, shining verily and resplendent the beholder of men great like the ocean : Mahidhara does not differ materially but explains arnavah by arnansi, udakani yatra santi, the place where the waters are : after this verse the priest adds, idriso yaste bhanus, tam eveshthakarupam upadadhami, such being thy lustre, I place it in the form of the Ishtaka.

1 That is, in the form of smoke.

2 Devan uchishe dhishnya ye : Mahidhara agrees with Sayana in explaining dhishnya by prana, or the devas presiding over the vital airs pranabhimano devah : uchishe the latter renders, samavetan karoshi.

3 Rochane parastat suryasya : Rochana is said to be loka or region where the fiery radiance burns, Rochano namayam loka yatra agneyam jyotis tapati, above the sun, suryasyoparishtad.

4 Purishyaso agnayah : Sayana explains the term, sikata sammisrah, mixed with sand : Mahidhara, pas'ubhyo hitah, good for animals : Purisham occurs in the Nirukta amongst the synonymes of water, and is elsewhere explained as that which pleases or which fills—NIR. II. 22.

5 Pravanebhih sajoshasah, the first, Sayana explains, mritkhanasadhanachutair abhryadibhih ; abhrya and others, which are the implements for digging the earth : Mahidhara explains it by manansi, minds, being placed in mind, manasa pritiyuktah : his interpretation, however, seems to rest on a fancied etymology, pra-prakarshena vananti-sambhajanti vishayan, what especially apprehend objects of sense.

such that it may long endure : may there be to us sons and grandsons, and may thy favour, Agni, be productive of good unto us.¹

SUKTA XI. (XXIII).

The deity is Agni ? the Rishis are Devasravas, and Devavata, sons of Bharata ; the metre is Trihtubh, except in the third stanza, where it is Sato-brihati.

CHURNED (by the friction of the sticks), duly placed in the sacrificial chamber, the young and sage leader of the rite, Jatavedas, the imperishable Agni, (blazing) amidst consuming forests, grants us on this occasion ambrosial (food).

2. The two sons of Bharata, Devasravas and Devavâta, have churned the very powerful and wealth-bestowing Agni : look upon us, Agni, with vast riches, and be the bringer of food (to us) every day.

3. The ten fingers have generated this ancient (Agni) : praise, Devasravas, this well born beloved (son) of his parents,² generated by Devavâta, Agni, who is the servant of men.

4. I place thee in an excellent spot of earth³ on an auspicious day of days : do thou, Agni, shine on the frequented⁴ (banks) of the Drishadvati, Apaya, and Sarasvati, rivers.

1 Sukta vii. V. 11.

2 The two pieces of stick that have been rubbed together by Devavata.

3 Prithivya ilayaspade, in the earth in the form of a cow, according to Sayana, that is, on the northern altar.

4 Mânushi, relating to man or to Manu, is said to imply manushyasancharavishaye tire, on a bank, a place frequented by men ; the Drishadvati and Saraswati rivers are well known ; the Apaya has not occurred before.

5. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation earth, the giver of cattle, the means of many sacred rites, such that it may long endure : may there be to us sons and grandsons, and may thy favour, Agni, be productive of good unto us.

SUKTA XII. (XXIV).

The deity is Agni ; the Rishi Vis'wamitra ; the metre of the first verse is Anushtubh ; of the rest Gayatri.

REPEL, Agni, (hostile) hosts ; drive away (all) assailants : insuperable, foe-surpassing, give food to the institutor of this sacrifice.¹

2. Agni (who art) immortal and who art gratified by oblations, thou art kindled upon the altar : be pleased by this our sacrifice.

3. Agni, son of strength, vigilant (in the exercise of)² thy energy, take thy seat when invoked on the sacred grass (strewn at) my (sacrifice)

4. Agni, with all the divine fires, respect the praises of those who in (their) sacrifices are (thy especial) worshippers.

5. Grant, Agni, ample wealth and progeny to the donor (of the oblation) : make us prosperous, possessed of offspring.

² Dyumnena jagrive, is explained swatejasa jagaranopeta, always endowed with his vigilance by own lustre or energy, loka rakshârtham, for the preservation of the world.

SUKTA XIII (XXV.)

THE deity is Agni, as before, but Indra is also included in the fourth verse: the Rishi is Vis'wamitra; the metre Viraj.

AGNI, who art omniscient, and the discriminator (of acts) thou art the son of heaven or the son of earth: do thou, who art intelligent, worship severally the gods on this occasion.

2. The wise Agni bestows faculties (securing prosperity and descendants); adoring (the world with lustre) he gives (sacrificial food) to the immortals: Agni, (to whom) many oblations (are offered), bring hither to us the gods.

3. Agni, the unbewildered, the ruler (of the world), the radiant, associated with vigour and food, illumines the divine immortal parents of all things, heaven and earth.

4. Agni, do thou and Indra, gods disdaining not (our rite), come to the sacrifice in the dwelling of the offerer of the libation to drink the Soma juice.

5. Agni, son of strength Jatavedas; the eternal traversing the inhabited regions with thy protection, thou art kindled in the dwelling of the waters.¹

SUKTA XIV. (XXVI.)

THE deity of the first triplet is Vais'wanara; of the second Agni, with the Maruts; of the two next stanzas, Agni or Para-brahma; of the ninth Vis'wamitra himself, who is the Rishi of all the stanzas except in seventh, which is supposed to be uttered by Brahma, or Agni identified with divine spirit; the metre of the two first triplets is Jagati of the rest Trishtubh.

WE of the race of Kusika offering oblations, desirous of wealth, having contemplated him in our minds, invoke with praises the divine Vis'wanara, the observer of truth¹ the cognizant of heaven, the bountiful, the charioteer, the frequenter (of sacrifices)

2. We invoke thee for our own protection and for the devotions of mankind, the radiant Agni, Vaiswanara, the illuminator of the firmament, the adorable lord of sacred rites,² the wise, the hearer (of supplications), the guest (of men), the quick-moving.

3. Vaiswanara is kindled in every age by the Kushikas as a neighing foal (is nourished) by its mother: may that Agni, vigilant amongst the immortals, give us wealth with excellent offspring and good horses.

4. May the swift fires combined with the vigorous winds proceed to the pure (region of the water), uniting the drops (of rain): the Maruts irresistible, all-knowing agitate the copious-shedding clouds.

5. The fire-beautified, all-agitating Maruts: we seek their fierce radiance for protection: they, the sons of Rudra, the bountiful Maruts, whose form is the rain, are loud like roaring lions.

6. We solicit the might of the Maruts, the irradiation of Agni, with solemn prayers in every assembly and company (of worshippers): those Maruts who have party-coloured steeds, who are dispensers of unfailing wealth, firm (of purpose), and frequenters of sacrifices.

1 Anushatya. from anu and satya: in this and similar compounds which are of frequent recurrence, the notion, at least according to the Scholiast, is not that of observing truth in the abstract, but of keeping faith with the sacrificer, by giving him the desired recompense to which he is justly entitled.

2 Brihaspati, explained here Brihato yajnasya patim, the lord of the great sacrifice: tatpalakataya swaminam, lord through protecting it.

7. I, Agni, am by birth endowed with knowledge of all that exists:¹ clarified butter is my eye : ambrosia is my mouth : I am the living breath of threefold nature, the measure of the firmament, eternal warmth : I am also the oblation.²

8. Agni, thoroughly comprehending the light that is to be understood by the heart, has purified himself (by the three) purifying (forms) ; he has made himself most

1 Agni asmi janmana jataveda ; or it may mean, I, Agni, I am by birth Jātavedas.

2 This is a somewhat mystical description of the universality of Agni in the double capacity of the enjoyer and enjoyed, the food and the feeder, and in the three forms of fire, air, and the sun, presiding over earth, mid heaven and heaven, the eye of Agni is the light of all, which light is fed by oblations of butter : ambrosia is the reward of pious acts or enjoyment of heaven and the like, which is procurable through oblations to fire, as if through his mouth or countenance, amritam me asan : arkastridha u ; arka is explained jagatsrashita pranah, world creating vital air, which, becoming threefold, is Vāyu, in the firmament, Agni, on earth, and A'ditya as the source of eternal warmth and life. Sayana furnishes another and more simple illustration of some of the phraseology, or, as the eye light up the world, so ghee thrown upon the fire causes it to burn fierce and dispense more light : amrita he explains also by prabha, light, light is in my countenance : tridhātu he refers to the three vital airs termed prana, apana, and vyana : the identity with the air and the sun is similarly explained : the verse occurs in the Yajush xviii. 66, where Mahidhara interprets it differently : according to him, it is the yajamana who identifies himself with Agni, saying, I am by birth, Agni, or of the form of Agni Agni-rupa, the lord of all that is born, the sacrifice (arka), the three vedas, the measurer of the water the eternal sun : ghee is the eye ; that is, I behold the offerer of ghee on the fire ; I convert the oblation that is put into my mouth into ambrosia : thus there is no duality between Agni and the individual, evamâtmanyagnyadwaitam.

excellent treasure by (these) self-manifestations, and has thence contemplated heaven and earth.¹

9. Heaven and earth be kind to that sage² who is, as it were; a many-channelled and inexhaustible stream (of knowledge); the parents (of his disciples), the collar of holy texts, rejoicing on the lap of his parents, whose words are truth.

SUKTA XV. (XXVII.)

THE deity is Agni, or of the first verse Ritu or the personified season; Vis'wamitra is the Rishi; the metre is Gayatri.

THE months, the half months, (the gods) who are the receivers of oblations, with the butter-yielding kine preside over your rite:³ the sacrificer, desirous of prosperity, worship the gods.

1 Having by self-contemplation recognised his identity with the three manifestations, Agni, Vāyu, and A'ditya, he becomes to know his identity with the universe, as by the text, atmani vignate sarvam idam vignātam bhavati, the self being known, all this (universe) is known.

2 That is Vis'wamitra himself: in consequence of his discovery that Vaiswānara is Para-brahma, the supreme spirit: as it would be scarcely decorous to say so much in his own commendation this stanza may be ascribed to Brahma.

3 Pra vo vaja abhidhavo havishmanto ghrītachya: the Scholiast explains vaja by masah, months, and abhidhyavah by ardhamasah half months: havishmanta, literally, having the havis or oblation of butter, he considers an epithet of devah, gods, upon the authority of the Taittiriya; but they also explain it by pas'avah, animals yielding milk, of which the havis is made, in which the Vajasaneyis concur: Ghrītachi he renders Gau, but the Vajasaneya is quoted for its meaning, Sruk, a ladle: there is no verb, but pra is regarded as implying prabhavanti, all these preside over your sacrificing:

2. I worship with praise the wise Agni, the accomplisher of sacrifice, the possessor of happiness, the repository of wealth.

3. May we offering oblations effect the detention of thee who art divine (until the completion of the rite), and may we (thereby) overcome all animosities.¹

4. We solicit that Agni, who is being kindled at the sacrifice, the purifier, the adorable, whose hair is flame.

5. Agni, the bright-shining, the immortal, the cleanser with clarified butter, the fitly-invoked, the bearer of the oblation in the sacrifice.

6. The exorcisers² (of the demons) lifting up their iadles, and offering sacrifice, have called upon Agni by this ceremony for their protection

7. The offerer of the oblation, the divine, immortal, Agni, comes first (at the ceremony) directing solemnities by his experience.³

8. The mighty Agni [is placed (foremost by the gods) in battle; he is brought forward reverently at holy rites; for he is the sage fulfiller of the sacrifice.

9. He who has been made by the sacred rite, the choice (of the worshipper), who comprehends (within himself) the germ of all creatures, and whom the the explanation of Sayana is that of the Taittiriya Brahmana, but the line is obscure, the words in the senses given are unusual, and the whole is elliptical.

1. Dweshansi, hatreds : Sayana proposes papani, sins.

2 Sabadhah, repelling the disturbers of sacred rites by repeating the Mantra or charm for their destruction, is Sayana's explanation, rakshoghnamantlochcharanena tadvishayabâdhah.

3 Mayaya, usually illusion or guile: it is here explained harmavishayajnânam, knowledge of the objects of sacred rites.

daughter of Daksha (receives) as the parent of the world}.¹

10. Agni, strength-engendered, Ila² (the daughter) of Daksha has sustained thee, the desirable; the resplendent, and longing (for the oblation).

11. The wise (priests) performers (of the ceremony) kindle with oblations for the due celebration of the rite, Agni, the regulator (of all), the sender of the rain.

12. I adore at this sacrifice Agni the grandson of (sacrificial) food³ shining above in the firmament, the creation of the wise.⁴

13. Agni, who is to be worshipped with praise and with prostration, the dispeller of darkness, the beautiful the showerer (of benefits) is kindled.

14. The offerers of oblations glorify that Agni who is the showerer (of benefits) and he is the bearer of the offerings to the gods as a horse (bears his rider to his home).

15. Showerer (of benefits) we profusely offering

1 Dakshasya pitaram tana is explained by Sayana as Dahshasya Prajapater tanaya, the daughter of the Prajapati Daksha; that is, the earth, here identified with the altar, veditrupa: she sustains dharayati, understood, him, Agni, the protector or father of the world, sarvasya jagatah palakam dharayati: this and the two preceding stanzas occur in the Saman II. 827, 829.

2 As before, earth on the altar.

3 Urjo napatam or the son of the oblation, as blazing when fed by butter and the like; or the descent may be differently accounted for, from the oblation proceeds Aditya, and from Aditya, Agni.

4 Kavikratum, of whom, kavayah the wise; that is the Adhvaryu, and the rest, are the makers, karttarah, by their rubbing the sticks to evolve flame.

(oblations) kindle thee, mighty and resplendent Agni, who art the sender of showers.¹

SUKTA XVI. (XXVIII.)

THE deity and Rishi are as before ; the metre of the third stanza is Ushnih ; of the fourth Trishtubh ; of the fifth Jagati ; of the rest Gāyatri.

AGNI, by whom all is known, who rewardest pious acts with wealth, accept our cakes offered with butter at the morning worship.

2. The cakes and butter are dressed, Agni, and verily prepared for thee : accept them youngest (of the gods).

3. Eat, Agni, the cakes and butter offered as the day disappears : thou son of strength, art stationed (by us) at the sacrifice.

4. Wise Jatavedas, accept the cakes and butter offered in this sacrifice at the mid-day rite ; prudent (worshippers), withhold not at solemn ceremonies the portion of thee who art mighty.

5. Be pleased, Agni, son of strength, with the cakes and butter offered at the third (daily sacrifice), and do thou (propitiated) by praise convey the precious imperishable and awakening (oblation)² to the immortal gods.

1 The scholiast cites Manu III. 76, for this property of Agni : "the offering that is sacrificed with fire proceeds entirely to the sun, from the sun is generated rain, and from rain food ; from thence mankind."

2 Jagrivim : according to the scholiast the Soma juice offered at dawn is termed Jāgrivi, the sleep dispelling, swapnanivarakah, but here we are at the third or evening worship.

6. Agni who art Jâtavedas and art thriving upon oblations, accept the cakes and butter as the day disappears.

SUKTA XVII. (XXIX.)

THE deity is Agni, except in the fifth verse, where the officiating priest is supposed to take his place: the Rishi is Vis wamitra the metre of the first, fourth, tenth, and twelfth stanzas, is Anushtubh; of the eighth, eleventh, fourteenth and fifteenth Jagati, and of the rest Trishtubh.

THIS, the apparatus of attrition, is ready;¹ the generation (of the flame) is ready; take up this (stick) the protectress of mankind, and let us churn the fire as has been done of old.

2. Jâtavedas has been deposited in the two sticks as the embryo is deposited in pregnant women: Agni is to be adored day by day by vigilant men laden with oblations.

3. Let the intelligent priest place the lower of the sticks with the face upwards, the upper (with the surface) downwards, so that quickly impregnated it may generate the showerer (of benefits) Agni: then the bright blazing son of Ila^a whose light dissipates the darkness is born of the wood of attrition.

4 Agni who art Jâtavedas, we place thee upon the earth in the centre, in the place of Ilā,¹ for the purpose of receiving the oblation.

5. Conductors of the rite, produce by attrition the far-seeing, single-minded, intelligent, immortal, radiant-limbed Agni : generate him, leaders (of the solemnity), in the first place the chief standard of the sacrifice, who is the source of felicity.

6. When they rub (the sticks with their arms the radiant Agni bursts forth from the wood like a fleet courser, and like the many-coloured car of the As'wins unresisted in its course, Agni spreads wide around consuming stones and trees.

7. As soon as born Agni, shines intelligent, swift-moving, skilled in rites, praised by the wise, and liberal in gifts ; (and it is he, whom the gods have held as the bearer of oblations at sacrifices, adorable and all knowing.

8. Offerer of oblations sit down in thine own sphere,² for thou art cognizant (of holy acts), and station the institutor of the ceremony in the chief place of the sacred rite :³ cherisher of the gods, worship the

1 Ilayaspade nabha prithivyāh alhi ; that is in the middle of the northern altar : this and the preceding occur in Yajush, xxxiv 14, 15 : the passage is also quoted in the Aitareya Brahmana, Panch. I. Adhy. 5, and similarly explained in the commentary.

2 Sāyana explains swe loke by uttaravedyah nabhau on the centre of the north altar : Mahidhara, Yajur-Veda, xi. 35. says, krishnājine on the hide of the black antelope.

3 Sadaya yajnam sukritasya yonau ; yajna' according to Sayana is put for the yajamana, yajnasya kartaram, who is to be stationed uttamaloke, in the best place, or that which enjoys the fruit of the holy rite, sukritajanyopabhogasya sthane : Mahidhara says, sukritayonih means the krishnajina, the black antelope-hide gods, Agni, and bestow abundant food on the founder of the sacrifice.

9. Produce, friends, smoke,¹ the showerer (of benefits); indefatigable persist in the contest with (Agni) the heroic Agni is able to encounter hosts, and by him the gods overcome their foes.

10. This in every season, Agni, is thy place, whence as soon as generated, thou hast ever shone: knowing that to be so Agni, there abide, and thrive by our praises.

11. When (existing as an embryo (in the woods), Agni is called Tanunapat;² when he is generated (he is called) the Asura-destroying Narasansa; when he has displayed (his energy) in the material firmament, Matariswan;³ and the creation of the wind is in his rapid motion.

12. Agni, who art pronounced by reverential attrition, and deposited with reverential care, and who art far-seeing, render our rites (exempt from defects), and worship the gods (on behalf) of the devout worshipper.

13. Mortals have begotten the immortals, the undecaying (Agni), the devourer of oblations, the conveyance (by which they cross over sin), the ten sister

1 Krinota dhumam produce fire, by metonymy.

2 Sayana says this alludes to the Arani, the stick of vetasa or aswattha, or other trees: Mahidhara Yajur Veda, III. 14, explains it the Garhapatya, or household fire: he renders the concluding phrase also differently, give us increase of riches.

3 He who does not consume the persons of the worshippers yashtinam tanuh, sariranā na patayati, na dahati, or it may have the meaning previously given, the grandson of the waters.

14. Agni, who has seven ministering priests, shines eternally : when he has blazed upon the bosom and lap of his mother (earth), he is vociferous (with delight) : day by day he never slumbers after he is born from the interior of the (spark) emitting wood.

15. The Kṛsikas, the first-born of Brahma, armed against enemies like the energies of the Maruts, comprehend the universe : they have uttered the prayer accompanied by the oblation : they have one by one lighted Agni in this dwelling.

16. Agni, offerer of oblations, cognizant in rites, inasmuch as we have recourse to thee to-day in this progressing sacrifice, therefore do thou steadily convey (the offering to the gods), or tranquilly be at rest, and knowing (the purport of our acts), and wise in all respects), approach (and accept) the Soma libation.

1 When the priests and assistants behold the flame break forth they clap their hands and make sounds of rejoicing, like the parents of a new born son.

ADHYAYA II.

ANUVA'KA III.

SUKTA I. (XXX.)

The deity is Indra the Rishi Vis'wamitra : the metre Trishtubh.

THE bearers of the libations desire thee ; thy friends pour forth the Soma juice ; they offer copious oblations : (supported by thee) they endure patiently the calumny of men, for who is so renowned as thou art.

2. Master of twany steeds, the remotest regions are not remote for thee : then come quickly with thy horses : to thee, the steady showerer (of benefits), these sacrifices are presented ; the stones (for bruising the Soma) are ready, as the fire is being kindled.

3. Showerer (of benefits, who art) Indra, the wearer of the hemlet,¹ the professor of opulence, the conveyer (of men beyond civil),² the leader of the numerous troop (of the Maruts). the achiever of many great] deeds, the devastator of hostile (regions), the terror of thy foes, where are those heroic deeds (which thou hast performed against the mortal (Asuras) when opposed (by them in battle.)

4. Thou alone casting down the firmly footed (Asuras) proceedest, destroying the Vritras, and obedient to thy command the heaven and earth and the mountains stood as if immoveable.

¹ Susipra, in more than one previous passage has been explained, having a handsome nose or chin, for which Sâyana here also quotes the Nirukta, vi. 17, but he proposes a new meaning, siras-trānam a guard of the head, a helmet.

² Tarutra may also be rendered, he by whom the gods surpass or defeat the Asuras.

5. Thou alone when invoked by many, and the slayer of Vritra by thy prowess, didst say firmly (to the gods), fear not! Indra, endowed with opulence, vast is thy grasp, wherewith thou hast seized these unbounded regions, heaven and earth.

6. Let (thy car), Indra, drawn by thy horses (rush) downwards (upon the Asuras); let thy destroying thunder-bolt fall upon thine enemies; slay those that assail in front or in rear, or that fly (from the combat): make the universe (the abode of) truth; (let such power) be concentrated in thee.

7. The man to whom thou grantest, lord of power, (thy good will), enjoys unprecedented domestic (prosperity): Indra, who art invoked by many, thy auspicious favour, which is obtained by oblations,¹ is the giver of unbounded wealth.

8. Indra, who art invoked by many, grind to dust the reviling malevolent, Vritra opposing thee, dwelling with the mother of the Dānavas and increasing in might until having deprived him of hand and foot, thou hast destroyed him by the strength.²

¹ Sumatirghritachi : the application of the epithet is not very obvious, that which goes to or obtains clarified butter, havir anchatī, prapnoti, but it is not applicable to any thing else in the hemistich.

² Sahadanum kshiyantam sampinak kunarum : this is the usual allegory of the destruction of the cloud, but several of the terms of different renderings: Sahadānu, with those proceeding from Danu, as in a former passage, vol. ii. p. 87 : or it may mean, united with the Danavas, or, according to Mahidhara, Yajur-Veda xviii. 69, it may be simply saḥau from sahas, strength : kshiyantam, according to Sāyana, is bādhamānam, rain opposing : Mahidhara explains it nikatavarttamānam, being near to : Kunāru may be a proper name, that of an Asura, a noisy one, kyananasilam, or

9. Thou hast fixed tranquil in its position the vast unbounded and wandering earth : the showerer (of bene fits) has upheld the heaven and the firmament : let the waters engendered by thee here descend.

10. The heavy cloud,¹ the receptacle of the water dreading (thee) its destroyer, opened out before (thou hadst cast thy bolt) ; then Indra made easily-traversed paths for the waters to issue, and desirable and loud sounding they proceeded to the (waters of the earth)² invoked of many.

11. Indra alone has filled the two, both earth and heaven mutually combined, and abounding with wealth : do thou, hero, mounted in thy car, come with thy harnessed horses from the firmament, impatient to be near us.

12. Surya harms not the quarters (of the horizon),³ set open daily (for his journey), the progeny of Har-yaswa;⁴ when he has traversed the roads (he is to travel), then he lets loose his horses, for such is his office.

evil-speaking, durvachavadanam, or according to Yaska, parik-vanana, loud-sounding : Sayana also gives us another interpretation ; crush the increasing cloud shedding water, sanadanum udakadanopetam ; abiding in the sky, kshiyantam, akase nivasantam ; and thundering, kunarum, garjantam.

1 Alatrino balah, the first is explained, a cloud and the second, that which by its abundance of water is able to do mischief : the verse is similarly explained by Yaska, Nir, vi. 2, but the construction and phraseology both make it somewhat obscure.

2 Pravan puruhutam, vanirdhamantih is explained vananiyah sabdayamanas-ta japah purubhutam bahubhirâhutam parthivam udakam abhyagachchan, as in the text.

3 Disah suryo na minâti na hinsati, he does not injure.

4 Indra, or he with the twny horses.

13. All men are anxious to behold the great and variegated host (of the solar rays) at the issuing of the dawn after the night has been displaced ; and when the morning has come, they recognise the many great and glorious acts of Indra.

14. A great light has been shed upon the rivers : the cow yet immature grazes, charged with the ripe (milk) for Indra has placed in the cow all this collected sweetnees for food.

15. Indra be firm, for there are obstructors of (thy) path : secure to the worshipper and his friends (the means of completing) the sacrifice : mortal¹ enemies bearing bows, armed with mischievous weapons, and coming with evil intent, must be destroyed (by thee).

16. The sound (of thy bolt) has been heard by the approaching foes : hurl upon them the consuming thunderbolt, cut them up by the root, oppose, Maghavan, overcome, slay the Rákshasas, complete (the sacrifice).

17. Pluck up the Rákshasa, Indra, by the root ; cut asunder the middle, blight the summit : to whatever remote (regions) thou hast driven the sinner, cast upon the enemy of the *Veda*² thy consuming weapon.

18. Regulator (of the world provide us) with horses for our welfare, and when thou art seated near to us may we become mighty, enjoying abundant food, and ample riches, and may there be to us wealth accompanied by progeny.

1 Martyāsah : Sayana explains it here, Márayitarah, killers, murderers.

2 Brahma dwishe : Sayana renders it brahmanadweshakarine or him who entertains hatred against the *Bráhma*n ; but Brahma may mean the prayer of the Vedas, or the Vedas, which is here the more likely meaning, or at least the religion or ritual of the followers of the Veda.

19. Bring to us, Indra, splendid affluence : we rely on the bounty of thee who art fond of giving : our desire is as insatiable as the fire of the ocean : appease it, lord of infinite riches.

20. Gratify this our desire (of wealth) with cows with horses, with shining treasure, and make us renowned : the wise Kusikas, desirous of heaven, offer praise to thee, Indra with pious (prayers)

21. Indra, lord of cattle, (divide the clouds and send us) rain, whence nutritious food may come to us : showerer (of benefits), thou art spread through the sky and powerful through truth : Meghavan consider thyself as our protector.

22. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat ; the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

SUKTA II. (XXXI.)

THE deity and Rishi are the same, or the latter may be another Viswāmitra the son of Ishiratha, of the family of Kusika ; the metre is Trishtubh.

THE sonless father,¹ regulating (the contract), refers to his grandson, (the son) of his daughter, and relying on the efficiency of the rite, honours (his son-in-law) with valuable gifts: the father, trusting to the impregnation of the daughter, supports himself with a tranquil mind.

2. (A son) born of the body,¹ does not transfer (paternal) wealth to a sister: he has made (her) the receptacle of the embryo of the husband:² if the parents procreate children (of either sex),³ one is the performer of holy acts, the other is to be enriched (with gifts).⁴

3. For the worship of the resplendent (Indra), Agni, glowing with flame, has begotten mighty sons: great was the germ, and great was their birth, and great was their efficacy, for the worship of Haryaswa.

4. The victorious (Maruts) associated (with Indra when contending with Vritra) perceived a great light issuing from the darkness. The dawns recognising him

1 Tānwah, same as tanujah; na jamaye rikttham araik, if there be a son the inheritance does not go to the sister, jamaye, bhaginyai.

2 And by so doing he makes her sanskrita,—he secures for her one of the essential purificatory rites.

3 Yadi mataro janayanti vahnim: here vanhi is explained offspring, or rather male offspring, a son, whilst avahni is said to mean a daughter; but it may imply both, as having been borne by the wife, and the context requires this meaning; for the one, the son, as the performer of obsequial and other rites, is the heir, whilst the other is rindhan, riddhyamana, to be increased or made wealthy, with dresses, ornaments, and the like

4 These two verses, if rightly interpreted, are wholly unconnected with the subject of the Sukta, and come in without any apparent object: they are very obscure, and are only made somewhat intelligible by interpretations which seem to be arbitrary, and are very unusual, although not peculiar to Sâyana, his explanations being based on those of Yaska. Nir., III. 4—6.

(as the sun) arose, and Indra was the sole sovereign of the rays (of light).

5. The seven intelligent sages (Angirasas) having ascertained that (the cows) were concealed in the strong (cavern) propitiated (Indra) by mental devotion: they recovered them all by the path of a sacrifice; for Indra, knowing (their pious acts), and offering homage, entered (the cave).

6. Sarama discovered the broken (entrance) of the mountain, then Indra made great and ample (provision) for her young, as previously (promised): then the sure-footed (animal, first recognising their lowing, proceeded, and came to the presence of the imperishable kine.¹

7. The most sage (Indra), desirous of the friendship of the (Angirasas), went to the cave, and the mountain yielded its contents to the valiant (deity), aided by the youthful Maruts, equally wishing (to conciliate the sages): the destroyer (of the Asuras) recovered (the cattle), and immediately Angiras became his worshipper.

8. May he who is the type of all that is excellent the anticipator (of his foes), he who knows all that is born, who destroys Sushna, the far-seeing,² the restorer

1 The verse occurs also Xajur-Veda, xxxiii. 59, where the commentator gives, besides the usual legendary illustration, a different and more mystical interpretation, explaining sarama by vach, speech, that in which the gods saharamante delight-together: the other phrases are explained not very distinctly to the same purport.

2 Padavih, kavitama, most wise or far-seeing as to the past, from pada, an object, and vih, who knows.

of cattle, may he, a friend coming from heaven, honouring us as his friends, be free from all reproach.¹

9. The Angirasas, with minds intent on their cattle, sat down (to worship Indra) with hymns, following the road to immortality : great was this their perserverance, by which they sought for months to accomplish (their ends).

10. Contemplating their own (cattle) giving milk to their former progeny (the Angirasas) were delighted ; their shouts spread through heaven and earth ; they replaced the recovered kine in their places, and stationed guards over the cows.

11. Indra, the slayer of Vritra, let loose the milch kine assisted by the Maruts born for his aid, and entitled to praises and oblations, and the excellent (cows) contributing abundantly to sacred offerings, and yielding the butter of libation, milked for him sweet (sacrificial) food.

12. They (the Angirasas) performing pious acts made for [their protector a spacious and splendid abode which they celebrated : seated (at the sacrifice) and supporting with the pillar (of the firmament) the parents (of all things heaven and earth), they established the rapid Indra on high (in heaven).

13. Inasmuch as our devout praise has appointed a thriving ruler for the regulation of heaven and earth, to whom faultless and appropriate commendations (are due), therefore are all the energies of Indra spontaneously exerted.

1 Munchanniravadyat, always, nitaram, be free, munchatu—from such a fault as that of the nature of the death of Vritra : Vritrabadha rupād-doshat ; but this is a Paurānik notion, Vritra, according to the Puranas, being a Brāhman, and by killing him Indra was guilty of the heinous sin of Brahmahatya.

14. I wish, Indra, for thy friendship, and (the exercise of) thy powers : many horses come to the slayer of Vritra : we offer to thee, sage, great praise and oblations : consider thyself, Maghavan as our protector.¹

15. Wide fields, vast treasure, (spacious) pastures, has the much-knowing (Indra) bestowed upon his friends : the radiant Indra with the leaders (of rites, the Maruts) generated the sun, the dawn, the earth and fire.

16. This lowly-minded Indra has created the widespread, commingled, all-delighting waters ; and they, purify the sweet (libations) with the sage purifiers,² and being benevolent (to all), proceed with (the revolutions) of days and nights.³

17. The two adorable (alternations of) day and night,⁴ upholding (all things) by the might of the sun,⁵ successively revolve : thy sincere and acceptable friends (the Martus) are ready to encounter (thy foes) and maintain thy greatness.

18. Slayer of Vritra, do thou, who art long lived, the showerer (of benefits), the giver, of food, be the lord of our true praises, repairing (to the sacrifice),

1 Sama-Veda 1. v. 11.

2 Kavibhih pavitraih : according to the commentator, the sages who are as it were the filters or purifiers of the Soma libation are the divinities, Agni, Vayu, and Surya.

3 Dyubhir-hinvantyaktubhih, they go with days and nights : according to the scholiast, they regulate by day and night the respective functions of all the world : ratridivam sarvam jagat swa swa vyaparapravanam kurvanti, they make the whole world diligent in its respective functions by day and night.

4 The text has Ubhe krishne, both the blacks, meaning, the scholiast affirms, ahoratre, day and night.

5 Suryasya mahana ; the commentator identifies Surya with Indra, the impeller, preraka, of the world.

come to us great, with great, friendly, and auspicious protections.

19. Worshipping him with reverence, like an Angiras, I make the ancient (Indra) renovate to accept the oblation : destroy the many impious oppressors (of thy worshippers) and bestow upon us, Maghavan, thine own (wealth) for our acceptance.

20. Thy purifying waters have been spread abroad : fill their bed for our welfare : riding on [thy car, defend us from the malevolent, and make us quickly the conquerors of cattle.

21. Indra, the slayer of Vritra, the lord of herds, has discovered the cattle, and by his radiant effulgence driven away the black (Asuras), and indicating with veracity (to the Angirasas) the honest (kine), he shut the gate upon all their own cattle.¹

22. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.²

SUKTA III. (XXXII.)

THE deity, Rishi, and metre the same.

INDRA, lord of the Soma, drink this Soma Juice which is grateful to thee at noon-day sacrifice ; Maghavan,

1 Durascha viswa avrinod apa swah ; that is, according to Sayana, having placed the cattle in the cow-pens, he covered or closed the doors : vraje gah sthapayitwa tani dwaranyachchhaditâvân.

2 Many of the verses in this hymn are of more than usual obscurity.

partaker of the spiritless Soma,¹ unyoke thy horses, and filling their jaws (with fodder), exhilarate them at this ceremony.

2. Indra, drink the Soma Juice mixed with milk, with butter-milk, or fresh:² we offer it for thy exhilaration, associated with the devout³ company of the Maruts and the Rudras: drink it till thou art satisfied.

3. These are the Maruts, Indra, who, worshipping prowess, augment thy withering force (by their aid): attended by the Rudras, drink, wielder of the thunder-bolt, and handsome-chinned, at the noon-day sacrifice.

4. Those were the Maruts, who were the strength of Indra, and gently encouraged him; animated by whom he pierced the vital part of Vritra, fancying himself invulnerable.

5. Phased with the sacrifice, as if it was that of Manu, drink, Indra, the Soma Juice for the sake of perpetual vigour: come, lord of the tawny steeds, with the adorable Maruts, and the traversers (of the air): send down the waters (of the firmament) to (blend with) the waters of the earth.⁴

6. Inasmuch as thou hast slain with active strife the slumbering, darkling, water-investing Vritra, thou

1 Rijishin, possessing rijisham, gatasaram Soman, Soma having lost its strength.

2 Gavâsiram, manthinam, sukram: the first has occurred before; the second is explained, manthasanyuktam, mixed with butter-milk; and the last, abhinavam, new or fresh; or they may mean sukrâmanthigrahe varttamanam, being in the vessel of acid butter-milk.

3 Brahmakrita, Indrastotram kurvanena, making the praise of Indra.

4 Apo arna sisarshi; antarikshasthitanyudakani parthivanyudakani prapaya, cause the waters staying in mid-air to reach, or become those of, earth: the notion has occurred before.

hast let forth the bright waters like horses (rushing) into battle.

7. Therefore we sacrifice with reverence to the vast and mighty Indra, who is adorable, undecaying, young ; whose magnitude the unbounded heaven and earth have not measured, nor can measure.

8. All the gods cannot detract from the many glorious exploits, and pious works of Indra : he who has upheld earth, and heaven, and the firmament, and who the performer of great deeds, has engendered the sun and the dawn.

9. Doer of no wrong, such was thy true greatness that as soon as born, thou hast quaffed the Soma juice : neither the heavens, nor days nor months, nor years resist the force of thee who art mighty.

10. As soon as born in the highest heaven, thou hast quaffed, Indra, the Soma juice for thy exhilaration ; and when thou hadst pervaded the heaven and earth, thou becomest the primary artificer (of creation).

11. Indra, from whom many are born ; thou who art vigorous hast slain Ahi, enveloping the slumbering water, and confiding in his prowess : yet the heaven apprehended not thy greatness as thou remaindest concealing the earth by one of (thy) flames.¹

12. This our sacrifice, Indra, is thy augmentation, for the rite in which the Soma is effused is acceptable to thee : do thou who art deserving of worship protect the worshipper by (the efficacy of) the worship, and may this sacrifice strengthen thy thunderbolt for the slaying of Ahi.

1 Anyaya sphigya ksham avastha is explained, ekatarayakatya bhumim avachchhadya tishthasi : the meaning is not very clear.

13. The worshipper, by his conservatory sacrifice, has made Indra present : may I bring him to my presence to obtain new wealth, him who has been exalted by praises, whether ancient, mediæval, or recent.

14. When the thought of glorifying Indra entered my mind, then I gave birth (to his praises) ; may I laud him before encountering distant (evil) days, whereby he may guide us beyond sin ; for those on both sides of us invoke him, as (those on either bank of a river hail) a passenger in a boat.

15. The vase is filled for him (with Soma) ; welcome Indra : I pour it out for thee to drink, as a water-carrier (pours water) from his bag : may the grateful Soma juice flow in reverence round Indra for his exhilaration.

16. Invoked of many, the deep ocean arrests thee not, nor do the accompanying mountains (stay thee) : and therefore summoned by thy friends, thou hast repressed the strong flame abiding in the abyss.¹

17. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

1 Dridham chid arujo gavyam urvam, is interpreted by Sayana prabalam api avatevarttamanam urvanalam samyagabhankshih, thou hast entirely broken the strong (urva) fire abiding in the deep.

SUKTA IV. (XXXIII.)

As this hymn consists of a dialogue between Viswamitra and the rivers Vipas and Sutudrī,² they are considered to be respectively the Rishis of the verses ascribed to either ; the divinity is Indra ; the metre is Trishtubh, except in the last verse, in which it is Anushtubh.

RUSHING from the flanks of the mountains, eager (to reach the sea) like two mares with loosened reins contending (with each other in speed), like two fair mother cows (hastening) to caress (their calves), the Vipās and Sutudrī,³ flow rapidly with (united) waters.

2. Impelled by Indra, soliciting (his) commands, you go to the ocean like charioteers (to their goal) : flowing together, and swelling with (your) waves, bright (rivers), one of you proceeds to the other.

3. I repaired to the most maternal river ; I went to the wide auspicious Vipas, flowing together to a common receptacle, like parent cows (hastening to) caress the calf.

4. The rivers speak] Fertilizing (the land) with this (our) current, we are flowing to the receptacle which has been appointed by the deity (Indra) : the course appointed for our going (permits) not of delay : of what is the sage desirous, that he addresses the rivers ?

1 According to the legend cited by Sayana, given also by Yāska. Nir. 11. 24, Viswamitra, the family priest of Sudās, the son of Piyavana, having gained much wealth in his service, was returning with it home, when his road brought him to the confluence of the Vipas and Sutudrī : in order to make them fordable, he addressed to them the first stanzas of this hymn, to which they replied, and allowed him and his followers to cross.

2 The modern Bayah and Satlaj, the former of which falls into the latter : the more usual reading of the ancient Sanscrit names are Vipasa and Satudra.

5. Viswamitra speaks] Rivers charged with water, rest a moment from your course at my request, who go to gather the Soma (plant) :¹ I, the son of Kusika, desirous of protection, address with earnest prayer especially the river before me.²

6. The rivers speak] Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, dug our channels when he slew Ahi the blocker up of rivers :³ the divine and well-handed *Savitri*⁴ has led us (on our path), and obedient to his commands we flow (as) ample (streams).

7. Viswamitra speaks] Ever is that heroic exploit of Indra to be celebrated when he cut Ahi to pieces, and with his thunderbolt destroyed the surrounding (obstructors of the rain), whence the waters proceed in the direction they desire.

8. The rivers speak] Praise of Indra, forget not this speech, nor the words that (thou hast addressed to us) for future ages (to reverence) : celebrator (of holy rites), be favourable to us in solemn prayers ; treat us not after the (arrogant fashion) of men : salutation be to thee !

9. Viswamitra speaks] Listen, sister (streams), kindly to him who praises you ; who has come from 1 Me vachase somyaya, to my speech importing the Soma, i. e. according to the scholists, the object of my address is, that having crossed over, I may go to gather the Soma plant : Yaska agrees with Sayana in the interpretation of this stanza, Nir. 11. 25.

2 That is, the Sutudri

3 The cloud imprisoning the water of the rains.

4 Sayana considers Savitri as an epithet of Indra, the impeller or animator of the world, Savita sarvasya jagatah prerakh ; the Nirukta has a similar explanation, 11 26.

afar with a waggon and chariot :¹ bow down lowly become easily fordable : remain, rivers, lower than the axle (of the wheel) with your currents.

10 The rivers speak] Hymner, we hear thy words, that thou hast come from afar with a waggon and a chariot : we bow down before thee : like a woman nursing (her child), like a maiden bending to embrace a man, (so will we do for thee.

11. Viswāmitra speaks] Since, rivers, (you have allowed me to cross), so may the *Bharatas*² pass over (your united stream) : may the troop desiring to cross the water, permitted (by you), and impelled by Indra, pass ; then let the course appointed for your going (be resumed) : I have recourse to the favour of you who are worthy of adoration.

12. The Bharatas seeking cattle passed over : the sage enjoyed the favour of the rivers : streams dispensing food, productive of wealth, spread abundance, fill (your beds, flow swiftly.

1 Anasà rathena : the commentator, and Yāska also, separate these words, sakatena rathena cha, by a cart and a carriage : the annas, a cart or waggon, or track, would be for the conveyance of the Soma plant.

2 Te is repeated at the end of the line without any apparent connexion, according to the scholiast it is repeated out of respect, to iti punaruktir-ādarārtham.

3 The Bharatas are said to be of the same race as Viswamitra ;
Bharatakulaja madiyah sarve ; but possibly nothing more is meant than those who were the bearers of Viswamitra's, goods and chattels ; for his connexion with the Bharatas is somewhat remote :
besides which their family priest was Vasishtha. Mahabharata Adi Parva, v. 3734 : it is also to be observed that the word in the text is Bharata, with the first vowel long, although the short vowel is also allowable by the rules of derivatien.

13. Let your waves (rivers) so flow that the pin¹ of the yoke may be above (their) waters : leave the traces full, and may (the two streams), exempt from misfortune or defect, and uncensured, exhibit no (present) increase.²

SUKTA V. (XXXIV.)

Indra is the deity; the Rishi is Viswamitra; the metre is Trishtubh.

INDRA, the destroyer of cities, possessed of wealth, manifesting (his greatness), merciless to his enemies, has overspread the day with his radiance : attracted by prayer, increasing in bulk, and armed with many weapons,³ he has delighted both heaven and earth.

2. Decorating thee, I address sincere prayers to thee who art adorable and mighty, for the sake of 1 Samya, yugakila : the commentator explains it also as the ropes that are fastened to the ends of the yoke, the traces, yugya-kataparswadisamlagna rajjavah, but he renders yoktrani, which immediately occurs, in the same manner, and that is more properly the traces.

2 Ma sunam aratam : Sayana explains sunam by samriddhim, increase, referring, most probably, merely to the present moment meaning, may the rivers not so rise as to prevent his passage ; otherwise it might be thought to convey a wish that the rivers might never suffer any diminution, taking sunam in the sense of sunyam, emptiness. Professor Roth has translated this Sukta, in Litteratur des Veda, p. 101 : there are of course differences of interpretation between us, especially when he corrects both Sâyana and Yaska, as in v. 5.

3 Bhuridâtra : datra, from do, to cut, is explained a weapon.

{obtaining) food : thou, Indra. art the preceder of men¹ the descendants of Manu, and of the descendants of the gods.

3. Indra, of glorious deeds, destroyed Vritra : resistless in combat, he has overcome the deceivers resolved to consume him : he slew the mutilated (demon lurking) in the woods, and made manifest the (stolen) kine (that had been hidden) in the night.

4. Indra, the giver of Swarga, generating the days, has subdued victorious with the eager (Angirasa) the hostile hosts, and illumining for man the banner of the days,² he obtained light for the great conflict.

5. Indra entered the confiding hostile (hosts like a man distributing many (gifts) to (his) leaders : he has animated these dawns for the worshipper, and heightened their bright radiance (by his own).

6. They celebrate many great and glorious exploits of this mighty Indra : he crushed the strong by his strength, and, of overpowering prowess, he overcame the Dasyus by delusions.

7. Lord of the virtuous, fulfiller of the wishes of men, he gave to the gods³ the wealth (that had been won) in fierce battle, and therefore far-seeing sages glorify those his exploits with praises in the dwelling of the worshipper.⁴

1 Purvayava agrato ganta, the goer before : there is no other explanation.

2 Prarochayan ketum ahnam, lighting up, according to the comment surya, or the sun.

3 Devebhyah : Sáyana explains it stotrebhyah, to the praisers or worshippers.

4 Vivaswatah sadane : vivaswatah is here explained, of whom dwelling, vasatah, where various (vi) religious rites are performed.

8. Devout worshippers propitiate Indra, the victorious, the excellent, the bestower of strength, the enjoyer of heaven and the divine waters, and who was the giver of the earth and heaven and this (firmament to their inhabitants).

9. He gave horses, he gave also the sun, and Indra gave also the many-nourishing cow: he gave golden treasure, and having destroyed the Dasyus, he protected the Arya tribe.¹

10. Indra bestowed plants and days, he gave trees and the firmament, he divided the cloud, he scattered opponents, he was the tamer of adversaries

11. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

SUKTA VI. (XXXV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

STAY, Indra, having yoked the horses to the car, as Vayu stops when he has put up to his steeds, and come to our presence: solicited by us to drink of the (Soma) beverage, which with reverence, we offer for thy exhilaration.

2. I harness for thee, who art invoked by many, the swift gliding horses to the shafts of the car, that

1 A'ryam varnam: Sayana considers this as implying only the best tribe, or order, uttamam varnam, or the three first castes collectively they may bear Indra to this sacrifice that is prepared with all (that is required

3. Showerer (of benefits giver of food, guide hither thy vigorous horses, defending (us) against foes, and protect (thy worshippers): here unharness the bay steeds and give them fodder, and do thou eat daily suitable food.¹

4. I harness with prayer thy horses, who are to be harnessed with prayer, who are allies and swift-paced in battle: arise, and, all-knowing Indra, amounting on thy firm and easy chariot, come to the libation.

5. Let not other sacrifices attract thy vigorous and smooth backed-steeds: disregarding others, com perpetually hither, that we may propitiate thee sufficiently with effused Soma libations.

6. This Soma libation is for thee: come down, and, well-disposed, drink of it unceasingly: seated on the sacred grass at this sacrifice, take, Indra, this (libation) into your belly.²

7. The sacred grass is strewn for thee; the Soma Juice, Indra, is poured forth; the grain wherewith to feed thy horses is prepared; the oblations are offered to thee abiding on the sacred grass, who art praised of many, and (art) the showerer (of benefits), attended by the Maruts.

8. The leaders (of the ceremony) have prepared for thee, Indra, this (libation) sweetened with milk, the stones, the water: beautiful Indra, who art favourably disposed, and who art wise, knowing well (the worship)

1 Sadrisir-addhi dhanah, eat suitable grains, that is, according to the scholiast, fried barley, bhrishtayavân.

2 Yajur-V 3, xxvi. 20.

that is according to thy peculiar paths,¹ come and drink of this libation.

9. Associated, Indra, with those Maruts with whom thou hast shared in the libation, who encouraged thee (in battle), and are thy attendant troop, drink desirous (of the beverage), the Soma Juice, along with them, with the tongue of Agni.

10. Adorable Indra, drink of the effused libation, either by thine own effort, or through the tongue of Agni; drink it, Sakra, offered by the hand of the Adhwaryu, or accept the presentation of the oblation (from the hand) of the Hotri.

11. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra distinguished in this combat; the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises) terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

SUKTA VII. (XXXVI.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

INDRA, who art constantly seeking (association) with your allies (the Maruts) accept this, our offering, (made) for the grant (from thee of riches); for thou art one who grows with augmenting energies, through reiterated libations, and hast been renowned for glorious deeds.

2. To Indra have libations been presented in the days of old, whereby he hath become illustrious, the regulator of time, the granter of desires:¹ accept, Indra, these prescribed (offerings), and drink of this auspicious (beverage), expressed by the stones.²

3. Drink, Indra, and thrive: thine are these (present) libations, as were the primitive libations: do thou, who art adorable, drink to day the recent libations, as thou drankest those of old.

4. The great Indra, the victorious in battle, the defier of foes: his fierce strength and resolute vigour are exerted: verily the earth does not contain him, neither (does the heaven), when the Soma libations exhilarate the lord of the tawny steeds.

5. The mighty, fierce, auspicious Indra the showerer (of benefits), augments (in power) as he is animated for heroic (acts) by praise: his cattle are generated givers of food: many are his donations.³

1 Ribhur yebhih, vrishaparva vihayah, with which (libations) he is Ribhu, or, as the scholiast explains it, diptah, enlightened; also vrishaparva, or he on whom the rainy season, and other divisions of time, parvani, depend; or in fact, time itself, kalatmakah; and vihayah, who abandons or resigns to those who ask any thing, that which they desire: the two first, Ribhu and Vrishaparva, may also be considered as proper names or appellations of Indra.

2 Vrishadhutasya vrishnav, shew the usual predilection for, vrish, showering, raining: the literal acceptation of these terms would be of rain-shaken rainer, but the second is explained, the Soma, that bestows swarga, and such other benefits, and the first grāvabhir-abhishutam, juice expressed by the stones used for the purpose; the same idea of their being showerers, or bestowers of blessings, suggesting this appellation of them.

3 Dakshina asya purvīh: according to Sayana these are both epithets of gavah; bahvyas-ta gavo dakshinah prajayante, those many cows, givers (of milk and the like) are born; but dakshina more usually means the fee or present to Brahmans or priests at sacrifices.

6. As ~~the~~^{the} rivers pursue their course, the waters rush to the ocean, like the drivers of cars (to a goal), so the vast Indra (hastens) from his dwelling (in the firmament) when the humble Soma libation propitiates him.¹

7. As the rivers are solicitous (to mix) with the ocean, so (are the priest) bearing the efficient libation to Indra: holding in their hands they milk the Soma plant, and purify the sweet juices (as they fall) in drops through the purifying filters.

8. The stomach of Indra (is) as capacious (a receptacle) of Soma, as a lake,² for he has partaken of it at many sacrifices; and inasmuch as he has eaten the first (sacrificial) viands, he has been the slayer of Vritra, and has shared the Soma (with the gods).

9. Quickly, Indra, bring (wealth); let no one impede thee, for we know thee to be the lord of wealth, of all treasures: and since, Indra, thy greatness is munificence, therefore, lord of the tawny steeds, grant us (riches).

10. Opulent Indra, receiver of the spiritless Soma juice, give to us riches in universally desired quantity grant us to live a hundred years; bestow upon us, Indra, with the handsome chin, numerous posterity.

11. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat; the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

1 According to the scholiast, the comparison is to this effect, as small rivers and scanty waters contribute to the vast ocean, so the Soma juice, however insignificant, contributes to the gratification of the great Indra.

2 Hradā iva kuhshayah somadhanah; bellies, udarani, is used in the plural, to intimate capaciousness for holding the Soma.

SUKTA VIII. (XXXVII.)

DEITY and Rishi as before, the metre is Gāyatri, except in the last verse, in which it is Anushtubh.

1. WE excite thee, Indra, to exert the strength that destroys Vritra, and overpowers hostile armies.

2. May (thy) praisers, Indra, who art worshipped in a hundred rites,¹ direct thy mind and thine eyes towards us.

3. We recite, Indra, who art worshipped in a hundred rites, (thy many) [names in all our hymns for strength to resist our foes.

4. We repeat the praise of the many-lauded Indra the supporter of man, invested with a hundred glories.

5. I invoke thee, Indra, who art invoked of many for the slaying of Vritra, and the granting of food (as the spoil) of battle.

6. Be victorious, Indra, in battles: we solicit thee, object of many rites, to destroy Vritra.

7. Overcome, Indra, those who are adverse to us in riches, in battle, in hostile hosts, in strength.

8. Drink, Indra, object of many rites, for our preservation, the most invigorating, fame-conferring, sleep-dispelling,² Soma Juice.

9. Indra, object of many rites, I regard the organs of sense that exist in the five races (of beings dependent) on thee, as thine.

10. May³ the abundant (sacrificial) food (we offer) reach thee, Indra: grant us wealth that may not

1 S'atakratu is a name of Indra, or it may be used as an epithet, he to whom a hundred (i.e., many) sacrifices are offered, or by whom many great acts are performed.

2 According to Sayana, drinking the Soma is preventive of sleep, pitah somah swapnanivaraka.

easily be surpassed: we augment thy vigour (by our offerings.)

11. Come to us S'akra, whether from afar or nigh; whatever, Indra, wielder of the thunder-bolt, be thy region, come from thence hither.

SUKTA IX. (XXXVIII)

THE deity is Indra, associated in the last six verses with Varuna; the Rishi is Prajapati son of Vis'wamitra, or the son of Vach of the race of Vis'wamitra, either or both: or it may be Vis'wamitra alone: the metre is Trishtubh,

REPEAT (to Indra) pious praise, as a carpenter (planes the wood), and engaging (jealously in sacred rites), as a quick horse bearing well his burthen:¹ endowed with intelligence, and reflecting upon the future acts acceptable (to Indra) I desire to behold the sages (who have gone to heaven.)²

1 The institutor of the rite is supposed here to address the officiating priests, urging them to be diligent labourers, like the carpenter or the pack-horse.

2 Abhipriyani marmrisat parani kavin ichchhami sandrise: the meaning is not very obvious, and the coherence still less so, although we have the additional aid of the explanation of the passage in the Aitareya Brahmana, vi. 20: priyani is said by Sayana to be Indrasya priyatamani, and parani to imply uttamani, best and most dear to Indra, karmani, acts; or parani may mean the acts to be done on subsequent days, uttareshwahassu kriya-manani: kavi, which is usually explained kranta darsi, a seer of the past, is said to mean here a holy person who, for his assiduous devotion, has attained deification, yah purvam anushtithayajnad devabhuyam agamat; so the Brahmana, ye vai tena Rishayah purve pretas-te vai kavayah.

2. Ask of the lords (of earth, the holy teachers), the birth of those deified sages, who with well-governed minds and diligent in sacred rites, fabricated the heavens : and may these propitiatory (praises), augmenting (thy power) and rapid as the wind, reach thee at this solemn rite.

3. Comprehending hidden (mysteries) here on earth they have, through their power, made manifest (the things of) heaven and earth ; they have set limits to them by their elements ;¹ they connected them both mutually (united, wide spread and vast, and fixed the intermediate (firmament) to sustain them.

4. They all ornamented (Indra) standing (in his car) ; and, clothed in beauty, he proceeds self-radiant : wonderful are the acts of that showerer (of benefits), the influencer (of consciences), who omniscient, presides over the ambrosial (waters).

5. The showerer (of benefits), the preceder and elder (of the gods), generated (the waters) : they are the abundant allayers of his thirst : sovereign Indra and Varuna, grandsons of heaven, you possess the wealth (that is to be acquired) by the rite of the splendid sacrifice.

6. Royal Indra and Varuna, embellish the three universal sacrifices (and make them) full (of requisites) for this celebration : thou hast graciously accepted.

¹ Sam mátrabhir mamire, is explained, mītrābhiḥ sa yajāḥ iyattaya parichchhinne chakruh, with the elements they made determinate divisions of heaven and earth by so much, that is, to a definite limit or extent.

² The text has only asurasya : the comment explains it by prerakasya antaryāmitaya, impeller, from being in the inner spirit.

for I have beheld in my mind, at this solemnity, the Gandharvas with hair (waving) in the wind.¹

7. Those who, for (the sake of) the showerer (of benefits), milk the agreeable (produce) of the milch cow, (who is known) by (many) names, they invested with the diversified strength (of the Asuras) and practising delusive art, have deposited their own nature in him.²

8. No one (distinguishes) my golden lustre from that of this Savitri,³ in which (lustre) he has taken refuge: gratified by his pious [praise, he cherishes the all-fostering heaven and earth as a woman cherishes her offspring.

9. You two secure the great felicity of the ancient (worshipper), that which is happiness in heaven: do you (therefore) be ever about us: all those who exercise illusion,⁴ contemplate the manifold exploits of the everlasting and blandly-speaking Indra.

1 Gandharbhan vayukesan; the Gandharbas, according to the scholiast, are the guardians of the Soma, Somarakshakan: he quotes the Taittiriyaśas for the specification of similar beings, although the particular name is not given; Swanabhrajan bambhare, hasta, suhasta, krisanah, etc vah somakrayanas, tan rakshadhwam ma vo dabhan.

2 This stanza is singularly obscure, and is very imperfectly explained by the commentators.

3 Asya savitur nahir me: Savitri, according to the scholiast, here means Indra, sarvasya agato antaryamitaya prerayitur Indrasya, of Indra the impeller, through his being the internal pervader of the whole world: this verse is little less unintelligible than the preceding.

4 Viswe mayinah, the Scholiast explains, sarve devah, all the gods: Māya sometimes signifies wisdom, intelligence, so that, it might be rendered also the wise: in the ordinary sense of Maya it may mean all the deceivers, or Asuras: the whole of this Sukta is very obscure.

10. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

ANUVA'KA IV.

SUKTA I. (XXXIX.)

THE deity, Rishi, and metre the same.

THE praise that is prompted by the heart, and is uttered by the reciters of sacred hymns, proceeds to the presence of the lord, and is his awakener when repeated at the sacrifice: be cognizant Indra, of this praise, which is born for thee.

2. That praise which is begotten before (the dawn) of day is the awakener of Indra, when repeated at the (morning) sacrifice: auspicious and clothed in white raiment¹ is this our ancient and paternal hymn.²

3. The parent of twins (the dawn), has brought forth the twin (Aswins) on this occasion, (in the praise of whom) the tip of my tongue remains tremulous: they two, the dispensers of darkness, combine, assuming bodies as a pair (of twins) at the origin of the day.³

4. There are no revilers amongst men of those who were our progenitors and combatants for (the recovery of) the cattle; for the mighty Indra, the achiever of great deeds, liberated for them the numerous herds.

5. A friend, accompanied by the faithful friends who had celebrated the nine months'⁴ rite, and tracking

1 Bhadra vastrani arjuna vasana-vach: speech auspicious, wearing white garments, that is, tejansi, according to the scholiast, splendours, energies.

2 Pitrya dhih, pitrikramagata stuti, praise come in the succession of progenitors

3 The As'wins are especially worshipped at the morning ceremony.

4 The Angirases.

the cows upon their knees, and in like manner accompanied by those ten who had accomplished the ten months' rite,¹ Indra made manifest the true (light of the sun) (therefore) dwelling in (the) darkness (of the cave).

6. Indra discovered the sweet milk secreted in the milch-cow, and thereupon, brought forth (from their concealment the herd (of cattle) having feet and having hoofs : munificent (in gifts), he held in his right hand that which had been hidden in the cavern, which was concealed in the waters.²

7. The discriminating (Indra) has separated the light from the darkness : may we, removed afar from evil, be ever in security : Indra, drinker of the Soma Juice, who art nourished by the beverage, be pleased with these praises of thy worshipper who is the discomfiter of his foes.

8. May light be spread throughout heaven and earth for (the promotion of the) sacrifice : may we be far removed from exceeding ill : Vasus, who are to be rendered present (by pious praise), bestow increasing affluence upon the man who is liberal of gifts.

9. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

ADHYAYA III.

SUKTA II (XL.)

The deity and Rishi as before is Gayatri.

WE invoke thee, Indra,¹ showerer (of benefits), to the effused libation: do thou drink of the exhilarating beverage.

2. Indra, the praised of many, accept the effused Soma juice, the conferrer of knowledge: drink; imbibe² the satisfactory draught.

3. Indra, lord of men, who art praised (by the devout) and aided by the gods, perfect this our sacrifice in which the oblation is offered (to thee).

4. Indra, lord of the virtuous, these effused Soma juices, exhilarating and brilliant, proceed to thy abode.³

5. Receive, Indra, into thy stomach this excellent effused libation, these bright (drops) abide with thee in heaven.

¹ The commentary here gives various etymologies of the name Indra, taken from Yasha and the Taittiriya aranyaka, vis., he who sports (ramate) in the Soma juice (indu); or he who shows this (idam) universe; or he who divides (drinati), or gives (dadati), or takes (dadhati), or causes to worship (darayati), or possesses (dharayati spirituous liquor (iram), or whe runs or passes (dravati) the Soma juice (indau); or kindles or animates (inddhe) living beings; or he who beholds the pure spirit, or Brahma which is this (idam) univerae: the grammarians derive it from idi to rule with the affix ram.

² Vrishaswa, sprinkle, shower that is, into the stomach, so that it may not, according to the scholiast, descend betow the stomach.

³ Kshayam tava kshaya, an abode, here means Indra's belly, jathara.

6. Indra, who art glorified with praise, drink this our libation, for thou art sprinkled with the drops of the exhilarating (draught); the (sacrificial) food is verily purified by thee.

7. The brilliant and imperishable (Soma juice) offered by the worshipper, encompasses Indra: having drank of the libation, he increases (in vigour).

8. Slayer of Vritra, whether from nigh or from afar, come to us, accept these our praises.

9. Whether thou art called from nigh or from afar, or from mid space, come hither, Indra, from thence.

SUKTA III. (XLI.)

The deity, Rshi, and metre as before.

INDRA wielder of the thunderbolt, come to me with thy horses, when invoked to drink the Soma at our (sacrifice).

2. The invoking priest is seated at the proper season; the sacred grass woven together has been spread; the stones are placed in contact for the morning (libation).

3. Bearer of prayers,¹ these prayers are offered (by us): sit down on the sacred grass: partake, hero, of the oblation.

4. Slayer of Vritra, Indra, who art gratified by praise, be pleased with these our praises and prayers at our (our (daily) sacrifices).

¹ Brahmavahah, stotrani vahzti, who bears or receives praises; or it may mean brahmana stotrena prapyate, who is attained by praise or prayer.

5. Our praises caress the mighty Indra, the drinker of the Soma Juice, as cows lick their calves.

6. Be exhilarated bodily (by drinking) of the libation which we offer for the sake of ample wealth ; expose not thine adorer to reproach.

7. Devoted,¹ Indra, to thee, and offering oblations, we glorify thee, giver of dwellings : do thou be favourably disposed to us.

8. Lover of horses, Indra, loosen not yet steeds whilst far from us, but come (with them) to our presence : enjoyer of the offering, be exhilarated at this sacrifice.

9. May thy long-maned and sleek-coated steeds bring thee down in thy easy chariot to sit upon the sacred grass.

SUKTA IV. (XLII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

COME, Indra, to this effused Soma Juice mixed with milk and curds, with thy horses (yoked to thy car), which is favourably disposed to us.

2. Come, Indra, to the exhilarating (Soma) expressed by the stones, and poured upon the sacred grass : drink of it to satiety, for there is plenty.

3. May my praises, addressed from hence and in this manner, attain Indra, to bring him hither to drink the Soma Juice.

¹ Twayavah, from twam thou with kyach aff., converting it to Twayu : so, presently. asmayuh, devoted or inclined to us : these are not infrequent vaidik forms, but do not occur elsewhere.

4. We invoke Indra to this rite with prayers to drink the Soma Juice : may he, repeatedly invoked, come hither.

5. Indra, these Soma Juices are poured out : take them, S'atakratu, into thy stomach : thou who art rich in (abundant) food.

6. Far-seeing Indra, we know thee to be victorious and winner of wealth in battles ; therefore we ask of the riches.

7. Having come (to our rite) drink Indra, this our (libation), effused by the stones, and mixed with milk and curds, and with barley.

8. I offer to thee, Indra, this Soma Juice for thy drinking, to be taken into its proper receptacle : may it delight thy heart.

9. Descendants of Kusa, desirous of protection, we invoke thee, Indra, who art of old, to drink of the libation.

SUKTA V. (XLIII).

THE deity and Rishi are the same, the metre is Trishtubh.

DESCEND to us riding in thy car, for verily thine is this ancient libation : unharness thy beloved and friendly (horses) near to the sacred grass, for these offerers of the oblation present it to thee.

2. Passing by multitudes, come hither, noble Indra, with thy steeds, (to receive) our benedictions ; for these praises, Indra, composed by the devout, invoke thee, propitiating thy friendship.

3. Divine Indra, come quickly with thy steeds, and well-pleased, to our food-augmenting sacrifice : offering (sacred) food with butter, I invoke thee verily with praises in the chamber of the sweet libations.

4. May these two vigorous friendly burthen-bearing and well-limbed steeds convey thee hither, where, Indra, approving of the ceremony (in which the offering) is parched grain, may hear as a friend the praises of his friend (the worshipper).

5. Possessor of wealth, accept of the spiritless Soma Juice; make, me the protector, or rather a monarch of men;¹ make me verily a holy sage, a drinker of the libation; make me verily the possessor of imperishable wealth.

6. May the mighty horses, Indra, harnessed (in thy car), and alike exhilarated (by the beverage), bring thee to our presence, for they are the destroyers (of the foes) of the showerer (of benefits), and kindly rubbed by his hand they traverse, going quickly, the regions of the sky, making them as it were two-fold.²

7. Drink, Indra, of the bountiful (libation) expressed by the beneficent (stones); that which the falcon has borne to thee desiring it, in whose exhilaration thou hast set open the clouds.

1 Kuyid mam gopam karase janasya kuvid rajanam : kuvid is here explained by api, surely verily.

2 Pra ye dwita diva rinjanti; sarva diso dwita, dwidham yatha bhavati tatha prakarshena sadhayanti, they especially make all the quarters of the horizon double so that it (the sky) becomes two-fold: such is Sayana's explanation: what it means exactly it is difficult to comprehend.

3 This alludes to a legend briefly told in the Aitareya Brahmana, Panchika III. Adhyaya 13, and which is amplified by the scholiast on that work: the Soma plant grew formerly, it is said, only in heaven: Rishis and the gods considered how it might be brought down to earth, and desired the Chhandasas, the metres of the Vedas, to bring it: changing themselves to birds (Suparnas)

8. We invoke for our protection the opulent Indra, distinguished in this combat, the leader in the food-bestowing (strife), hearing (our praises), terrible in battles, the destroyer of foes, the conqueror of wealth.

SUKTA VI. (XLIV.)

THE deity and Rishi as before, the metre is Brihati.

MAY this desirable and gratifying Soma, thou hast expressed by the stones, be, Indra, for thee: ascend the verdant chariot, and with thy tawny (steeds) come to us.¹

2. Desiring (the Soma), thou honourest the dawn; desiring the Soma, thou hast lighted up the sun; knowing the discriminating (all our wishes), lord of the tawny steeds, thou augmentest upon us all (sorts of) prosperity.

they undertook the office: the only one who succeeded, however, was the Gāyatri, in the shape of a hawk (syeni), and she was wounded by an arrow shot by one of the Somapalas, or Gandharbas, the guardians of the Soma, thence termed Somabhrajas, which cut off a nail of her left foot: the ichor from the wound became the vasā or adeps of the burnt-offering: other metamorphoses are detailed.

1 The main purport of this hymn seems to be to ring the change on the derivatives of the root hri, to take, as in a former one it was upon those of the root vrish, or shower: thus we have haryatah, taking, captivating, desirable: harit, the stone that bruises the Soma plant; also, Indra's horses in the dual or plural, hari, harayah: again, harit, green, haryas'wah, he who has the horses called hari: haridhayasam, yellow rayed, hariyarpasam, green-coloured, and so on, in every one of the five verses.

3. Indra has upheld the yellow-rayed heaven ; the verdant tinted earth ; there is abundant pasture (for his steeds) in the two azure spheres of heaven and earth, between which Hari travels.

4. The azure-coloured showerer (of benefits) illumines as soon as born, the whole illuminous region : the lord of the tawny steeds holds in his hands the yellow weapon, the destroying thunder-bolt.

5. Indra has uncovered the desirable white-coloured fast-flowing Soma, effused by the expressing stones, and overlaid with the shining (milk and other liquids) in like manner as when, borne by his tawny steeds, he rescued the cattle.¹

2. The devourer of Vritra, the fracturer of the cloud, the sender of the waters, the demolisher of cities, Indra, the destroyer of powerful enemies, has mounted his chariot to urge his horses to our presence.

SUKTA VII. (XLV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same.

COME, Indra, with thy exulting 'peacock-haired' steeds ; let no persons detain thee, as (fowlers) throwing snares catch a bird : pass them by (quickly) as (travellers cross) a desert.³

1 Sayana cited another text in support of Indra's discovering or uncovering the hidden Soma, in which, however, the act is ascribed to Pushan.

2 Mayura-romabhih, with hair like the feathers of the peacock.

3, The verse occurs twice in the Sama-Veda, I. 246 : v. 1068 ; once in the Yajush, xx. 53. Mahadhara agrees with Sayana in the interpretation.

3. Thou cherishest the celebrator of the pious rites (thou fillest) the deep seas (with water); or as a careful herdsman (cherishes) the cows: (thou imbibest the Soma) as cows (obtain) fodder, (and the juices flow into thee) as rivulets flow into a lake.¹

4. Grant us riches, securing (us against foes) as a father bestows) his portion on (a son) arrived at maturity: send down upon us, Indra, wealth adequate (to our desires), as a crook brings down the ripe fruit from a tree

5. Thou art possessed of opulence, Indra; thou art the lord of heaven, auspicious and renowned: mayest thou who art adored of many, increasing in vigour, be to us a most (bountiful bestower) of food.

SUKTA VIII. (XLVI.)

THE deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Trishtubh.

VAST are the energies of thee, Indra, the warrior, (the showerer of benefits), the lord of wealth, the fierce; who art (both) young and old; the overcomer of foes, the undecaying, the wielder of the thunder-bolt, and who art mighty and renowned.

2. Adorable and powerful Indra, thou art great and magnificent, overcoming adversaries by thy prowess: thou alone art lord of all the world: do thou war (upon our enemies) and give safe dwellings to men.

¹ The verse is unintelligible without some such filling up of the several ellipses as the scholiast suggests: we may say, however, of it, as of many other passage, with Professor Benfey, doch bleibt die wendung dunkel: Sama-Veda, II. 1070: the same has also the preceding verse, II. 8069.

3. The resplendent and every way unlimited Indra, drinking the spiritless Soma Juice, far surpasses the elements, (far exceeds) the gods in power; he is more vast than heaven and earth, or the wide-spread spacious firmament.

4. The Soma juices daily poured out enter into the vast and profound Indra, fierce from his birth, all pervading, the protector of the pious (worshippers), as rivers flow into the sea.

5. Which Soma, Indra, the heaven and earth contain for thee, as a mother contains the embryo: shower (of benefits), the priests pour it out for thee, they purify it for thy drinking.

SUKTA IX. (XLVII)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same.

INDRA, attended by the Maruts, the showerer of benefits), drink the Soma offered after the other presentations, for thine exhilaration for battle: take into thy belly the (full) wave of the inebriating (Soma) for thou art lord of libations from the days of old.¹

2. Indra, hero, rejoicing with and accompanied by the host of Maruts drink the Soma, for thou art the slayer of Vritra, the sage; subdue our enemies, drive away the malevolent,² make us safe on every side from peril.

¹ Yajur-Veda, vii. 38: there is a slight variety of reading, pratipat for pradivat, which Mahidhara renders the first and other lunar days or tithis, until the full moon, during which offerings of Soma are daily presented: Yaska agrees with the Rich. Nir. iv. 8.

are those which (are situated) in superior mysterious rites.¹

6. The far-seeing beholder of mankind (the sun), surveys this heaven and earth, rejoicing when deficient in moisture in the womb of the waters (the firmament), both concurring in community (of function),² although they occupy various dwellings, like the diversified nests of a bird.

7. Common (in function),³ disjoined, of distant termination, they remain vigilant in a permanent station: being, as it were, sisters, and ever young: they therefore address each other by twin appellations.⁴

8. These two⁵ keep all born things discrete, and although comprehending the great divinities, are not distressed: all moving and stationary beings rest upon one (basis), whether animals, or birds, creatures of various kinds.

9. I consider at present the eternal and ancient sisterhood to us of thee, our great protectress and progenitrix,⁶ within whose vast and separated path thy eulogists, the gods, travel in their chariots.

1 In the latter case they are made known, it is said, by the Veda.

2 In the interchange of moisture.

3 Heaven and earth are the personifications here alluded to.

4 A'du bruvate mithunani nama: heaven and earth are designated together by urvi and other duplicate terms; urvyadibhirdwandwanamabhir, dyavaprithivyavuchyete.

5 Heaven and earth keep all that is born distinct or separate, by furnishing interval or space, avahasapradanena.

6 Mahah pitur janitur, jami tan nah is explained mahatyah palayitryah janayitryastava, of thee, that is, of the heaven; jami is put for jamitwam, or bhaginitwam, sisterhood, the condition of a relative or sister: this will not allow of pitri and janitri being rendered father and progenitor, else we have had Dyus, heaven, which is here addressed, characterized by the attributes.

10. I repeat this hymn, heaven and earth, to you and may the soft-bellied, fire-tongued Mitra, roya Varuna, the youthful Adityas, all cognizant of the past, and proclaiming (their own acts),¹ hear it.

11. The golden-handed, soft-tongued Savitri is descending from heaven (to be present) thrice (daily) at the sacrifice : accept, Savitri, the praise (recited by) the worshippers, and thereupon grant to us all our desires.

12. May the divine Twashtri, the able artificer the dextrous-handed, the possessor of wealth, the observer of truth, bestow upon us those things (which are necessary) for our preservation : Ribhus, associated with Pushan, make us joyful, as they (the priests), with uplifted stones, prepare the sacred libation.

13. May the Maruts, whose cars are the lightning, who are armed with spears, resplendent, destroyers of foes, from whom the waters proceed, (who are) un-resting and adorable, and may Saraswati hear (my prayer); and may you (Maruts), speedy in your liberality, bestow (upon us) riches and good offspring.

14. May (our) praises and prayers, the causes of good fortune, attain at this sacrifice Vishnu, the object of many rites : he, the wide-stepping ; whose commands the many-blending regions of space, the generators (of all beings), do not disobey.

15. Indra, invested with all energies, has filled both heaven and earth with his greatness : do thou, who art the destroyer of cities, the slayer of Vritra, the leader of a conquering host, collect cattle and bestow them abundantly upon us.

16. Nasatyas, my protectors, inquirers (after the wishes) of your kinsman, beautiful is your cognate appellation of Aswins: be to us the liberal donors of riches: do you, who are irresistible, protect the offer (of the oblation) with unblameable (defences).

17. Sages acquainted with the past, excellent is that beautiful appellation¹ under which you have both become gods (the sphere of) Indra: do thou, Indra, the invoked of many, a friend, (associated) with the beloved Ribhus, shape this prayer for our benefit.

18. May Aryaman, Aditi, the adorable (gods), and the unimpeded functions of Varuna (protect) us: keep us from (following) the course unpropitious to offspring² and may our dwelling be abundant in progeny and cattle.

19. May the messenger of the gods, engendered in many places, everywhere proclaim us void of offence: may earth and heaven, the waters, the sun, and the vast firmament, with the constellations, hear us.

20. May the (divine) showers (of benefits), the deities of the mountains, and those abiding in fixed habitations,³ propitiated by the sacrificial food, hear us:

1 Charu nama may be explained agreeable or acceptable act or devotion, nama karma namanam va, charu, manoharam; by which the As'wins attained deification, yena devatwam prapnutha; but in the preceding verse we have the similar phrase, sajatyam charu nama, explained sajate bhavam kamaniyam, desirable cognate appellation.

2 Yuyota no anapatyani gantoh: anapatyani is explained putranam ahitani harmani tan margat prithak kuruat.

3 Dhruvakshemasah, nis'chalasthanah, those of fixed places: it may be, perhaps, an epithet of the preceding parvatasah.

may Aditi, with the Adityas, hear us : may the Maruts grant us auspicious felicity.

21. May our path ever be easy of going, and provided with food : sprinkle, gods, the 'plants with sweet water : (safe) in thy friendship, Agni, may my fortune never be impaired, but may I occupy a dwelling (abounding) with riches and ample food.

22. Taste (Agni) the oblations : make manifest or us) abundant food : measure out the viands before us : thou overcomest all those (who are) our enemies in conflict : favourably inclined towards us lighten up all our (ceremonies) day by day.

SUKTA II. (LV)

The deities are the Viswadevas ; the Rishi is Prajapati ; the metro Trishtubh.

WHEN the preceding dawns appear the great :imperishable (light) is engendered in the (firmament the) sphere of the waters, and then the worshipper is alert to perform the rites (due to) the gods, for great and unequalled is the might of the gods.¹

2. Let not the gods, Agni, now do us harm, nor the ancient progenitors, who have come to know the degree (of divinity) ; nor the manifester of light between the two ancient dwellings (earth and heaven,

1 Mahad-devanam asuratwam ekam is the burthen of this and the following stanzas : asuratwam is the abstract from asura, explained strong, powerful, prabala, from asyati, who or what throws or impels all things or beings, asyati, kshipati sarvan : the abstract is prabalyam or ais'waryam, might or sovereignty : ekam, one, is explained mukhyam, chief.

the sun); for great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

3. Variously do my manifold desires alight: present at the solemnity, recite ancient (hymns): when the fire is kindled we speak indeed the truth, for great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

4. The universal sovereign¹ is conveyed to many directions: he sleeps in the places of repose: he is connected with the forests: one mother (heaven) nourishes the child; the other (earth) gives him a dwelling: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

5. Existing in ancient plants,² abiding afterwards in new, he enters into the young (herbs) as soon as they are produced: unimpregnated they become pregnant and bear fruit: 'great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

6. The child of two mothers sleeps in the west, but (in the morning) the single infant proceeds unobstructed (through the sky): these "are the functions of Mitra and Varuna:" great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

7. The child of two mothers, the invoker of the gods at sacrifices, the univereal sovereign, proceeds thence forward (in the sky): the root (of all), he abides (in the house of the pious): the reciters of pleasant (words) offer him agreeable (praises): great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

1 Samano raja may imply either Agni or the Soma.

2 Said either of Agni or the sun.

3 Mitra presiding over the day, Varuna over the night, but both being forms of one Agni.

8. All (creatures) approaching too near his confines are beheld with their faces turned away as (an enemy) flies from a combatant: obvious (to all), he penetrates the water for its destruction: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

9. In those (plants) the aged messenger (of the gods) constantly abides: mighty, he passes with the radiant (sun) through the regions of space; assuming various form he looks complacently upon us: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

10. Pervading and protecting (all), possessing grateful and immortal radiance, he preserves the supreme path (of the rains), for Agni knows all these worlds: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

11. The twin pair (day and night) adopt various forms: one of them shines brightly, the other is black: twin sisters are they, one black and the other white: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

12. Where the mother and the daughter, two productive milch kine, unite, they nourish each other:¹ I worship them both in (the firmament), the dwelling of the waters: great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

13. Licking the calf of the other, one of them lows aloud: the milch cow offers her udder for the one that is without moisture (the earth), and she (the earth) is refreshed, by the milk of the rain:² great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

1 Earth and heaven by the interchange of moisture.

2 This is rather obscurely expressed: the calf is said to be Agni; the cow with milk is the sky, whose udder the cloud,

14. The earth¹ wears bodies of many forms : she abides on high² cherishing her year and a half old (calf) :³ knowing the abode of the truth⁴ (the sun), I I offer worship : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

15. Like two (distinguishing) impressions, they (day and night) are placed visible in the midst (between heaven and earth), one hidden, one manifest : the path (of both) is common, and that is universal for good and evil) : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

16. May the milch kine⁵ without their young, abiding (in the heaven), and though unmilked, yet yielding milk, and ever fresh and youthful, be shaken) (so as to perform their functions) : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

17. When the showerer roars in other (regions) he sends down the rain upon a different herd,⁶ for he whence the rain of which the earth is in want descends ; Ritasya sa payasa pinvatela, is also explained Jalav arjita prithivy- adityasyodakena sikta bhavati varshakale, the earth without water is sprinkled by the water of the sun in the rainy season.

1 The text has Padya, which Sayana explains Bhumi, deriving it from pad, or foot, the earth, according to a text of the 10th Mandala, having been created from the feet of the Creator : the 10th Mandala, however, is of questionable authority.

2 On the altar.

3 Tryavim, sarddhasamvatsaravayasho vatsah, a calf a year and a half old ; i.e., the sun of that period, or it may apply to the sun, as the protector (avih) of the three tri worlds.

2 Ritasya sadman, Satyabhutasyadityasya sthanam, the place of the sun, who is one with the truth.

5 Either the regions of space or the clouds.

6 Anyasmin yuthe, a herd, or troop, of regions, according to Sayana, disam vrinde.

is the victor, the auspicious, the sovereign : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

18. We proclaim, people, the wealth of the hero, (Indra), in horses ; the gods know his (affluence) ; six, or five and five, harnessed to his ear, convey him ; great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

19. The divine Tvashtri, the impeller (of all), the multiform, has begotten and nourished a numerous progeny, for all these worlds are of him : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

20. He has filled the two vast receptacles¹ (heaven and earth) united (with creatures) : they are both penetrated by his lustre : the hero spoiling the treasures (of the foe) is renowned : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

21. Our king, the nourisher of all, abides (in the firmament) nearest to this earth like a benevolent friend : the valliant (Maruts) precedes him (when abroad), and dwell in his mansion ; great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

22. The plants, Indra, come to perfection by thee ; from thee the waters (flow) ; earth bears her treasures for thee : may we, thy friends, be sharers of these blessings : great and unequalled is the might of the gods.

¹ Sholha yuktah panchapancha vahanti, that is, either the six seasons of the year, or, by combining the cold and dewy seasons, five : these are figuratively Indra's horse.

² Chambvau, the two vessels in which gods and men eat. chamanty adanty anayor devamanushyah : this would imply vessels or ladies, but the scholiast also proposes, the two that are eaten or enjoyed by living beings ; that is, heaven and earth.

ADHYAYA IV.

SUKTA III. (LVI.)

The deities are the Viswadevas ; the Rishi is Prajapati ; the metre Trishtubh.

1. Neither the deceptive nor the resolute interrupt the primitive and permanent operations of the gods, nor do the innocuous heaven and earth (interrupt them), nor are the mountains standing (on the earth) to be bowed down.¹

2. One stationary (year) sustains six burthens (in the seasons) ; the (solar) rays spread through that true and extensive (term) ; three revolving spheres are severally above, two of which are placed in secret, and one is visible.²

3. The three-breasted,³ the showerer (of rain,) the omniform, the three-uddered, the parent of multiform progeny, the possessor of magnitude, followed by three hosts (the year), advances, the vigorous impregnator of the perpetual plants.

1 The condition of all created things in earth and heaven, and the elevation of the mountains, are the work of the gods, and no one can make them otherwise.

2 Heaven and the firmament are not wholly discernible, earth is.

3 That is, as subsequently specified, the year, personified : the number three, repeatedly mentioned, is said to apply to the seasons of the year, reduced from the usual number of six to three, the hot, rainy, and cold, by merging into them, severally, the vernal, autumnal, and dewy.

4. (The year) is awake, the path in the vicinity of those (plants): I call upon the beautiful name of the Adityas ;¹ the divine waters wandering severally (now) give it delight, and (now) depart from it.⁶

5. Rivers, the dwelling-places of the intelligent gods are thrice three :⁵ the measurer of the three (worlds)⁴ is the sovereign at sacrifices : three female (divinities)⁶ of the waters charged with the rains descend from heaven at the thrice (repeated) solemnity.

6. Savitri, descended from heaven, bestow upon us blessings thrice every day : Bhaga, saviour, grant us thrice a day riches of three elements :⁶ *Dhishana*⁷ enable us to acquire (wealth).

7. May Savitri bestow upon us wealth at the (three periods) of the day, for the well-handed Mitra and Varuna, the waters, the vast heaven and earth, solicit precious things from the liberality of Savitri.

8. Three are the excellent uninjurable bright regions,⁸ three scions of the powerful (year) are shining ;⁹ practisers of truth, quick moving, of surpassing

1 That is, according to the scholiast, upon the months over which the twelve Adityas preside.

2 During the four months of the year when the rains fall the rivers are filled ; during the other eight they are more or less dried up.

3 Each of the three Lokas has three divisions : this is a piece of information addressed to the rivers, Sindhavah being in the vocative case.

4 The sun or the year.

5 The scholiast says they are Ila, Saraswati, and Bharati.

6 Tridhatu rayas, cattle, gold, and gems.

7 The goddess of speech.

8 Heaven, earth, firmament.

9 Agni, Vayu, and Surya, according to Sayana : the text calls them asurasya vira : asurah is explained kalatma samvat sara, the year, identical with time ; tasya putrah, its sons.

radiance : may the deities be present thrice daily at the sacrifice.

SUKTA IV. (LVII.)

The deities, are the Aswins ; the Rishi, and metre as before.

MAY the discriminating Indra apprehend may glorification (of the gods), which is (free) as a milch cow, grazing alone, without a cowerd, one who is readily milked, yielding abundant nourishment, and of whom Agni and Indra (and we), are the commenders.

2. Indra and Pushan, the showerers (of benefits), and the happy-handed Aswins, well affected towards us, have milked the (cloud) reposing in heaven ; wherefore, Vasus, universal deities, sporting on this (alter), may I here obtain the happiness derived from you.

3. The plants that desire for the showerer (Indra) the power (of sending rain) appreciate, when manifest, the embryo (blossom) deposited in him : the kine desirous of reward come to the presence of the calf, invested with many froms.¹

4. I glorify with praise the beautiful heaven and earth, taking in hand the stones (to express the libation) at the sacrifice, as these thy graceful, adorabe, and many-blessing rays (Agni) mount up for the good of man.

5. With they wide-spreading tongue, Agni, sweet and intelligeut, which is renowned amongst the god's, bring hither all the adorable deities for our protection, and give them to drink of the sweet libations).

¹ The vegetable world, as characterized by rice, barley, wild rice, and the like ; vrihiyavanivaradi-phala lakshanam, putram, tanayam, vatsam iva.

6. Divine Agni, giver of dwellings, knower of all that exists, to us that benevolence which, unshared by others, cherishes us like the showers of the rain-cloud that kindness which is beneficent for all mankind.

SUKTA V (LVIII.)

The deities are the Aswins ; the Rishi and metre as before.

THE milch-cow (the dawn) yields the desired milk to the ancient (Agni) ; the son of the south¹ passes within (the firmament) ; the bright-houred (day) brings the illuminative (sun) : the praiser awakes (to glorify) the Aswins preceding the dawn.

2. The well-yoked (horses) bear you both in your truth-(preserving car) : the offerings proceed towards you as (children to their parents) : discored! from us the disposition of the niggard : we have made ready for you our offering : come to our presence.

3. Dasras, with well yoked horses and well-constructed car, hear this praise of the worshipper, for have not the ancient sages declared you, Aswins, to be most ready to come to the aid of the destitute.

4. If you regard (my prayer), come with your quick steeds : all men, Aswins, invoke you : to you they offer the sweet (Soma) juice mixed with milk, as friends (give gifts to friends) : the sun is in advance, (therefore come to the rite).

5. Eclipsing (by your splendour) many regions, Aswins, (come hither) ; loud praise awaits you opulent

¹ Dakshinayah putrah ; that is, Ushasah putrah Suiya, the sun, the son of the dawn.

(Aswins) amongst men : come to this rite by the paths traversed by the gods : here. Dasras. are ample stores of the exhilarating juices.¹

6. Your ancient friendship is desirable and auspicious ; your wealth, leaders (of rites), is in the family of Jahnu :² renewing that auspicious friendship, may we your associates, delight you with the sweet (Soma juice).

7. Aswins, endowed with power, ever young, in whom is no untruth, unwearied, munificent, accepters (of libations), drink with Vayu and your steeds, rejoicing together, of the Soma libation offered at the close of day.

8. Aswins, abundant (sacrificial) viands are presented to you, and blameless worshippers (salute you) with praises : your water-shedding car, attracted by the sacrificers, quickly compasses earth and heaven.

9. Aswins, this most sweet : Soma is mixed ; drink it : come to (our) dwelling : your car, repeatedly bestowing wealth is coming to the appointed place³ of the offerer of the libation.

1 Nidhayo madhunam : according to Sayana, nidhi is here a kind of vessel, patravisesah.

2 Yuvor dravinam Jahnvyam : the latter is derived from Jahnu, and is explained merely by Jahnukulajayam, in her born in the race of Jahnu : it might imply the Ganges, Jáhnvi, if we had reason to suppose the legend of her origin from Jahnu was known to the Vedas : of course it was familiar to Sayana.

3 Nishkritam, according to Yâsha, Nir. xii. 7, is the place of agreement, nir ityeshah samityetasya sthâne : it may be rendered by griha, house.

SUKTA VI. (LIX.)

The deity is Mitra ; the Rishi, Viswamitra ; the metre of the first five verses is Trishtubh, of the last four Gāyatri.

MITRA,¹ when praised animates men to exertion Indra sustains both the earth and heaven : Mitra looks upon men with unclosing eyes : offer to Mitra the oblations of clarified butter.

2. May that mortal enjoy abundance, Mitra, who present thee, Aditya, (whith offerings) at the sacred rite ; protected by thee he is not harmed ; he is not overcome by any one ; sin reaches him not, either from afar or nigh.

3. May we, exempt from disease, rejoicing in (adundant) food, roaming free² over the wide (expanse) of the earth, diligent in the worship of Aditya, ever be in the good favour of Mitra.

4. This Mitra has been engendered adorable and to be served, the sovereign (over all), endowed with vigour, the creator (of the universe) ; may we ever be in the good favour, in the auspicious approbation, of this adorable (Aditya).

5. The great Aditya, the animator of men to exertion, is to be approached with reverence : he is the giver of happiness to him who praises him : offer with fire the acceptable libation to that most glorifiable Mitra

1 Mitra is said here to signify the sun, he who is measured or appreciated (miyate) by all, and who preserves (trayate) the world, by bestowing rain : much the same rendering of the text is given by Yāska, Nir. x. 22.

2 Mitajnavah ; mitajanuka, with measured knees, literally ; which Sayana explains, yatha kamam sarvatragachchhantah, going everywhere at pleasure.

6. Desirable food and most renowned wealth¹ are (the gifts) of the divine Mitra, the supporter of man.

7. The renowned Mitra, who by his might presides over heaven, is he who presides over the earth by (the gift of) food.

8. The five classes of men have repaired to the victorious Mitra, for he supports all the gods.

9. Mitra is he who amongst gods and men bestows food as the reward of pious acts upon the man who has prepared (for him) the lopped sacred grass.

SUKTA VII. (LX.)

The deities of the first four verses are the Ribhus, of the three last Indra; the Rishi is Visvāmitra; the metre Yagati.

YOUR connexion² (with the consequences of acts) Ribhus is here (acknowledged) by the minds of all: desiring their share (of the sacrifice), oh men, they have come with a knowledge (of their claims) to the (rites): the sons of Sudhanwan, with the devices by which they

1 Vajush 11. 62: Mahidhara renders avah by its more usual sense of protection, not as Sāyana, annam, food; and dyumnam, which the latter renders by dhanam, wealth, the former makes either fame or food, yāso annam vā: the epithet sanasi, which Sayana makes sarvaih sambhajaniyam, Mahidhara explains, sanātanam, eternal, upon the authority of Yaska, who includes it, he says, among the synonymes of purāna, old: it is not, however, found there, Nigh iii. 27.

2 Vo bandhuta might mean, your affinity or friendship, but the scholiast explains it, they who connect acts with their fruits, badhnanti phalena karmani.

are victorious over foes, you have accepted the share of the sacrifice.¹

2. With those faculties by which you have divided the ladles ; with that intelligence wherewith you have covered the (dad) cow with skin ; with that will by which you have fabricated the two horses (of Indra) ; with those (means), Ribhus, you have attained divinity.

3. The Ribhus, the performers of (good) works, the grandsons of a man, have attained the friendship of Indra : they have perpetuated (existence) :² the sons of Sudhanwan have attained immortality : performers of pious acts influencing (the result), through their devotion (they have attained divinity) by their works.

4. Go with Indra in his chariot when the libation is poured out, and be (welcomed) with honour by the (worshipper) desiring (your favour) : Ribhus, sons of Sudhanwan, bestowers (of the rewards of pious acts) your virtuous deeds, your great faculties, are not to be measured.

1 Yajniyam bhagam anasa : Sayana here explains the verb as if it were in the second pers. plur. of the reduplicate preterite, yuyam vyaptah stha, you have pervaded, the Veda conjugating as in the Parasmaipada, instead of Atmanepada, as is usual : so in the Parasmaipada, instead of Atmanepada, as is usual : so in the third stanza we have samanasire : the passage has been cited in a former page, vol. 1. p. 49, note, and is there somewhat incorrectly translated : in Sukta 161, v. 6, we have yajniyam bhagam aitana explained also prapnuta, obtain : see the hymns to the Ribhus in the first volume p. 45, and second volume, p. 107 : also Grammar, 2nd Ed. p. 241.

2 Dadhanvire, as in the former case adharavanta, vol. 1. p. 49 has no accusative : the scholist, as before, supplies pranan, vitality, meaning immortal life, as follows.

5. Indra, along with the food-bestowing Ribhus, accept with both hands the (cup of the) effused soma libation : exalted Maghavan, by worship, rejoice with the human sons of Sudhanwan in the dwelling of the donor (of the offering).

6. Indra, the praised of many, associated with Ribhu, and with Vaja, exult with Sachi,¹ at this our sacrifice : these self-revolving (days) are devoted to thee, as well as the ceremonies (addressed) to the gods, and the virtuous acts of man.

7. Indra, with the food-bestowing Ribhus rewarding (worship) with food,² come hither to (receive) the reverential praise of the adorer, with a hundred quick-going steeds, the indications, (of the Maruts) : come to the burn offering of the sacrifice, yielding a thousand blessings to the sacrificer.

SUKTA VIII. (LXI.)

The deity is Ushas, the dawn ; the Rishi as before ; the metre Trishtubh.

AFFLUENT Ushas, giver of sustenance, possessed of intelligence, be propitiated by the praise of him who lauds thee, (and worships) with (sacrificial) food ; divine Ushas, adored by all, who (though) ancient art (still) young, the object of manifold worship, thou art present at the recurring (morning) rite.

1 Or Sachi may mean karman, act, rite.

2 Ribhubhir vajibhir vajayan, implies a quibble upon the word vaja ; which is the name of one of the Ribhus, put for all, but means, in its more usual sense, food.

2. Ushas, who art divine and immortal, mounted in a golden chariot, do thou shine radiant, causing to be heard the sounds of truth¹ may they vigorous and well-trained horses bring thee, who art golden-haired (hither).

3. Ushas, who spreadest over all the regions, thou abidest on high, the ensign of the immortal (sun), purposing to travel the same road, repeatedly turn back ever new, (revolving) like a wheel.

4. The opulent Ushas, the bride of the far-darting (sun), throwing off (darkness) like a garment, proceeds : diffusing her own (lustre), auspicious, promoting sacred acts, she is renowned to the ends of the heaven and of the earth.

5. Offer, with your prostrations, due praises to the divine Ushas, shining upon you : the repository of sweetness² manifests her brightness aloft in the sky, and, radiant and lovely, lights the regions.³

6. The possessor of truth is recognised in the sky by her rays : the possessor of wealth has taken a marvellous stations in earth and heaven : Agni, soliciting alms of the radiant advancing Ushas, thou obtainest thy desired treasure (of oblations).⁴

1 Sunritā irayanti : the phrase has occurred before, where it is rendered, awakener of pleasant voices, in the sense explained note p. 297, the dawn exciting or awakening the true or agreeable cries of beasts and birds.

2 Madhudha rather puzzles the scholiast : madhu may mean, he says, sweet words of praise, madhurāni stutīlakṣhanāni vakyaṇi, or simply praise, stoma ; 'or, without referring to its etymology, it may be a name of Ushas : dhā is that which has or holds.

3 As in S. 49, N. 4. of the first Ashtaka.

4 That is, the sacrificial fire is kindled at dawn.

7. The showerer (of rain, the sun), urging on the dawn, at the root of the truthful (day)¹ hast pervaded the vast heaven and earth: the mighty Ushas, the golden light, as it were, of Mitra and Varuna, diffuses here lustre in different directions.

SUKTA IX. (LXII.)

This hymn is divided into six Trichas or triplets, the deities of which are severally, Indra and Varuna, Brihaspati, Pushan, Savitri, Soma, and Mitra and Varuna: Viswamitra is the Rishi, or, according to some, the last triplet is ascribed to Jamadagni: the metre of the three first stanzas is Trishtubh, of the rest Gáyatri.

INDRA and Varuna, may these people who are relying upon you, and wandering about (in alarm), sustain no injury from a youthful (adversary; for where is that reputation (you enjoy) on account that you bestow sustenance on your friends.

1. Most diligent (in pious rites) this (your worshipper), Indra and Varuna, desirous of wealth, incessant ly invokes you for protection: associated with the Maruts, with heaven and earth, hear my invocation.

3. May there be to us, Indra and Varuna, such wealth (as we covet): may there be, Maruts, to us wealth (of cattle) and numerous descendants: may the delightful (wives of the gods)² shelter us with dwellings: may Hotra and Bharati (enrich) us with gifts.

1 Ritasya satyabhutasya: it is identified with truth as the season of the performance of religious rites.

2 The text has only Varutrih: the scholiast explains it sarvaih sambhajaniya, devapatnyah, to be admired by all; the wives of the gods; which agrees with the specification of the two goddesses that follows.

4. Bṛihaspati, friend of all the gods, accept our oblations : grant precious treasures to the offerer.

5. Adore the pure Bṛihaspati at sacrifices with hymns : I solicit of him unsurpassable strength-

6. The showerer (of benefits) on men, the omniform, the irreproachable, the excellent Bṛihaspati.

7. Divine, resplendent, Pushan, this, they most recent laudation, is uttered by us to thee.

8. Be pleased by this my praise, and incline to this food-supplicating laudation as an uxorious (husband) to his wife.

9. May that Pushan, who looks upon all the worlds, who thoroughly contemplates them, be our protector.

10. We meditate on that desirable light of the divine Savitri, whp influences our pious rites.¹

1 This is the celebrated verse of the Vedas which forms part of the daily devotions of the Brahmins, and was first made known to English readers by Sir W. Jones translation of a paraphrastic interpretation : he renders it, Let us adore the supremacy of that divine sun, the godhead, who illuminates all, who recreates all, from whom all proceed, to whom all must return, whom we invoke to direct our understandings aright in our progress towards his holy seat (Works, Svo. vol. [xiii. p 362] : the text is merely fat savitur varenyam bhargo devasya dhimahi, dhio yo nah prachodayāt : the last member may be also rendered, who may animate or enlighten our intellects : the verse occurs in the Yajusa, III. 35, and in the Sāman, II. 8, 12 : both commentators are agreed to understand by Savitri, the soul, at one with the soul of the world, Brahma, but various meanings are also given : thus, Sāyana has, we meditate on the light which is one with Brahma, his own light, which, from its consuming influence on ignorance and its consequences, is termed Bhargas and is one which is desirable, from its being to be known or worshipped by all (varenyam) the property of the supreme being, (paramaswara), the creator of the world, and the

11. Desirous of food, we solicit with praise, of the divine Savitri, the gift of affluence.

12. Devout and wise men, impelled by intelligence, adore the divine Savitri with sacrifices and sacred hymns.

13. Soma, knowing the right path, proceeds (by it) : he goes to the excellent seat of the gods, the place of sacrifice.

14. May Soma grant to us and to (our) biped and quadruped animals, wholesome food.

15. May Soma, prolonging our lives and overcoming our adversaries, sit down in our place of sacrifice.

16. Mitra and Varuna, sprinkle our cow-stalls with butter ; performers of good works (sprinkle) the worlds with honey.¹

animator, impeller, or urger (savitri), through the internally abiding spirit (antaryāmi) of all creatures : again, yah, although masculine, may, by Vaidik licence, be the relative to the neuter noun bhargys, that light which animates all (dhiyah) acts, (karmani), or illumines all understandings (buddhih) : again, devasya savituh may mean, of the bright or radiant sun, as the progenitor of all, sarvasya prasavitur, and bhargas may be understood as the sphere or orb of light, the consumer of sins, papanam tapakam tejo-mandalam : again, bhragas may be interpreted, food, and the prayer may only implore the sun to provide sustenance, tasya prasādā annadilakshanam phalam dhimahi, tasya adharabhutā bhavema, we anticipate from his favour the reward that is characterized by food and the like, that is, may we be supported by him : Mahidhara, in his comment on the same text in the Yajush, notices similar varieties of interpretation.

1 Ghrítair gavyutim ukshatam, madhva rajansi ; gavyuti is explained either gavam margam, or gonivasasthanam, and the prayer implies, according to the scholiast, give us cows abounding in milk : the verse occurs in the Yajur and Samavedas : the commentator on the former explains Gavyuti either the path or

17. Performers of pure rites, glorified by many, exalted by adoration, (celebrated) by prolonged praises, you reign by the greatness of (your) strength.

18. Glorified by Jamadagni, sit down in the place of sacrifice (the altar); drink, augmenters (of the reward) of sacrifice, the Soma libation.¹

a field, and, in the latter case, explains, ghritaih pure water, sprinkle our pastures with rain : Mr. Stevenson accordingly renders it, irrigate the pasture lands with showers, and refresh with waters the two worlds.

¹ These two last verses occur also in the Sama-Veda 11. 14, 15 : as the author of the hymn is Viswamitra, the scholiast proposes another interpretation of Jamadagninā, as an epithet of Viswamitra, he by whom the fire has been kindled : see former note, Sukta liii. v. 13.

MANDALA IV.

ANUVA'KA I.

SUKTA I.

THE deity is Agni, or, it may be, Varuna in the second, third, and fourth stanzas : the Rishi is VāmaDeva : the metre of the first verse is Ashti ; of the second, Atijagati ; of the third, Dhriti ; and Trishtubh of the rest.

SINCE the emulous gods ever excite thee,¹ Agni, who art a deity swift of motion, (to contest), therefore do (thy worshippers) urge thee by their devotions (to bring the deities to their sacrifices) : adorable Agni, they (the deities), have generated thee, immortal, divine, all-wise, as the present divinity among men : they have generated thee as the all present and all-wise deity.²

2. Bring to the presence of the worshippers, Agni, thy brother Varuna, as a participator of the sacrifice, with a willing mind, the elder participator of the sacrifice ; the ruler of the water, the Aditya, the supporter of men, the sovereign venerated by mankind.

3. Friendly and beautiful (Agni), bring thy friend (Varuna) to our presence, as two strong horses convey

1 Samanyavo devasas twam nyerire : samanyavah is explained by the scholiast, spardhamanah, vicing with.

2 We have in this and the next stanza the same device that has occurred in the 237th and following Suktas of the first Mandala, which are written in the same long and complex metre, the repetition at the end of the line of the three or four preceding words : thus we have here, adevam janata prachetasam, viswam adevam janata prachetasam, with the sense partially modified in the repetition, at least according to the scholiast.

the swift chariot along the road to its goal thou receivest, Agni, the gratifying (oblation) together with Varuna, and with the all-illuminating Maruts: grant, brilliant Agni, happiness to our sons and grand-sons; grant, beautiful Agni, happiness, to ourselves.

4. Mayest thou, Agni, who art wise, avert from us the wrath of the divine Varuna: do thou, who art the most frequent sacrificer, the most diligent bearer (of oblations), the most resplendent, liberate us from all animosities.

5. Do thou, Agni, our preserver, be most nigh to us with thy protection at the breaking of this dawn deprecate Varuna for us,¹ and, propitiated (by our praise), feed upon the grateful (oblation), and be to us of auspicious invocation.

6. The glance of this auspicious deity, directed towards men, is most excellent, most wonderful, acceptable (to all), as the pure warm butter (from the milk) of the cow (is acceptable) to the deity; as the gift of a milch-cow (is to a man).

7. These are the supreme, true, and desirable births of this divine Agni,² invested (with radiance) in the unbounded (firmament: pure, bright, radiant lord (of all), may he come (to our) sacrifice.

1 Ava yakshva no Varunam: Sayana explains the verb by vinasaya destroy, and the object is Varuna kritam, that which has been done by Varuna, as disease inflicted by him, such as dropsy; or the term may imply pāpam, sin: this and the preceding occur, Yajush, xxi. 3, 4.

2 As Agni, Vayu, and Surya, or it may refer to the places of his manifestation, or earth, firmament, and heaven: see vol. i. p. 248, v. 3.

8. The messenger the invoker (of the gods), riding in a golden chariot with a tongue of flame, he frequents all the chambers (of sacrifice); drawn by red horses, embodied, resplendent, always agreeable, as a dwelling well supplied with food.

9. Associated with sacrifice, and knowing those men (who are engaged in good works), they lead him with the strong cord (of praise): he, the divine Agni, fulfilling (all desires), abides in the dwelling of this mortal, and obtains fellowship in his wealth.

10. May that wise Agni conduct us to that wealth which is desired by the devout; he whom all the immortals have created for (the performance of) sacred rites; of whom heaven is the parent and progenitor, and whom (the priests) verily sprinkle (with oblations).

11. He is first engendered in the habitations (of the sacrificers; then upon his station, (the altar), the base of the vast firmament; without feet, without head, concealing his extremities, combining with smoke in the nest of the rain-cloud.

12. Radiance has first proceeded to thee (Agni), who art glorified by praise, in the womb of the water, in the nest of the rain-cloud: the seven attached (priests) have engendered (praise) to the showerer (of benefits), who is desirable, ever young, embodied, and resplendent.

13. In this world our mortal forefathers¹ departed after instituting the sacred rite, when, calling upon the dawn, they extricated the milk-yielding kine, concealed among the rocks in the darkness (of the cave).

¹ The Angirasas : the purport of his and the next verse is obviously the attribution of the origin of fire-worship to Angiras and his followers.

14. Rending the rocks, they worshipped (Agni), and other (sages) taught every where their (acts): unprovided with the means of (extricating) the cattle, they glorified the author of success, whence they found the light, and were thus enabled (to worship him) with holy ceremonies.

15. Devoted (to Agni), those leaders (of sacred rites), with minds intent upon (recovering) the cattle, forced open, by (the power) of divine prayer, the obstructing, compact, solid mountain confining the cows, a cow-pen full of kine.

16. They first have comprehended the name of the kine,¹ knowing the thrice seven excellent (forms) of the maternal (rhythm);² then they glorified the conscious dawns, and the purple dawn appeared with the radiance of the sun.

17. The scattered darkness was destroyed; the firmament glowed with radiance; the lustre of the divine dawn arose: then the sun stood above the undecaying mountains, beholding all that was right or wrong among mankind.

18. Thereupon awaking, the (Angirāsas) beheld (the cattle set free), and seized upon the precious treasures: the universal gods then came to all (their) dwellings: Mitra and Varuna may your truth be (kept) to him who worships (you).

1 Te manwata prathamam nama dhenoh : according to Sayana, dhenoh may mean vach, speech, and with nama, stutisadhakam sabdamatram, mere sound as the means of praise: it may also have its ordinary sense, the passage referring to the ancient nomenclature of cattle, as uttered by the Angirāsas, as Ehi surabhi, gugglu, gandhini, &c.

2 There are twenty-one metres of the Vedas.

19. May I glorify the present radiant Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the supporter of the universe, most deserving of adoration, without milking the pure udder (of the cow), without the purified food of the Soma offered in libation.¹

20. May Agni be the *Aditi*² of all those to whom sacrifice is offered; may he be the guest of all men: receiving the (sacrificial) food of the devout,³ may he, to whom all is known, be the bestower of felicity.

~~~~~

SUKTA II. (II)

THE deity and Rishi as before; the metre is Trishtubh.

HE who has been placed immortal among the mortals the observer of truth, a deity triumphant among gods the invoker of the gods, the most diligent sacrificer Agni: he has been placed (upon the altar) to lighten the ceremony by his (lustre), and for the elevation of the worshipper, through oblations (in heaven).

2. Agni, son of strength, generated to day at this our rite, as intermediate between both (gods and man)

1 According to the scholiast, this implies that no offering is made to Agni on the occasion; praise alone is addressed to him.

2 May he be the cherisher of the gods as if he were Aditi their mother; or Aditi may mean the earth, that is, their stay or support: Mahidhara, on this verse, Yajur-Veda, xxxiii. 16, explains it etymologically; without a defect, yasya khandanam nasti, adina, not mean or base.

3 Devanam ava avrinanah, according to Sayana, is participating in the sacrificial food of the worshippers: Mahidhara explains it, delivering the oblations offered to the gods, i.e. through fire.

4 Or among mortal organs of sense, Agni being that of speech: agreeably to the text, Agnir-vag-bhutva mukham pravisat.

thou proceedest, the invoker (of the gods), harnessing, graceful Agni, thy robust, vigorous, and resplendent steeds.

3. I celebrate the ruddy, food-bestowing, water-shedding, and swifter-than-thought-going, steeds of him who is the truth: harnessing the brilliant pair (to thy chariot), thou passest between the deities of whom thou art, and human worshippers.

4. Possessed Agni, of good steeds, an excellent car and abundant wealth, do thou, amidst these (worshippers) bring to the man who offers worthy oblations, Aryaman, Varuna, Mitra, Vishnu, the Maruts, or the Aswins.

5. May the sacrifice, Agni, be productive of cows, of sheep, of horses, and, celebrated by thy worshipper, aided by the priests, be ever uninterrupted: may it, mighty Agni, be productive of food and progeny, long continued, affluent, wide based, and held in full assembly<sup>2</sup>

6. Thou art the munificent recompenser<sup>3</sup> of that man who sweating (with toil) brings thee fuel, and for thy service causes his head to ache: protect him, Agni, from every one that seeks to do him evil.

7. May a son, firm in (devotion) and liberal (in offerings), be born to him who presents (sacrificial) food to thee when needing food, who gives thee constantly

1 Antariyase yushmāschadevan visa a cha martan, thou goest between, you the gods, and men; you, is specified from Agni's being a divinity: he goes to men to receive the oblation, and to the gods, of whom he is one, to bear it to them.

2 Sabhavan, in the presence of spectators, upadrashtri sabharupayuktah.

3 Swatavan payuh is explained, dhanavan palayitri, wealthy preserver.

the exhilarating Soma Juice), who welcomes thee as a guest, and devoutly kindles thee in his mansion.

8. Preserve from sin the liberal sacrificer who glorifies thee morning and evening, and, presenting oblations, does what is acceptable to thee in his own abode, like a horse with golden caparisons.<sup>1</sup>

9. Let not him who makes offerings to thee, Agni who art immortal, who with uplifted ladle pours out oblations repeating thy praise, ever want riches, and let not the wickedness of a malevolent (foe) circumvent him.

10. May that prayer be agreeable to thee, Agni, who art a gracious deity, (which is uttered) by the man with whose well-conducted sacrifice thou art well pleased youngest (of the gods), of whose (rites) when worshipping thee may we be the promoters.

11. May the wise Agni discriminate between virtue and vice, between (virtuous and wicked) men as a (groom distinguishes between) the strong and weak backs (of horses) :<sup>2</sup> enrich us with wealth accompanied

1 Aswo na swe dame hemyavaa, that is, according to the scholiast, suvarna-nirmita-kakshyavan, having a girth made of gold, applying the epithet to the horse, although separated by swe dame, in his own house.

2 This passage is elliptically and metaphorically expressed, chittim, achittim, chinavadvi-vidvan may the sage (Agni) distinguish that which is to be known, chittim jñatavyam puṇyam, or virtue, and achittim achetaniyam, not to be thought of, or pāpam, sin; or chittim and achittim may be explained by jñānam and ajñānam, knowledge and ignorance: martan, mortals or men, has no epithets; the scholiast supplies them: the comparison runs, prishthera vitā vrijinī cha, like backs bright, kāntāḥ and ill-bearing durvaṇi for the horses and the groom, (aswapāla), we are indebted to Sāyana.

by virtuous offspring : be bountiful to the liberal giver ; shun him who gives not.

12. The unreviled sages abiding in the dwellings of man have glorified the sage (Agni) ; therefore, lord of sacrifice, thou mayest proceed with swift-moving feet to behold the admirable and marvelous deities.

13. Resplendent Agni, youngest of the gods, the satisfier of (the desires of) men, who art easily to be conducted (to the altar), bestow joy-yielding and abundant wealth for his preservation upon the worshipper who praises and worships thee and offers thee libations.

14. Therefore, Agni, when we labour for thee with hands and feet, and all our members, the pious performers of rites, (the Angirasas), exercise their arms in the work (of attrition), as wheel wrights fabricate a car.

15. May we seven priests first in order engender from the maternal dawn the worshippers of the creator (Agni) ; may we Angirasas be the sons of heaven,<sup>1</sup> and radiant, divide the wealth-containing mountain.<sup>2</sup>

1 Diwasputrâ angiraso bhavema, or may we, the sons of heaven, be Angirasas ; or, according to the scholiast, bhuti-mantah, possessed of superior power : according to a text cited by the commentator, which, however, is not very explicit, the Angirasas are the sons of Aditya, angirasam adityaputratwam amnayate : the text is tasya yad retah prathamam udadipyata tad asau adityo abhavat, ityupakramya ye angara asans-te angiraso abhavan, that which was his seed was first manifested as Aditya, thence, in succession, those which were the cinders became the Angirasas : see vol. 1. p. 4.

2 Adrim rujema dhaninam, may allude to the rock in which the cows were hidden, or adri may be rendered loud (megha), by the disruption of which rain is made to fall.

16. Thus, Agni, our excellent and ancient fore-athers, celebrators of holy sacrifice, proceeded to (the region of) pure light,<sup>1</sup> and, reciting prayers and dispersing gloom, they made manifest the purple (kine).

17. Performers of good works, brilliant and devout, the praises of the gods have freed their birth from impurity, as (a smith heats) iron : exciting Agni, elevating Indra, and wandering about (in search), they have gone to the vast (hidden) herd of cattle.

18. Fierce Agni when (Indra) proclaimed the near presence of the herd of the kine of the divine (Angirasas) as a herd of cattle in a well stored stall,<sup>2</sup>

1 Suchid ayan didhitim ; diptam sthanam tejas chagachchhan : Mahidhara, Yajur, xix. 69, explains this by ravi mandalam, the orb of the sun, and gives a different interpretation to the last phrases ; may we, dividing the rays of the sun, and piercing the earth (with sacrificial posts and the like), also proceed by the path of the gods, or to heaven : it is rather a bold interpretation, however, to convert apavran, the third plur.
 of the third preterite, into apavrinumah, first plur. of the present with the sense of the potential : this and the three following verses occur in the Atharva-Veda, xvii. 3, 21, 24.

2 Ayutheva kshumati pasvoh, akhyat devanam yaj-janimanti, is, literally, like a herd in food-possessing animals, he had said of the gods that which birth is nigh : janima, Sayana interprets go-sangham, and makes out the rest as above ; or he proposes an alternative, not more intelligible : the second half of the stanza is equally obscure as the first ; martanam chid urvasirakripran
 -ridhe chid arya uparasya ayoth : urvasih is rendered by Sāyana, praja, progeny, as if it was the nominative, instead of being the accus. plural ; and if so, there is no nom. to akripran, were made able : the word is remarkable, and is made more so by Sayana's reference to Yaska, Nir. v. I, where the word means as usual, Apsaras, and the etymology is urvabhya asnuta, or urubhyam asnuta, who pervades or proceeds from the thigh, conformably to the Pauranik legend of her birth from the thigh the progeny of mortals were thereby enabled (to perform pious acts), and the master of the family rendered competent to (provide for) the increase of posterity and (the support of) dependants.

19. We have worshipped thee (Agni), and have thereby become the performers of a good work, adoring the full and variously delighting Agni, the beautiful lustre of the radiant divinity, when the brilliant dawns have arrayed (themselves) in light.

20. Creator, Agni, we have repeated these thy praises to thee who art all-wise ; do thou accept them blaze aloft ; make us opulent : do thou who art worshipped by many bestow upon us ample wealth.

SUKTA III. (III).

THE deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

SECURE Agni, the king of sacrifice, the afflicter (of foes), the invoker (of the gods), the distributor of food through heaven and earth, the golden formed, for your protection, before (surprised by) sudden death.<sup>1</sup>

2. This is the altar which we have decorated for thee, as a wife attached to her husband puts on elegant garments (to gratify him) : maturer of good works, sit down in our presence invested (with radiance), while they flames incline towards thee.

of Narayana see also the Vikramorvasi of Kalidasa, which shews the legend to be of some antiquity.

1 Pura tanayithnor achittat, lit. before the unconsciousness of the thunderbolt ; implying, according to the scholiast, a state of unconsciousness, or death, as sudden as if the work of the thunderbolt.

3. Repeat, oh priest, the praise, the prayer, to the attentive, the affable Agni, the beholder of man, the giver of felicity, the divine, the immortal ; to him whom the effuser of the libation, like the (bruising) stone, adores aloud.

4. Thou, Agni, presidest over this our rite : do thou, who art cognizant of truth, and the author of good works, recognise this our adoration, whenever these exhilarating prayers (are addressed) to thee, whenever friendly relations with thee are (established) in our dwelling.

5. Why, Agni, dost thou reproach us (for our sin) to Varuna, why to the heaven ? what is our offence ? why repeat it to the bountiful Mitra, to earth, to Aryaman, or to Bhaga ?

6. Why repeat it when exalted in holy ceremonies ? why tell it to the mighty, benevolent, circumambient, truthful wind ? why, Agni, to earth, why to man-destroying Rudra ?<sup>1</sup>

7. Why to the great and nutriment-conveying Pushan ? why to Rudra, the object of worship, the giver of the oblation (to the gods) ? why to the many-hymned Vishnu ? why tell our sin to the extensive year ?<sup>2</sup>

1 Rudraya nri-ghne, the man-slayer, Rudra : the scholiast says, of wicked men.

2 Sarave vrihatyai : saruh, sarat, samvatsarah, or saru, may mean nirriti, the female personification of evil, who, by some unaccountable inadvertence, I have turned, in a former passage, into a male deity : see vol. i. p. 107, verse 6 : nittiti does occur, however, in the masculine ; as in the scholia on the Taittiriya Yajush, i. 2, II : nirritir yajanavighati rakshasah, an evil spirit disturbing sacrifice Cal. Ed. p. 405 : and in the comment of Bharatasena on the word nairrita in the Amara kosha, i. I, 56, he gives nirriti as synonymous with nairrita ; nirritir eva nairrita

8. Maruts ? why, even when asked, to the mighty sun ? why repeat it to Aditi, or to the swift wind ? fulfil, all-knowing Jatavedas, (the worship) of heaven.

9. I solicit, Agni, the milk of the cow, essential for the sacrifice yet immature, she possesses the sweet and ripe fluid) : black though she be, yet with her white nutritious milk she maintains mankind in existence.

10. The male Agni, the showerer (of benefits), has been sprinkled by the genuine sustaining milk : the giver of food proceeds unswerving (from his course), and the sun, the shedder of rain, has milked the white (fluid) of the udder (of the firmament).<sup>1</sup>

11. By the sacrifice, the Angirases, rending the mountain asunder, have thrown it open, and returned with the cows : the leaders (of holy rites) have arrived happily at the dawn, and the sun was manifest as Agni was engendered.<sup>2</sup>

12. By sacrifice, Agni, the divine rivers, immortal, unobstructed, continue perpetually to flow with sweet waters, like a horse that is being urged in his speed.

13. Go not ever, Agni, to the sacrifice of any one who injures us ; nor to that of a malevolent neighbour ; nor to that of an (unnatural) relation : accept not the due (oblation) from an insincere brother : let us not derive enjoyment from the enemy of a friend.

iti va, citing the Ratna-kosha in confirmation, nairritas tu khasaputro rakshaso nirritis-cha sah, Nairrita, the son of Khasa a Rakshasa, he is also Nirriti : in the passage of the first Ashtaka adverted to, the epithets are feminine, and the change of sex is unwarranted.

1 Duduhe pris'nir-udhas : Pris'ni here, according to the comment, is a synonyme of Surya.

2 Alluding to the early morning sacrifice with fire, probably instituted by the Angirases.

14 Agni, worthily worshipped, conservator, conciliated (by our offerings), protect us with thy protections : enlighten us : entirely extirpate our sin ; overcome the great and exulting Rākshasas.

15. Be propitiated, Agni, by these hymns ; accept, hero, these (sacrificial) viands (presented) with praises be pleased, Angiras, by our prayers : may the adoration addressed to the gods exalt thee.

16. Agni, creator, to thee who art wise, acquainted with the past, I address, oh sage, these soliciting mysterious words, (these) ever to be recited poems, together with praises and prayers.

SUKTA IV. (IV).*

THE deity is Agni, the Rakshas-slayer ; the Rishi and metre as before.

PUT forth they strength, Agni, as a fowler spreads a capacious snare : proceed like a king attended by his followers on his elephant :<sup>a</sup> thou art the scatterer (of they foes) : following the swift-moving host<sup>b</sup> consume the Rākshasas with thy fiercest flames.

---

1 Nivachana (ni) kavyani ; nitaram vaktavyani, kavibhih kritani, those which are made by poets ever to be recited.

2 Rājevamavan ibhena : the latter (ibha) may mean fearless, (host understood). gatabhayena, or, as usual, hastina : ama has also different interpretations, a minister, for amatya, or ama, an associate ; or sickness, inflicting it on the foe : the verse occurs in the Nirukta, vi. 13, and is explained as in the text ; and again in the Yajush, xiii. 9, with, upon the whole, a similar explanation.

3 Trīshwim anu prasitim drunanah is explained by Sayana, kshipraga manim prakrishtam senam, anugachchhan : Yaska puts the two first into the third case, trishvya anu prasitya, but does

2. Thy swift and errant flames descend (on every side) : fierce shining with vigour consume (the foe) : scatter, Agni, with the ladle (of oblation), scorching flames, and sparks, and brands.

3. Do thou, who art most rapid, direct thy (flames) against opposing (rays),<sup>1</sup> and, unresisted, become the protector of this thy people against the calumniator who is remote or who is nigh : let no malevolent (foe) prevail against us (who are) thy worshippers.

4. Sharp-weaponed Agni, rise up ; spread wide (thy flames) against (the Rakshasas) ; entirely consume the foes : blazing Agni, burn down him who acts as an enemy towards us<sup>2</sup> like a piece of dry timber.

5. Rise up, Agni, chastise those who overpower us ; manifest thy divine energies ; slacken the strong (bow strings) of the malignant kings ; destroy those (who are hostile), whether kindred or unallied.<sup>3</sup> not give any meaning to the latter : the first he explains quick : Sāyana also gives the reading, and explains the noun by santataya gatyā, with extended or continuous march : Mahidhara gives prasiti the import it had in the first part of the verse, net, a snare : this and the three following verses occur in the Yajush, XIII. 10, 13 : the explanation occasionally slightly varies.

1 Prati spas'o visrija : spas'ah is explained by Sayana, parabadhakan rasmir, or he says it may mean charan, spies, sent to determine between true and false, satyānritavivekartham ; so Madhidhara interprets it, pranidhin, but he understands [by it binders, prisoners, bandhanakritah.

2 Aratim chakre may also mean who annuls or prevents our donation, one who makes a gift no gift.

3 Jamin-ajamin, bandhum abandhum ; or it may mean whether formerly overcome or not : Mahidhara explains it punaruktam apunaruktam, repeated or not repeated ; or punah punastaditam ajaditam, repeatedly chastised or not chastised.

6. He experiences thy good favour, youngest (of the gods), who offers praise to thee, a Brahman, coming quickly (to bestow felicity):<sup>1</sup> to him are all prosperous day and wealth (of cattle) and treasures: do thou, as the lord of sacrifice, shine upon his dwelling.<sup>2</sup>

7. May the liberal man ever be prosperous who propitiates thee with constant oblations and praises: may all the days in his arduous life be prosperous, and may this (his) sacrifice be (productive of reward).

8. I reverence thy good favour, Agni: may this reiterated and resounding hymn convey due praise to thy presence: may we be possessed of good horses and good cars,<sup>3</sup> that we may pay thee homage; and do thou daily bestow upon us riches

9. May every one of his own accord diligently worship thee, shining in the (hall) morning and evening, every day: thus, sporting in our dwellings, (enjoying) the wealth of (hostile) man, may we with happy hearts worship thee.

10. Thou, Agni, art the protector of him who, possessed of good horses and a golden car, approaches thee with a chariot laden with wealth: thou art the friend of him who gratifies thee by the due performance of hospitality to thee.

11. Invoker (of the gods), youngest (of the deities); possessed of excellent wisdom, through the alliance (with thee produced) by holy texts, which came to

1 Irvate brahmane: we have no explanation of the latter except parivridhaya, to the greatly augmented.

2 Aryo vi duro abhidyaute, is also, as Sayana observes, differently rendered by some, he the worshipper especially shines over his house, aryo yajamano grihan abhi viseshena dyotate.

3 This according to the scholiast, is metaphorical for may we, being with sons, grandsons, and the like, worship thee.

me from my father Gotama, I demolish the powerful (demons) : do thou, who art the humbler (of foes), be cognizant of our praises.

12. All-wise Agni, may thy protecting (rays, unslumbering, alert, provitious, unslothful, benign and, unwearied, co-operating, having taken their place (at this sacrifice), preserve us.

13. Those thy protecting (rays), Agni, which, beholding (what had chanced), preserved the blind son of Mamatâ from misfortune :<sup>1</sup> he, knowing all things, cherished those benvolent (rays),<sup>2</sup> and his enemies, intending to destroy him, wrought him no harm,

14. Agni, who art freed from shame, by thee we are made opulent ; by thee we are protected ; may we, through thy guidance, attain abundant food : cherish of truth, destroy both (sorts of calumniators), those who are nigh, those who are far off, and in due course fulfil (our desires).

15. May we propitiate thee, Agni, by this fuel : accept the praise that is recited by us : consume the unadoring Rakshasas ; thou who art to be honoured by (thy) friends, preserve us from the reproach of the oppressor and the reviler,

1 Allusion is made according to the commentator, to the well known filthy legend of the birth of Dirghatamas, who, it is here said by Sayana, recovered his sight by worshipping Agni

2 Raraksha tan sukrito viswavedas : it is not very clear whether viswavedas applies to Agni or to Dirghatamas : Sayana, by inserting bhavan, your honour, adopts the former, but it seems questionable.

ADHYAYA V.

SUKTA V. (V).

THE deity is Agni as Vaiswanara; the Rishi Vāmadeva; the metre Trishtubh.

How may we present rejoicing (fit offerings) to Agni, the showerer (of benefits); to Vaiswânara, he, who bright with great lustre, sustains the heaven, with his entire vast and insupportable (bulk), as a pillar (sustains a roof).

2. Reproach not the divine (Agni), who, accepting the oblation, has given this wealth to me, his mortal (worshipper) of mature (intellect); Agni, who is wise, immortal, discriminating, (who is) Vaiswanara, chief conductor (of rites), the mighty.

3. May Agni, filling both (the middling and most excellent, condition),<sup>1</sup> bright shining, of manifold vigour, the showerer of (benefits), the possessor of affluence (who comprehends) by (his) wisdom the mysterious sacred hymn, as (they track) the footsteps of a (missing) cow, reveal (the sense) to me.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Sama-mahi-padam na goḥ apagulham vividwan agnir mahyam predu vochan manisham: the detached position of several of these words makes the sense somewhat uncertain; manisham, the scholiast connects with Sama, and explains it jnatavyam, what is to be known: apagulham atyantarahasyam he would seem to attach to padam, but both renderings are perhaps questionable.

4. May the sharp-toothed Agni, possessed of excellent wealth, consume with his fierce radiance those (adversaries) who injure the firm and valued glories of the sapient Varuna and Mitra.

5. Like women who have no brethren, going (about from their own to their father's house), women adverse to their lords going astray, so the wicked, false (in thought), false (in speech),<sup>1</sup> they give birth to this deep abyss (of hell).

6. Purifier, Agni, bestow on me, not neglecting thy worship, this acceptable and vast (wealth), like a heavy load on a feeble (bearer), together with invigorating food; (wealth), secure, abundant tangible, and consisting of the seven elements.<sup>2</sup>

7. My our (self)-purifying praise, suited to his glory, and accompanied by worship, quickly attain to that omniform (Vaiswanara)<sup>4</sup> whose swift-ascending brilliant (orb) is stationed on the east of the earth, to mount, like the sun, above the immoveable heaven.<sup>5</sup>

8. What objection (can be offered) to this my assertion, that they affirm that the milk of the kine, which (the milkers) obtain like water, is placed in

1 Anritah, manasasatyarahita; asatyah, vachikasatyarahitah.

2 Idam padam ajanata gabhram, they engender this deep station, that is according to Sâyana, narakasthânam.

3 Saptadhatu, the scholiast says, means seven sorts of animals agreeably to the text, sapta gramyah pasavah saptaranyah, seven tame, seven wild animals.

4 Vriswanara is here said to be understood in the sense of the sun upon the authority of Yaska or according to different opinions the word expresses Agni as lightning, or aditya.

5 Sasasya charman adhi prisneh the scholiast explains swapatâ iva nischalasya dyulokasya upari charanâya, for going above the immoveable heaven like the sun.

concealment by Vaiswanara), and cherishes the excellent and valued expanse of the wide earth.

9. I recognise this adorable assemblage of the great (deities),<sup>1</sup> which from of old the milk-shedding cow affects, shining above the region of water, (the firmament), in secret ; swift gliding, swift moving.

10. Then, radiant in association with the parents, (heaven and earth), he is awakened (to drink) the agreeable secretion of the cow, and the tongue of the assiduous (performer of holy rites),<sup>2</sup> the resplendent showerer (of benefits), approaching the excellent station of the maternal (cow), seeks to drink the milk.

11. Interrogated with respect, I declare the truth, that this (wealth is acquired), Jatavedas, by the praise of thee : thou rulest over it, (over) all that (it may be), the wealth that is in heaven or on earth.

12. What is the value of this (wealth) to us ? what is the desirable (end) to which we rush like swift (chargers) to the battle ? when for us will the divine dawns, the brides of the immortal (sun), overspread (the world) with light.

14. (Men are) not satisfied by unproductive, frivolous, inconclusive, scanty speech ; then what, Agni, do they here say to thee ? devoid of the implements (of worship) let them suffer from distress.<sup>3</sup>

1 Mahamanikam, the solar orb, according to the scholiast identified with vaiswanara suryamandalam vaiswanara.

2. The text has only prayatasya, which the commentator amplifies into ahavaniyâdirupena niyatasya vaiswânarasya, of vaiswanara active in the form of the ahavaniya, fire and the rest.

3 That is, if they pretend to worship Agni without the oblation, and other materials of a burnt offering, they cannot expect his favour.

15. For the prosperity of this (institutor of the rite) the host (of the flames) of the kindled (Agni), the showerer (of benefits), the giver of dwellings, has blazed in the hall (of sacrifice) clothed in radiance, beautiful in semblance, and glorified by many, he shines like a man with opulence.<sup>1</sup>

SUKTA VI. (VI.)

The deity is Agni, the Rishi and metre as before.

AGNI, ministrant of the sacrifice, do thou who art entitled to worship, be above us in this offering to the gods ; for thou prevailest over all that is desirable ;<sup>2</sup> thou inspirest the praise of the worshipper.

2. The unperplexed, the sagacious, exhilarating Agni, the ministrant priest, has been placed amongst men for (the celebration of) sacrifices : like the sun, he spreads light above, and props the smoke above the sky like a pillar.

3. The ladle filled (with butter) is prepared : prompt (in act), opulent (with the oblation), the multiplying (priest), conducting (the worship) of the gods, circumambulates (the fire) : the newly-trimmed post is set up, the impending shining axe falls upon the victims.

4. When the sacred grass is strewn and the fire is kindled, the Adhwaryu rises, propitiating (the gods), and Agni, the offerer of the oblation, ancient and mul-tipling (the offering,) thrice circumambulates (the victim) like a keeper of cattle.<sup>1</sup>

5. Agni, the sacrificer, the exhilarator, the sweet-spoken, the object of sacrifice, moving measuredly, circumambulates (the victim) of his own (accord); the bright (rays) of him (fed) with (sacrificial) food, spread around :<sup>2</sup> all the regions are alarmed when he blazes.

6. Bright-shining Agni, beautiful and auspicious is the semblance of thee, who art terrible and wide-spreading, for (the nights) hide not thy splendour with darkness, nor do the malignant (spirits) inflict any injury on thy person.

7. Of whom, progenitor (of mankind), the benevolence is never checked; whose parents need not urge him to exertion;<sup>3</sup> so that the well-satisfied, purifying Agni shines like a friend amongst men, the descendants of Manu.

8. Agni, whom the twice five sisters<sup>4</sup> dwelling amongst men, the descendants of Manu, have engen-

1 The expression is not very clear, Paryagnistrivishyati, Agni goes round, having thrice returned, trir-avritya paryeti, or trirhi paryagnih kriyate, Agni is thrice made around, which would imply that the fire was thrice circumambulated: the next stanza, however, clearly shews that it is Agni who goes round, either the altar or the victim: Sâyana says the latter, parito gachchhati pasum.

2 Asya vaiino na soka may also be rendered aswaiva diptayo dravanti, his rays spread fast like horses.

3 Na matara pitara nu chid ishtau, nor mother and father, i. e. heaven and earth, are quickly powerful in urging him: yasya presane kshipram eva na prabhavatah, is Sâyana's interpretation.

10. Those, they rays, Agni, triumphant, wide-spreading, radiant, adorable, go like hawk-faced horses (to their goal), loud-sounding like the company of the Maruts.

11. Well-kindled Agni, for thee prayer has been composed :<sup>3</sup> may (the priest) propitiate (thee) by (his) praise : the (sacrificer) offers worship ; bestow upon us manifold (wealth) : desiring (riches), men sit down adoring Agni, the invoker of the gods, the glorifier of mankind.

The deity and Rishi as before ; the meter of the first stanza is Jagati of the five following Anustubh, and of the rest Trishtubh.

3. Contemplating thee in every dwelling, truthful, intelligent, (brilliant with sparks) like the sky with stars, the perfecter of all sacrifices.

4. Men have brought, for the sake of all people, the swift messenger of the worshipper (to the gods),<sup>3</sup> who (rules) over all mankind, the manifest, the resplendent.<sup>4</sup>

5. They (the worshippers) have seated him in his due order, the invoker (of the gods), the intelligent, the agreeable, the purifyingly-radiant, the performer of frequent sacrifice, (brilliant) with seven flames.

6. Him, abiding in the maternal (waters) and in the woods, loved, yet unapproached,<sup>5</sup> wonderful, hidden

1 According to Mahidhara, Yajur-Veda, III. 15, the Agni here intended is the Ahavaniya which is kindled before the Dakshina.

2 Apnavano bhrigabah : according to Sayana, Apnavanah is the name of a Rishi of the family of Bhrigu : Mahidhara makes it the plur. apravanah, and other Rishis, and the Bhrigus he says it may also mean putravantah, having sons, an epithet of the Bhrigus.

3 Dutam vivaswatah : the second is explained manushyasya yajamanasya, of the man, of the worshipper.

4 Bhrigavanam-bhriguvad-acharantam, going like Bhrigu, that is, dipyamanam-ityartha, shining, or being kindled.

5 Vitam-kantam ; asritam, dahabhayadasevitam, bright or loved, not honoured or served, through fear of being burnt.

in a cave, endowed with knowledge, seeking (oblations from any quarter).<sup>1</sup>

7. Whom, when they desist from slumber, the devout propitiate in the abode of water at every sacrifice: the mighty Agni, to whom oblations are to be offered with reverence, who truthful always, accepts the sacrifice.

8 Thou, who art all-knowing understandest the functions of a messenger (of the gods) at the sacrifice: well informed of both heaven and earth, and the intermediate (firmament), and a most intelligent, ancient, and amplifying envoy, thou goest up the ascents of heaven.

9. Dark is the path of thee who art bright; the light is before thee; thy moving radiance is the chief of (all luminous) bodies: when the present (worshippers) take up the germ (in the sticks of attrition) thou art speedily generated, and becomest indeed the messenger (of the sacrifice).

10. The light of the speedily-generated is visible, and when the wind fans the flame, he (Agni) spreads his blazing tongue amongst the trees, and with his (glowing) teeth consumes the standing (fuel his) food.

11. When quickly, with rapid (radiance), he has carried off his food, the mighty Agni makes (himself) the fleet messenger (of the worshipper); consuming (the fuel), he allies himself with the force of the wind, and as (a horseman) urges his fast steed, so the rapid going Agni invigorates and urges (his flames).

<sup>1</sup> Kuchid arthinam: the first is for kwachit, anywhere, anyhow; seeking fuel, butter, etc., samidājyadiahavish swikurvantam.

SUKTA VIII. (VIII.)

THE deity and Rishi before the metro is Gāyatri.

PROPITIATE thee with praise, the messenger (of the gods), the omniscient, the bearer of oblations, the immortal, the chief sacrificer.

2. The mighty one knows how to bestow the (desired) wealth (upon the worshipper); he knows the ascents of heaven : may he bring the gods hither.

3. He, the divine (Agni), knows how the gods are to be revered : to the sincere (worshipper) in his dwelling he gives the wealth that is desired.

4. He is the invoker (of the gods), comprehending the deity of (their) messenger ; and, knowing the ascent of the sky, he travels between earth and heaven.

5. May we be they who propitiate Agni with gifts of oblations, and who, cherishing him, feed him with fuel.

6. They are renowned for riches and for progeny, who, venerating Agni, offer him oblations.

7. May riches, envied by many, devolve upon us day by day, and (abundant) food await us.

8. May the wise Agni entirely obviate by his power the removable (ills) of men, the descendants of Manu.

---

1 Atikshiprena vidhyati, is explained kshepyanyevavinasayitum arhani duritāni atisayena nasayatu, may he entirely destroy the evils which are capable of being destroyed.

SUKTA IX. (IX).

THE deity, Rishi, and metre as before.

AGNI, make us happy, for thou art mighty,<sup>1</sup> thou) w comest to this devout man to sit down on the saci grass.

2. May that Agni, who is difficult to overco who is immortal, who is pre-eminent among men t descendants of Manu, become the messenger of all t gods.

3. He is conveyed into the sacrificial hall as t
Hotri to be adored at sacrifices, or as the Potri<sup>2</sup> he si down (on the sacred grass).

4. Agni may be the officiating priest at the sacri fice,<sup>3</sup> or the master of the house in the sacrificial chamber, or he sits down as the Brahman.

5. Thou, who art the director (of the ceremonial),<sup>4</sup> acceptest the oblations of devoutly-worshipping man the descendants of Manu.

<sup>3</sup> Uta gna agnir adhwara: the meaning of gna is, usually devapatni, a wife of a deity, agreeably to which, one rendering suggested by Savana is agnir yaje devapatnir yajati, Agni worships the wives of the gods at the sacrifice; or, as an alternative, gna as equivalent to gachchhan, going, may designate the adhwaryu, who moves about at the ceremonial.

<sup>4</sup> Upavakta, is the priest who pronounces the formulæ of sacrifice, or he may be the Brahma, or the Sadasya, directing what is to be done
